You have imagined the story of the fool; now listen to the story of the gutter, a story utterly foreign to the understanding of people who live in comfortable homes and known to the denizens of the roofs only by hearsay. Twenty thousand people on the hot nights snored upon the stoops, sweltered in ash bins, slept in the gutters of New York's streets. The cleansing processes of civilization long since brushed away the foul and dirty pest places known as the Five Points, and societies devoted to the prevention of cruelty to children and to the children's aid have done much in their good evangelical ways, but there are now streets upon streets in this fair metropolis on which stand rickety buildings, dirty, unkempt, uncared for, filthy beyond description, where crime goes hand in hand with suffering, and poverty is the bed fellow of utter wretchedness and despair. Within an eighth of a mile of the city hall are many huge buildings called tenements, in which scores of families live, breed and die. Dirt and squalor are their normal condition; untidiness, foul odors and indecency are things familiar to young eyes and the every day surroundings of old age.

WINTER AND SUMMER.

In winter time it is possible for the degraded creatures who burrow in these kennels to exist, because the more crowded they are the warmer they are, and in winter the two things most needed are shelter and heat. Utterly reckless as to appearances, careless of what may happen to one another in the way of immorality, with no prejudices in favor of clean faces or tidy linen, these families live together as bugs do, literally rolling one over the other, content so long as their lowest physical necessities are even partially met. In the summer all this is changed. Shelter, to be sure, is desirable, but there are conditions of caloric utterly unbearable, which even these people, unaccustomed to ease or comfort of any sort or kind, insist upon, so far as they are able to control affairs.

It requires no very great stretch of imagination to understand that the close, unventilated rooms in which these people burrow, where children are born, the sick are cared for, the dead lie waiting burial, where cooking and washing and a thousand and one domestic economies necessary in every household, however humble, are carried on, cannot be very desirable places for any one to sleep in during the frightful nights of torridity. What, then, must they be when not only one, but a dozen, are expected to find nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep, in the contracted, foul smelling, almost loathsome places in which these people stay?

SWARMING ON THE STREETS.

They cannot go to the roof; it is already occupied. So they swarm upon the streets. First come, first served, is their motto. As soon as the evening shades prevail these creatures emerge half clothed, dirty, comfortless to the last degree, and wind their way through the crooked passages, down the stairways to the narrow street. The steps are soon taken possession of. Every point where a person can rest his weary body is occupied. Far in the evening hours, when children of people in moderate circumstances are asleep, these streets are noisy, echoing with the cries and sports, the fights, the broils, the romps of wretched little children, whose dirty faces are stained with tears, to whom a crust is a banquet and a pillow an unheard of luxury.

A walk through one of these streets at 11 o'clock of a frightful midsummer night would do much to allay the discontented fever which eats the very heart of so many of New York's well to do people. Children are seen there by the hundreds who have not been in bed for weeks, who have not changed their clothing in months, to whom a good wash would be a revelation more absolute than the most startling sentence in the apocalypse. Curly headed boys and girls, with bright eyes and sturdy figures, literally romp in the street and pelt each other with its dirt. Miserable, big headed, weak eyed, pallid faced, wasting babes lie upon the laps of slatternly women and roll their heads from side to side in pitiable weakness. All manner of costumes can there be seen. Barefooted men and women, half grown boys and girls, with but a single garment between them and the outer air, disappointed looking men and disheartened looking women, form the motley groups of every possible age and every imaginable condition of trouble and distress. —Joe Howard's Letter in Detroit Free Press.

Ethics of the Barber Shop.

"Bay rum?"

So spoke a barber in a well known shop on Nassau street. The proprietor glanced up quietly and significantly; but said nothing. When the customer had gone, the barber was called to one side, and received, as far as could be gathered from the whispered tones, a sharp admonition.

"I never allow my employes," said the proprietor in response to an inquiry, "to ask my customers whether they want anything, and I flatter myself that this is one of the methods by which I have built up a business. A customer is pretty sure to know what he wants, and if he comes in for a ten cent shave he does not care to have it advertised that he don't feel able to indulge in a fifteen cent operation. Even if, in order to keep up appearances, he says 'Yes,' in reply to 'Bay rum?' he grudges the five cents and will avoid the shop afterward. Yes, sir, I believe the main secret of my success is that none of my barbers are allowed to say 'Bay rum?'"

"Don't you lose some custom, that way, of people who would take bay rum if reminded of it?"

"I don't think so. If the customer wants bay rum he is pretty sure to have it in mind, and to say so, and then if he wants it all the time he will say so."—New York Sun.

The Civil War.

Some time after the war Gen. Crittenden met three ex-Confederate officers at dinner, and they became very friendly.

"Major," said Gen. Crittenden to one of them, "where were you born?"

"Well," said the major, getting a little red, "I was born, sir, in Nantucket, Mass., but you see, I lived ten years in the south, and I married a southern lady, and as all my interests were in the south, of course I fought for them."

"And where were you born?" he asked the second.

"Well, sir, I was born in Nantucket, Mass., but I'd lived in the south twenty years, and of course"——

"I see," said the general, turning to the third. "Colonel, where were you born?"

"I was born in Nantucket, Mass., too, but I'd been thirty years in the south, and"——

"That's curious, isn't it?"

"Tell me, general," said one of them, "where were you born?"

"Well, I was born in Huntwell, Ala., but I lived in the north for many years, and I fought for the Union."

Then they drank all around.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Brave Girl.

"I think ice cream is delicious, George," she said; "I just love it."

"But don't you know that it's very dangerous?" inquired George, uneasily.

"Yes, I suppose it is dangerous, but I'm no coward, George."—New York Sun.

MARRIAGE BETWEEN COUSINS.

Scientific Opinions on Both Sides of the Question—An Anxious Inquirer.

This inquiry as to the effects of such marriages on their offspring comes from a friend in Oregon:

"Is not the common belief that marriages between first cousins are objectionable somewhat like the belief in the effect of the moon upon planting of crops, shrinking of meats, etc., merely coincidences, and not caused by the moon? I am aware, of course, that family traits must be more pronounced in the children, but where both sides are mentally and physically sound I can't see why such marriages should have the tendency to produce unsound children."

Though the prejudice against such marriages has a sounder basis than mere superstition, their evil effects upon offspring seem to have been exaggerated, except in instances where there is a family predisposition to serious disease. In 1871, when the English census was to be taken, Sir John Lubbock, Dr. Playfair and other scientific men made an effort to have statistics obtained as to the prevalence and consequences of cousin marriages, but unfortunately they were defeated by a parliament which was silly enough to treat their proposition with scornful laughter. Afterward Mr. George H. Darwin, son of the great Darwin, and himself a man of much scientific reputation, undertook an investigation on his own account, though in a comparatively narrow field, and reached the conclusion that, on the average, such marriages did not produce the evil effects commonly attributed to them.

But Signor Paolo Mantegazza, a professor at Pavia, made a somewhat similar inquiry in 1868, and his deductions were that "consanguineous marriages are, on the whole, more unfavorable to the offspring than others," and that "the nearer the kinship the greater the danger," and the more so when the kinship is through the mother, "because more evil or good is heritable from the mother." Mr. Darwin himself acknowledges that the preponderance of opinion among the many authorities examined by him is that the ill effects of cousin marriages are greater than his partial investigation showed them to be. Dr. Crichton Browne, of the West Riding asylum for lunatics and idiots, expresses the opinion that "even healthy temperaments, when common to both parents, often come out as decided cachexiæ in the children;" and he goes so far as to contend that no persons of similar temperaments ought to marry. Dr. Lander Lindsay, of a Scotch asylum, thinks, on the other hand, that "the ill effects of cousin marriages, including insanity, are much less than represented." Dr. Arthur Mitchell, who, as deputy commissioner in lunacy for Scotland, made a very thorough investigation of blood relationship in marriage, comes to the conclusion that "consanguinity in parentage tends to injure the offspring."—New York Sun.

Cyrus Field and His Daughter.

Mr. Field was seated in a big chair in a down town office. He was cool and self possessed. He talked on all sorts of subjects. His quick, nervous eye was riveted upon his desk. Before him lay an open telegram. Every few minutes he would pick it up and read it. Then his face brightened. A smile played about the corners of his mouth. He seemed as merry as a sunbeam. "Ah! that is better than a check for a million, sir," he said. "Read that. Read what it says. Give it to me and I'll read it. Never mind—I know it by heart. Isn't it good news? It's the best thing I've heard in a month." With this he tossed the telegram across the table. It was from his family physician, and read: "Your daughter is very much better. She is improving very fast. She sends you her love."

And then I remembered that his daughter, his favorite child, is an invalid and has been such for years, and her father is more wrapped up in her than all else. He has taken her all over the world, to the best physicians in Europe, and Saturday and Sunday he spent a fortune in trying to get her health restored. He has been like an elder brother to her, and has lavished time and attention upon her to the exclusion of all else. Many a big financial deal has had to wait until Mr. Field stole away to his daughter's sick room, where he often acted as nurse as well as companion. It has been his habit to spend most of his leisure time in his daughter's company. He would read to her, gossip with her, tell her the news of the day, and was withal so cheerful in her presence that in her moments of greatest pain she would cry out for her father.

"Sit near me, father, I'm very sick," she would say to him; "but I shall be better soon. You are always so cheerful and so hopeful that you do me more good than drugs."

Time and again Mr. Field, a man of blood and iron, a giant in finance, a Gibraltar in determination, has sunk down disheartened in his office chair and buried his face in his hands, sobbing like a babe because of the bad reports of his daughter's health. On the very day of the late panic he walked up and down his office floor wringing his hands in a frenzy of grief. The news that day from his daughter was unfavorable, and he was afraid that he might not see her alive again. His millions were slipping through his fingers, but he gave his orders to his brokers quietly and would then resume his pacing to and fro. This child has been the apple of his eye.—New York Letter.

How Frogs Are Caught.

The simplest method to secure him is to use a common gig light and the bare hand. A frog is attracted and charmed by light. He will swim to land toward a torch. At night he rests on the tangled edges of the water, about a foot within, but always with his head toward his destination. You must not reach for him from the rear, but always catch him by the head. This sport can be continued up to 2 o'clock, but after midnight his dolorous cries have ceased. You must then find him by accident.

The red flannel catch is adapted to day as well as night sport. Anything red pleases the frog's fancy. Three hooks adjusted to a line, half hid by the flannel, and slowly let down within near reach of the frog, will induce him to leap for the object, and a simultaneous jerk of the rod will catch the game. A more scientific arrangement is to take four hooks on two-feet lines, arrange them around a cork with a string, bring the four lines together into a knot above, and affix to a rod. A shaver head plucked from the field and strung to the cork and then let down to the view of the game will make a sure catch every time. A fisherman will deem it good luck when he can blow out his light over a bag of 150 frogs, and he will say of some that they are large when they measure eighteen inches.—Philadelphia Times.

Artemus Ward's Will.

In Paris, Oxford county, Me., is a copy of the will of Artemus Ward. Paris is the birthplace of Hannibal Hamlin. Artemus Ward was a compositor on the country paper, The Oxford Observer. His will directed that his body be buried at Waterford, about ten miles from Paris. After making a few bequests, he gave the balance of his property to found a home for worn out printers, Horace Greeley to be sole trustee. As there was no balance the home was never established.—The Argonaut.

A Negro Uprising in Pittsburg.

"There was a negro uprising on Wylie street this morning," remarked the judge.

"Was there?" asked the major.

"Yes, at least I suppose there was, for as I came down I heard a colored woman scream: 'Yo thar, George Washington Snow, ef you don't git right up yo won't git no breff us.'"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

GRAND MASTER'S REPORT.

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 10, 1887.

To the Grand Lodge of Ontario, I.O.O.F.:

BRETHREN,—For the first time in many years the Grand Lodge has left the beaten track of its round among the larger cities, and by the blessing of Almighty God we are permitted to assemble in annual session in the goodly town of Peterborough.

I.—STATE OF THE ORDER.

The year just closed has been marked by slight, though steady progress. Our membership, in spite of the enormous leakage through suspensions for N. P. D., has increased to 15,156. The reports received from the D.D.G.M.'s and my own observations enable me to say that harmony and good feeling have prevailed generally throughout the jurisdiction. There have been but few appeals or disputes of any importance, and the numerous competitors who divide the field with Oddfellowship, we have reason to be thankful for the prosperity we enjoy.

I refer you to the report of the Grand Secretary for the statistics of the year.

The Grand Master proceeded to speak of the lodges that had been revived, new ones that had been instituted his official visits during the past year, of the appointments he had made, of decisions he had rendered, the claims that had been sent in for benefits, appeals that had been made, lodges of instruction that had been held and a large amount of other busines. His concluding remarks were as follows:—

I believe in the noble and exalted character of the mission of Oddfellowship. I believe it has in it yet undeveloped capabilities for good. I am anxious to see it become what the fathers of the Order intended it to be—the greatest mutual benefit organization of the world. It is animated by the true spirit of fraternity. On the floor of the lodge room social distinctions are unrecognized. No man's wealth or social position entitles him to peculiar privileges; no man's poverty debars him from attaining the highest offices. We only ask that the man who would join us shall be a good man and true, prepared to practice the principles of Oddfellowship, which are the exposition of the Golden Rule. I do not think the Order has yet reached the ultimate limit of perfection. I have endeavoured to point out some changes which, if carried out, will conduce to its improvement.

I think we need to expand our benefit system so as to make the weekly sick benefits commensurate with the increase in the cost of living. We need a more comprehensive system of district supervision, so that we may conserve the lodges already established and hold the ground we now occupy. We need such improvements in the performance of our ritual as will interest our members, and properly and favourably impress our candidates; and we need such devotion to, and enthusiasm for, the cause of Oddfellowship—which is the cause of humanity—as will make it a blessing to the community.

I hope that all the legislation at this session may lead to this end, and that harmony and brotherly love may prevail in all our deliberations; and may the benediction of the Supreme Grand Master of the Universe, the Almighty Giver of all good, rest upon our labours.

I am, yours fraternally,
JOHN ORMSBY DONOUGH,
Grand Master.

People Demand Protection—Patent Medicines.

What are they! As a general thing they are prescriptions having been used with great success by old and well-read Physicians. Thousands of invalids have been unexpectedly cured by their use, and they are the wonder and dread of Physicians and Medical College in the U. S., so much so, that Physicians graduating at Medical Colleges are required to discountenance Proprietary Medicines, as through them the country doctor loses his most profitable practice. As a manufacturer of Proprietary Medicines, Dr. G. G. Green of Woodbury, N. S., advocates most cordially,—in order to prevent the risk that the sick and afflicted are liable to, almost daily by the use of Patent Medicines put out by inexperienced persons for aggrandizment only, and the employing of inexperienced and incompetent doctors by which almost every village and town is cursed; and men claiming to be doctors who had better be undertakers, experimenting with their patients and robbing them of their money and health,—for the good of the afflicted that our government protect its people by making laws to regulate the practice of medicine by better experienced and more thoroughly educated Physicians, and thereby keep up the honor and credit of the profession, also from laws for the recording of recipts of Proprietary Medicines, under examination and decision of experienced Chemists and Physicians appointed for that purpose by the Government, before they are licensed for general use. He would most freely place the recipe of Boschee's German Syrup and Green's Ausust Flower under such laws, had ne the proper protection, and thereby save the prejiduce of the people, and avoid the competition and imitation of worthless medicines.—Copied from the Chicago Mail, Aug. 3, '87

Sports.

The Riverside lacrosse club won a match from the Millbrook team on Wednesday in three straights. They did the same with Madoc to-day in splendid style.

The Port Hope and Peterborough baseball clubs met here on Wednesday. After playing four innings the Port Hopers left the field to go to Cobourg, and would not finish the match.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. A RAILWAY DISASTER,

A TRAIN WRECKED AND A HUNDRED PEOPLE KILLED.

Carloads of Wounded People—Ten Cars go Through a Bridge—A Fire Broke out but was Extinguished.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—A despatch from Peoria, Ills., says an excursion train of 15 cars en route to Nigara Falls went through a bridge near Chatsworth on the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railway, resulting in the killing of nearly one hundred people. A relief train with 24 doctors has gone from Peoria to the scene of the accident.

An old T. P. and W. conductor named Geo. W. Scott, who left here at two o'clock this morning, has just telegraphed that over one hundred are killed, but that no one in the sleepers are injured. This is regarded as authentic. No names can be obtained. Engineer Clintlock was killed.

TWELVE CARLOADS OF WOUNDED.

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 11.—A train of twelve coaches of wounded will reach here about two o'clock. Over one hundred are still at Chatsworth in the town hall, school house and on the platform. All but five sleepers went through the bridge.

FULLER DETAILS.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., Aug. 11.—The Niagara Falls excursion train on the T. P. & W Ry. consisting of 17 coaches and sleepers crowded with passengers from Peoria Ill., and points along the line, was wrecked two and a half miles east of Chatsworth by running into the burning culvert. The two engines were completely wrecked with ten coaches and baggage cars. Engineer McIntosh was instantly killed, two firemen and the other engineer escaped serious injury. The ten cars were piled on top of the two engines, being telescoped and piled across and on top of each other. It is miraculous how any escaped, as the coaches and engines did not occupy over two lengths of track, and all are on top of the road bed. In one coach not a person escaped. In another only a lady escaped. Seventy dead have been taken out up to this time, and one hundred wounded are now in Chatsworth in the town hall, school house, depot, etc. At Piper City there are a large number of wounded—over fifty. The dead are estimated at over one hundred. The cars caught fire, but the flames were put out by trainmen and passengers. A heavy rain set in about two hours after the wreck and before the wounded could be taken away it was raining for two hours. The people are doing all they can for the wounded.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

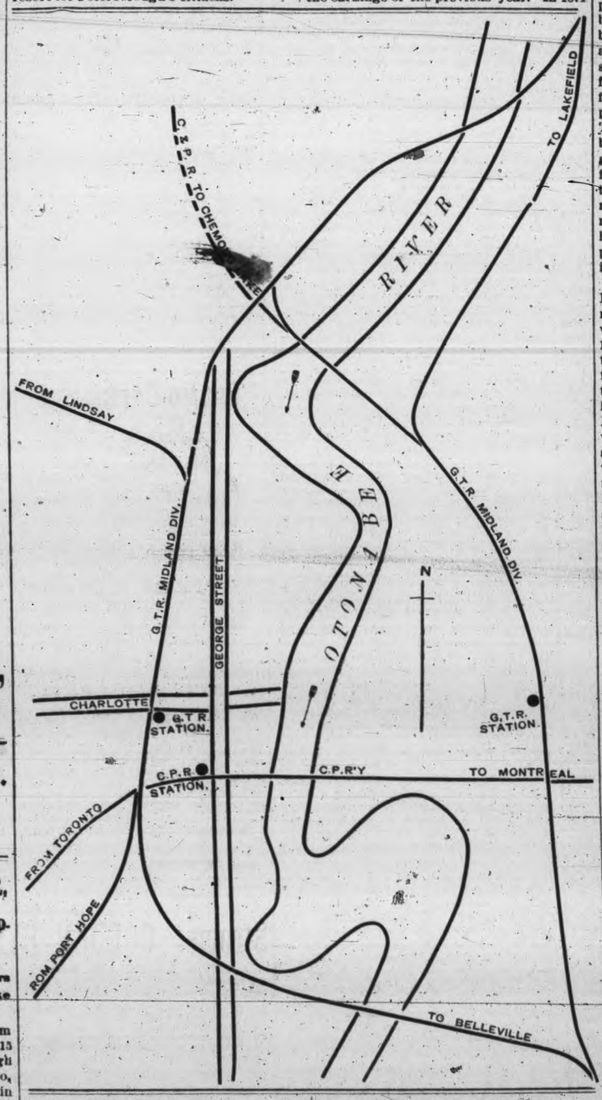
THIRTY YEARS OR OVER

THE PROGRESS OF PETERBOROUGH AS A RAILWAY CENTRE.

A Short Sketch of Railway History in Connection with the Town — The Small Beginning — The Present Standing.

The thirty-five to forty passenger and freight trains that arrive at and depart from Peterborough every day is an emphatic index of the worth of the town as a commercial centre. Year by year, steadily, as the supply follows the demand, Peterborough is commanding more and more railway accomodation. In addition to the lines added to it during the last few years, more improvements are in progress. The line across the south end of the town will transform the Grand Junction branch, in connection with the "Link" and the old main line of the Midland from Omemee, into a through line from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario. All of the through freight for the sea board, which is estimated at from 15 to 20 train loads a day, will pass through Peterborough, making the register of trains foot up to over fifty a day. The projected line to Chemong Lake, eight miles distant, will add another to the avenues of trade and commerce converging here. It will gather traffic from the chain of lakes, and develop another summer resort for Peterborough's citizens.



The sight was truly magnificent, and to those who never before witnessed such a sight, it must have been a thrilling one indeed; in another moment all was motionless, save and except the hundreds of human beings who were rapidly discharging themselves from the immense train of cars many of whom were for the first time enjoying a ride upon their own pet railroad.

An address was presented and replied to and in the evening a dinner was held in the Town Hall.

The effect of this new enterprise was to greatly forward the interests of the town especially the lumber interest. But the line was only kept open a few years, the bridge crossing Rice Lake having been swept away by the ice in the spring. The Midland line was built, reaching Peterborough in 1857 and being continued on to Lakefield in 1858 and much of the traffic was diverted to Port Hope instead of Cobourg, though some still went over the Cobourg road being taken across the lake by steamer. In the early history of the Midland the chief staple was lumber. In 1858 12,000,000 feet was taken from Peterborough; in 1860, 15,000,000; in 1863, 34,000,000; in 1865, 46,000,000; and in 1868, the amount had risen to the large figure of 72,500,000. At this time the Midland was operating about 100 miles of road and

IT WAS PAYING WELL.

Each year the receipts swelled larger and larger. In 1873, on Mr. A. Hugell's appointment to the Presidency of the road misfortune overtook it. Owing to the lumber crisis there was only a small increase over the earnings of the previous year. In 1874

The advantages the town have as a distributing point are very marked. It is situated midway between Toronto and Montreal on the lines of the two great highways of the country. The Grand Junction branch gives it communication with the country to the south-east as far as Belleville. The Missing Link branch leads to Omemee and Lindsay, connecting with the whole net-work of railways spreading through this part of the GREAT FERTILE MIDLAND DISTRICT.

The Millbrook branch runs to the south along the lake front at Port Hope, and the Lakefield line to the north serves a large lumbering interest as well the crowds of tourists going to the far-famed Stoney Lake.

It was a great day in Peterborough when the first locomotive made its appearance in town. Eagerly and anxiously was the time counted on that day. It was on a Friday in the month of January, 1855. The next week's REVIEW contained the description of the wonderful advent as follows:—

"Friday last being the day fixed upon to celebrate the formal opening of the Peterborough Rail Road, was observed by our townspeople as one of general rejoicing. Early in the day numbers of people might be seen collecting about the streets—whilst others were engaged actively preparing to revelve their expected guests. The day was exceedingly fine, and all nature seemed desirous of contributing to the joyous occasion.

"At a quarter to 12 o'clock the mayor and corporation according to previous arrangement, proceeded in a body, accompanied by large numbers of the inhabitants, to the station in Peterborough East, for the purpose of meeting their guests, the President and Directors, the contractor, Mr. Zimmerman, and Engineering Staff of the road, the Mayor and members of the corporation and other principal inhabitants of Cobourg. True to the time fixed for the arrival of the train ¼ past 12 o'clock] the neighing of the noble Steam Horse, might be distinctly heard in the distance, as he proudly rushed forward over his iron pathway, at terrific pace, bringing in his wake a large train of cars filled with human beings, the lumber trade was in a bad condition and a decrease in the earnings of $14,000 was shown. The running expenses as compared with the receipts rose as the receipts fell. In 1875 there was a further decrease in the earnings of $19,000 and in 1876 of $11,000 more. These decreases were caused principally by the falling off in the lumber trade, from 142,000,000 in 1871 to 58,000,000 in 1876. During this season of bad luck efforts were put forward to push on the construction of the line to Georgian Bay and at last it was accomplished in this year. The year 1877 showed a still further falling off in the earnings of $9,000, while the working expenses were slightly higher. In August, 1878, Mr. Hugel resigned, and Mr. Geo. A. Cox was appointed President. The credit of the road was at a very low ebb. Its rolling stock was poor, and the track so bad that trains could not be run at night. Its first mortgage bonds were quoted at 17 on the English market, and the floating debt reached $1,700,000. The construction employees of the road, who had long been waiting for their pay, were first paid off, and the work of building on to Midland was stopped. One of the first things done was to run a through train from Toronto to Peterborough, the previous arrangement being a change at Millbrook and another at at Port Hope. The section to Midland was put under construction and was rapidly brought to a completion.

ELEVATORS WERE BUILT

at Port Hope and Midland, and a bid was made for through grain traffic. The year 1878 showed a further decrease of $14,000 in the earnings, but at the end of 1879 they were $10,000 in excess of the previous year. The working expenses during 1879 and 1880 were put down to nearly half of that of the previous five years. In 1880 the receipts showed the surprising increase of $74,000, and 1881 a still further increase of $142,000. A year later an arrangement was entered into between the Midland, Victoria, Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay, Northern, Grand Junction, and Toronto and Nipissing railways to amalgamate these lines. A satisfactory conclusion was arrived at and Mr. Cox assumed the Presidency of the amalgamated roads.

The earnings were large and the road prospered, and prospers still as a part of the Grand Trunk system. As compared with those of eight years ago the premises of the Grand Trunk at present show off to good advantage. All of the railway business of the town was then transacted in a little building about 35x50. Now there is a fine commodious depot, well designed and substantially built. A pretty little park resplendent in summer beauty greets the eye of the traveller as he steps from the train. The freight sheds ten times the size of that of eight years ago, are filled in repletion with freight of all kinds. The Grand Trunk have been singularly fortunate in securing a gentleman of Mr. Brundrett's capabilities for their agent here. He is accommodating, popular and prompt in his business dealings. Mr. Menzies, the up-town agent, has spent many years in the ticket business and is thoroughly acquainted with it.

The year 1884 was another one to be marked in red letters. The advent of the Ontario and Quebec line of the Canadian Pacific Railway gave a great impetus to the town. Everyone knows with what energy the road was pushed through to completion and what a magnificent road it is—both in appointments and construction. The buildings of the company here are elegant and compact. The depot is one of the handsomest on the line. It has a broken ashlar foundation which appears above the ground five feet. It is built of white brick, tuckpointed, and a figured slate roof covers it. The interior is convenient, the ticket office being situated between the ladies' and the gentlemen's waiting rooms. The huge freight department is constantly filled with the products of the factory and farm and mine. The company started with no business three years ago and to-day their heavily ladened freight trains and crowded passenger trains tell what their condition is.

Besides the fine connection given to Peterborough by the opening of this line more are in store. The Smiths Falls line which will be put in operation on August 15th will shorten the running time to Montreal to five hours and a half. The fast train to Toronto will reduce the time to two hours. The building of the short line through the State of Maine and the new Lachine bridge across the St. Lawrence will give direct communication with the seaboard at Portland. Their own trains will also run direct to Boston. The local representatives of the Canadian Pacific Railway Mr. J. P. Dunn, station master, and Mr. T. E. Boddy, up-town agent, are both attentive to the wants of the people, courteous and well liked by all. Since their coming here only a short time ago they have won their way to popular favor.

To manufacturers and wholesale men Peterborough offers the advantages as a distributing point as set forth above.

The Rifle.

The regular weekly rifle practice was held at the range on Thursday afternoon. Though the wind was pretty strong the marksmen made good records. The ranges were at 200, 400, 500 and 600 yards, 5 rounds at each range, possible score, 100. The scores were as follows:—

	200	400	500	600	Total.
W. H. Hill	18	16	22	9	—65
George Fitzgerald	18	13	14	12	—57
D Cameron	17	19	13	8	—57
W. A. Bell	14	20	12	7	—55
D. Belleghem	15	15	20	4	—54
John Campbell	13	9	13	6	—41
F. Scrimger	17	6	5	12	—40
F. Hall	—	—	17	13	—30

Mr. Hall did not shoot in the first two ranges on account of being called away. The marksmen are putting in practice now in preparation for the Ontario Rifle Association match which will be held in Toronto on August 22nd and following days. Peterborough will send up a strong team.

Mr. Leonard is a well known member of the Provincial bar, and had the very good fortune to secure a most estimable young lady as his wife. OUR FORESTS.

It seems to be assumed as a matter of course by many people that there can be nothing but gain for Canada in anything that will augment the speed of the distruction of our forests, even if the lumber procured is to be sent out of the country in the first stage of manufacture. Is it so certain that the rapid denudation of our timbered lands is an unmixed good? Of course there is some benefit to the men who find employment and earn wages in these, but so there would be for the time if they were employed in tearing down all the buildings in our town, that the materials might be sold, though the working men would soon suffer with the rest of the community from the effects of such destructive waste. The lumbermen and mill owners also may obtain some benefit from the hasty conversion of our forests into cash, at so narrow a margin of profit as to be sometimes wiped out or even turned into a loss. But there are not wanting lumbermen who are more conservative in their views, and are far from welcoming anything that tends to hasten a process that must soon make an end of their business, their limits been stript bare, while the growing demand would raise prices to a figure that would make them look back with regret at the poor return they had obtained for their too hastily sacrificed property. As to the people of Canada, the community as a whole, they are beginning to see that the country must be impoverished by the distinction of this natural wealth for an insufficient remuneration. They are awaking to the fact that our forests are not inexhaustible, and that before a very great lapse of time a maintenance, to say nothing of an acceleration, of the present system must result in an absolute scarcity, coupled with lively regrets at past improvidence.

There is not a country in the world, except Canada, that is bent upon the extirpation of its forests, nor one that is not practising more or less effective means for the conservation of its forest wealth. Next to Canada the United States has been the most reckless and improvident in this respect, but there are now plain indications that our neighbours are recognising their foolish want of foresight and are now inclined to spare their forest, at the expense, if they can so contrive it, of those of Canada. They have fortunately been frustrated in their clever little scheme of carrying off our pine as saw-logs to supply their own mills, and we sincerely hope they will similarly be frustrated in their renewed attempts under a new form.

But though the evil day may be deferred, it seems inevitable. Those who have learned by the experience of other countries can but despair of being heard before it is too late. Our system is so firmly established and is so mischievous in its effects that any salutary change seems well-nigh hopeless. The Provinces, eager to obtain means for too profuse expenditure, are as eager to strip their land of its timber to turn it into cash, as a spendthrift life-tenant, unrestrained by an heir, too careless or easy-tempered to prevent the waste of his property. In the Province of Quebec they have actually adopted steps to force the lumbermen to strip their limits with the utmost possible rapidity, instead of encouraging them to exercise a wise providence, and the other Provinces do not lag far behind in the race towards a timber famine. It seems as though we will not learn wisdom till after the death of the goose that laid the golden eggs, and then regret will be too late. It is to be hoped that at least the people of Canada will abstain from any further steps to hasten the evil day.

RELUCTANT LEADERS

The Reform party seems fated to be led by men who, either at the commencement of their leadership or later, declare that they do not desire the position. Mr. Blake more than once publicly told the party, after it had sustained defeats under his management, that he did not desire to continue in the leadership and wished to be relieved. Mr. Laurier, the new leader, said at Somerset that it was with the greatest reluctance that he had accepted the position of leader; that he never sought it and did not desire it. And yet it cannot be said that Mr. Blake and Mr. Laurier are not ambitious. It would be hard to believe a man of ability would enter politics and remain in public life, devoting time to fighting political battles and advancing the interests of his party, without having some ambition. Perhaps it is the hopelessness of being able to cement into consistency the discordant elements of the party that discourages the new leader. The Ontario section holds (or did hold) that this Province was bled by the other provinces, while the Maritime Province section teaches an opposite view. Some members of the party are free traders, while others are moderate protectionists or thorough protectionists. Some are loyal to the Dominion and the Sovereign, while others are annexationists and still others annexation. The leadership of such a party cannot be a very enticing position, especially when the repeated defeats of the party and the fact that its position is as hopeless as ever are considered. If Mr. Laurier should lay down the party sceptre, the Reformers may find it necessary to invent some means of forcing a man to take it up.

TABOR'S THREE MINES.

FROM PLODDING STOREKEEPER TO SUCCESSFUL SPECULATOR.

The Romances of Little Pittsburg, Chrysolite and Matchless—The Luck Which Lay in a "Grub Stake"—Not Broken in Fortune.

At length came the realization of the carbonate wealth hidden in these hills. Where Oro had been established in 1860 Leadville was laid out in 1878. Even in this period of new excitement Tabor's head was not turned from his routine of storekeeping. His trade boomed naturally with the growth of the camp, which added to its population as many as 500 a day during the big rush. Lawyers, gamblers, everybody flocked to the hills and laid out claims, and strained their backs at the pick and windlass. Tabor was not so carried away. He stood behind the counter and weighed out the bacon and the meal. "He was a steady going—you might say plodding—storekeeper," is the description given by the pioneers. "That was all there was to him. Nobody ever thought of him as a mining man."

Occasionally the impecunious prospector came to Tabor with a proposition for a "grub stake." The storekeeper usually fell in with the suggestion, and weighed the supplies. The miner shouldered the pack and went over the hill. And Tabor entered up so many pounds of bacon and so many pounds of flour to profit and loss. How many miners Tabor has "grub staked" in his time Leadville does not pretend to say. Probably the number is well along in the hundreds. If anything came of this "grub staking" for nearly twenty years no record has been kept of the fact. But Tabor accumulated a few thousands and a good name during this plodding period of his life. No ill word is spoken of him as a storekeeper.

One day a miner named Rische made the usual credit arrangement with Tabor for "grub," walked up the hill as so many others had done before him, and went to work. He came down town of evenings, and got a tailor interested with him in the prospect. The tailor was George Hook, who, after listening to Rische's speculations about the claim, chucked his goose under the table, followed the miner up the hill, and went to work at the shaft. For some time Tabor would have resigned that "grub stake" claim for fifty cents on the dollar, and George Hook secretly regretted the day he left the bench to become a mining man.

But the time came when two of the partners sold out their thirds for $100,000 apiece, while Tabor, true to his character for hanging on, stayed in and saw that claim yield $8,000 a day, half of which he put in his pocket as the interest on his "grub stake" principal.

This is the romance of Little Pittsburg. Tabor, the plodding storekeeper, became another man entirely. He and Jerome B. Chaffee held on to Little Pittsburg until it yielded $8,000 a day. Then they stocked it. One day when they had just received returns from the latest shipment to the smelter and were sitting in the back room of the bank, Tabor said to Chaffee: "We'll stock this mine for $10,000,000."

"Oh, no," protested Chaffee, "that's too much. Make it $2,000,000, or something reasonable like that."

"Come to think of it, though," said Tabor, paying no attention to the interruption, "I believe we'll make it $20,000,000."

And they did. The 200,000 shares at $100 par value were issued, and climbed until they reached $35, representing a capital of $7,000,000. And then Tabor showed that besides possessing a capacity for holding on, he knew when to let go. Telling people plainly that while Little Pittsburg was a great mine, he didn't believe it was a fair equivalent for that valuation, he let go of his stock. There were plenty of takers, for the reports made by experts could not have been more glowing if the whole Fryer hill was of solid silver. Little Pittsburg was a grand producer for awhile, and has yielded $7,000,000, just 100 per cent. on the investment represented by the stock at $35 a share. But the date of the last dividend is ominous—"March, 1880."

In four months Tabor made out of Little Pittsburg $1,300,000. But his luck didn't stop there. There used to be a character in Leadville known as Chicken Bill. His mother knew him as William Lovell. Chicken Bill took up a claim on Fryer hill and worked it industriously for some weeks. But after the shaft got down to such a depth that it was quite tiresome to haul the dirt up in a bucket, he became disgusted. In the language of Leadville, "he hadn't a smell of ore." Bill left his shaft one night and walked down the hill. As he came to George Fryer's New Discovery mine his eyes fell on some very good ore, which had just been taken out. Bill looked around. That was before the days of watchmen at the dumps and when all Leadville was supposed to be honest. Bill gathered up a lot of ore, what he could carry comfortably, walked back to his shaft, and threw the chunks in. Then he went down town in a very good humor. The next morning bright and early he was down his shaft pounding away among the rocks. About noon he went down town and told Tabor and others that he had "struck it" at last. Tabor, flushed with his Little Pittsburg experience, was then on the lookout for anything and everything, and he sent a man up to see what Chicken Bill had got. The investigator came back and reported "several inches of nice looking ore in sight." Tabor asked bill what he wanted for his find, and Bill said he owed $100 for "grub," which must be wiped out, and on top of that he wanted $50 for spending money. Tabor paid $150 and took possession. He sank that salted shaft five feet from where Bill had stopped and struck ore that yielded over $1,000,000.

This is the romance of the discovery of Chrysolite. Chicken Bill couldn't stand it. Prosperity by proxy was too much for him. He told the whole story on himself. Chicken Bill's claim and those of the Chrysolite Mining company consolidated with it have yielded $4,350,000, but no dividends have been paid since December, 1884.

The Matchless was another illustration of Tabor's wonderful luck. Tim Foley and his partners, Wilgus and the others, worked this claim until they had discovered some ore and sold out to Tabor for $113,000. They went around Leadville shaking hands and receiving congratulations on having "put it up on the old man this time." But Tabor held the property, and kept on with development work. When he had taken out $1,000,000, sentiment began to change decidedly as to the wisdom of the investment. But the production kept right on up to $2,000,000. Then people began to wonder why Tabor didn't stock the mine and unload. Still he held on. The Matchless last year passed the $3,000,000 point, and today it is still producing. Tabor is the sole owner. He has never parted with a dollar's interest in the property. He enjoys the distinction of being the only Leadville man who has bought a big mine and developed it, and held on to it without forming a company or taking in a partner. Matchless is the only prominent mine in the district the title to which rests in a single name.

The impression has gone out that Tabor is broken in fortune. He has lost heavily in his numerous ventures, but there are few men in Leadville who wouldn't trade even today for what Tabor has got left. "Huh!" one of them said, "I wish I was as near broke as Tabor is."—Globe-Democrat.

Lesson VII of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Aug. 14. Text of the Lesson, Matt. v, 1-16. Golden Text, John i, 17.

V. 1. The Multitudes—That is the great multitudes or crowds mentioned in the last verse of the previous chapter, which, strictly speaking, is part of this narrative. Went up—This does not imply a customary action, but he went up on this occasion. The original says the mountain, but what one it may not be easy for us to ascertain. Perhaps it was a mountain region rather than a distinct mountain. We know that it was in the neighborhood of Capernaum. The tradition which names the Horns of Hattin (two summits near together) as the mountain, cannot be traced further back than the Thirteenth century. This mountain is between Tabor and Tiberias, and is seven miles southwest of Capernaum. When he was set—Among the Orientals, teachers, as well as workmen and others who stand among us, usually sit while engaged in their regular employment. Disciples—Pupils, scholars; the term is applied to the twelve apostles, and also to all Christ's followers. There were those following him in the inner circle and those in the outer circle to whom the term is applied.

V. 2. Opened his mouth.—This expression has always arrested attention. It is not meaningless; it is not simply a statement that he began to teach. It is rather an Oriental form of expression, indicating the beginning of a formal authoritative and solemn discourse. Some have supposed that it is here placed over against his former silence, but the interpretation we have given is in harmony both with classical and scriptural usage. Taught.—This great fact is to be emphasized. The teacher of men is the king of men. Ideas rule the world. Christ't teachings are the profoundest, purest and sublimest the world has ever known.

V. 3. We now come to the sermon proper. A benediction was the first word of this peerless discourse. All men desire to know the secret of happiness. Here it may be found. This first word must have caught the ear and thrilled the heart of every hearer. Blessed.—This word means happy rather than blessed, although we may not be willing to make the substitution. There is another Greek word in the New Testament which strictly means blessed, and which is appropriately applied to God. Poor in spirit.—Those who are conscious of spiritual poverty, the lowly in heart, the spiritually weak, dependent and trustful. Many men look upon the possession of wealth as an evidence of the favor of God. Christ teaches a different truth. This benediction belongs to the poor in spirit, whether they are rich or poor in this world's goods. There is no reflection on wealth, there is no necessary commendation of poverty, in this connection. All depends upon the spirit of the person who is rich or poor.

V. 4. They that mourn.—There may be a sorrow which brings no blessings—the sorrow of the world, which worketh death; but those who sincerely mourn under providential dispensations may claim this blessing. Those who sorrow penitently for their sins, who trustfully long for Christ's presence—these are the happy ones. Their comfort is certain; their sins shall assuredly be forgiven; grace shall be bestowed, and Christ's presence enjoyed. It is a strange paradox when we say, "Happy are they that mourn." That we think it strange may be an evidence of its truth. Christ thus corrects another common mistake.

V. 5. The meek.—These are the gentle, long suffering, forgiving. They avoid all ostentation. They have a meek and quiet spirit which is of great price. The promise is that they shall inherit the earth.

V. 6. Hunger and thirst.—As men long deprived of food and drink hunger and thirst for them, so do these here mentioned desire righteousness. Righteousness.—This is holiness of heart and rightness of life, likeness to God. Those who long for this blessing shall be filled. The longing for righteousness indicates the presence of righteousness. They shall enjoy the blessing of Christ's righteousness imparted to them and possessed by them. Those who have this spiritual hunger and thirst shall be filled, whether they are rich or poor in this world's goods.

V. 7. The merciful.—They are those who feel sympathy with the distressed. They also make efforts to remove the miseries of men. They shall obtain mercy.—True compassionate love in the heart shows that God's mercy and favor are in that heart. To receive forgiveness we must bestow forgiveness. A forgiving disposition precedes the experience of forgiveness.

V. 8. The pure in heart.—This grace is a fruit of the Spirit of God. The heart of such persons is free from intentional impurities. There will be an absence of all uncleanness in a scriptural sense, although the meaning is not limited to chastity. Hypocrisy, deceit and falsehood shall be strangers to the pure in heart. This statement of Christ's corrects the idea that the cunning, the sharp, the wicked, are the prosperous and successful in life. Shall see God.—This is the highest happiness. Commentators and historians remind us that kings in eastern countries were not accustomed often to show themselves to the people. Those who had the privilege of entering the royal palaces are described as "those that see the king's face." We see God in proportion as we are pure here and now. Only the pure can see him.

V. 9. The Peacemakers.—Christ is the true peacemaker. He reconciles God to men and men to God and men to one another. In their measure his followers are to be peacemakers. There is no nobler service, there is no service which requires more sanctified common sense. Christ's Gospel, if more the rule of life, would produce universal peace. This spirit ought to be present in the heart of every Christian. War is a reproach to the Christianity of our day. It is time that the principles of peace ruled the nations of the earth. All national and international difficulties might be settled by arbitration. Shall be called; that is, they shall not only be the children of God, but they shall be publicly recognized as such. Earthly kingdoms may make but little of peacemakers; God calls them his sons. Children of God—sons, that is, children of mature growth. They are born of the spirit; they partake of the divine nature; they are adopted into the divine family. In heaven they shall wear the crown as children of the king.

V. 10. Persecuted.—This is the last class mentioned. These might seem to be excepted; but Christ gives them the special honor. They need much comfort. Here he declares that they have it. Even God's children must expect persecution. It is a condition inseparable sometimes from that character. The blessing is not promised to all who suffer, but only to those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, because of their devotion to truth.

V. 11. The address becomes direct and immediate. There is a blessing following reproach. Revile.—Reproach you even to your face. Persecute.—Commit acts of persecution. It was common to charge the early Christians with horrible crimes. The case of Nero suggests itself. In order that a reward may be enjoyed, the suffering must be experienced for Christ's sake. In the charge to the second person in this verse, we see that a personal application is made to his hearers.

V. 12. Here we strike the lyric and exultant strain of which we have spoken. Christianity means joy, light, peace, victory. Believers have a great reward. They may well rejoice. The prophets were so persecuted. This is introduced to suggest to the disciples that their most distinguished predecessors had similar experiences. We remember the cases of Elijah, Elisha, Jeremiah, Isaiah, Daniel and many others. The strange command to rejoice, we thus see by the latter part of the verse, rests upon a good foundation.

V. 13.—We now come to a new division of the general subject. We here have the disciples presented to us as related to the world at large. The apostles, as such, are not mentioned. If they were chosen, they are not referred to in the narrative. The reference, then, is to the body of believers. "Nothing is more useful than sun and salt" was a common proverb in Christ's day. As salt seasons the insipid and preserves from corruption, so Christians were to be to the world. But if the salt.—Of course then it will become insipid, tasteless, worthless. Travelers tell us that such salt may be seen in the streets of eastern cities. Put upon the soil, it would injure it. It has no other use than to be trodden under foot. If the very substance which gives saltness loses its saltness, there is no other source from which that quality can be derived. So if Christ's disciples apostatize, they lose the power to bless others or to receive blessing.

Vs. 14-16.—As Christ is the light of the world, so are believers in their measure. The language which he applies to himself he applies also to them. Christ's light shines through them; they represent him. This side heaven there is nothing so like Christ himself as a true believer. Candle.—"Any movable artificial light, whether candle, lamp or lantern." Bushel.—The bushel, the modius. This is a household utensil, familiar to every householder, to measure grain. It held about a peck. The point of comparison here is not as to its size, but as to its power to conceal. Candlestick.—Rather a lamp stand. The light under the bushel is not a light. Nothing is a light but that which enlightens. A stream which does not flow is not a stream. A fire which does not burn is not a fire. Flowing and burning are inherent attributes of a stream and fire.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. Christ's subjects here should sit at his feet; and "when Jesus opens his mouth, let us open our heart."

2. Nothing but religion can make men truly happy. Lowliness is loftiness; goodness is greatness. All things work together for good for God's people.

3. Christians are, under God, to enlighten, purify and redeem the world. They must let their light shine; thus they glorify God. —Sunday School World.

OUT ON THE PLAINS.

Room! Room to turn round in, to breathe and be free,
And grow to be giant—to sail as at sea
With the speed of the wind on a steed with his mane
To the wind—without pathway or route or a rein!

Room! Room to be free where the white bordered sea
Rlows a kiss to a brother as boundless as he;
And to east and to west, to the north and the sun,
Blue skies and brown grasses are wielded as one,
And the buffalo comes like a cloud on the plain—
Pouring on like the tide of a storm driven main;
And the lodge of the hunter to friend or to foe
Offers rest, and unquestioned you come or you go!

My plains of America! Seas of wild land!
From a land in the seas with a raiment of foam,
That has reached to the strainger the welcome of home,
I turn to you, lean to you, lift to you my hand!
—Joaquin Miller.

"CHUGGING" FOR CLAMS.

Scene at the Horseshoe off Sandy Hook —A Big Catch.

From early spring until late fall the clam fishermen may be seen in their boats "chugging" for clams with their immense rakes. They come from Highlands, on the Shrewsbury river, where the famous Highland lights flash their greeting to the mariners. In March, when there is a good wind blowing down the river, the fishermen shove their floating shanties from their Highlands moorings, make fast to sailboats, and are towed down the river to the Horseshoe.

The houses anchored and moored, work begins. A little creek which empties into the Horseshoe affords an excellent harbor for the small rowboats. At half tide the men get to work. The poles of their rakes are thirty feet long, and with them they pole the boats out of the creek and into the waters of the Horseshoe. Then they begin "chugging." A man chugging in deep water works with his grip on the very end of the handle of the long pole. The upward and downward motions of the boat on the waves and its drift on the tide cause the forty teeth of the rakes to bury themselves in the sandy bottom. In shallower water the man has to handle the pole from lower down, and the work is more difficult because more awkward.

"How can you tell," the reporter asked one of the fishermen when he had come ashore, "when to draw up the rake?"

"By the sound as the teeth grit against the clams. The teeth are pointed with the finest steel, and the sound kind o' travels right up the pole. That's the sort o' music we likes to hear."

"Is that a fair catch?" the reporter asked, looking into the chugger's boat, which was about a quarter full.

"Fair to middlin'. A big catch is about 3,000 clams, an' I reckon there's about 1,500 in there."

"Does the size of the clams make much difference in the value of a catch?"

"Them as is smallest fotches the most. The teeth of the rakes is about three-quarters of an inch apart, and we takes what they'll hold between 'em. A catch of 3,000 clams, sizes as they comes, is worth about $4."

"How do you dispose of them?

"We feed them to the yachtsmen and the railroad hands, and on Sunday to the landlubbers who sit on the pier and think they's goin' to catch fish. Then when we've collected a boat load—that's 6,000—we keeps them in the creek, where they burrow down to their bills if you leave them alone long enough. We takes them up in our boats to the Highlands to a wholesale dealer. He ships them to New York, and from there they're shipped west or sold to retailers in the city. They're sold as Little Necks, for Little Neckers has the name, though the Horseshoers has the flavor."—New York Sun.

Infatuated with Wagner's Music.

Judith Gautier became so infatuated with Wagner's music that she went to Bayreuth to live. There she used to dress in the garb of Lohengrin and other Wagnerian operatic heroes, and strove in every way actually to transform herself into one. She not only wore the heroic costume, and listened by the hour to the music connected with the heroic part, but assumed the manner and speech of the character into which she wished to be transformed. More than that. She tried the arts of witchcraft, and went through the most outlandish rites. On one occasion, when she had been trying for two weeks to turn herself into Tristan, she had a dream which she thought assured her success. In accordance with what she saw in the dream, she went out to a lonely spot at midnight, mixed a strange kettle of broth over a fire and walked about it for an hour chanting some of the lines of Tristan in the opera. Then the kettle upset and scalded her foot, whereupon she uttered a most unheroic scream, limped away and abandoned the whole business in deep disgust.—Paris Cor. Chicago Tribune.

I open my hands and I let them go,
Be they Heaven's above or earth's below;
But one to my throbbing heart I hold,

FLIGHT OF THE DERVISH.

I.

The day was a sacred one at Constantinople. It was the festival of the Hegira, and every available mosque was crowded with the prostrate forms of the faithful.

A terrific storm raged over the city. At each lightning flash, the thunder rolled through the vault of heaven as if to announce the day of doom. The rain poured down in torrents, and the wind swept in violent, fitful gusts beneath the porches, and into the very aisles of the holy places where the worshipers were assembled.

While the tempest was at its height, a man of tall, commanding stature, with a long white beard which reached down below his girdle, might have been seen making the best of his way through the narrow streets that extend towards the outskirts of Galata, as if intent on reaching some unknown, invisible goal. This weird individual, whose age it would have been difficult to decipher on his haggard and wrinkled countenance, was evidently sinking with fatigue. Alone an iron will, or perchance some extraordinary mission, could have upheld him in his toilsome journeying, for at each step he sank deep into the mud of the streets of old Stamboul, and the blood from his swollen feet stained the thick, heavy sandals which the wayfarer wore.

He stopped occasionally to cast a look of deep anguish towards heaven, and murmured in his misery.

"O, God! when wilt thou give me rest?"

But the blast alone made answer to his prayer, and a mysterious voice from the thunder clouds overhead seemed to mutter, "On! on! on!" while the lightning flash, like a threatening finger, pointed to the maze of streets in town, or, beyond these, to the dismal horizon.

This man, so wretched and sorely tried, was Ahasverus, the Jew, who, in years long since dead, had struck our Lord Christ, driving him with contumely from the door, when, faint with sorrow and suffering, and exhausted by the weight of the cross, the latter besought the cowardly ruffian to let him rest for a moment on the step of his house at Jerusalem. From that day forward, cursed by God and man, Ahasverus, whose doom it is still to walk the earth under the burden of a life that will not end and must know no rest, sallied forth from his home, and, leaving his wife and children, has wandered aimlessly from land to land for nigh 2,000 years.

Suddenly the storm grew to a tremendous hurricane, such as Moslem had never seen even at Constantinople, where the winds blow from every point of the Bosphorus, and hail fell in such masses as almost to turn day into night. The large icy lumps fell so thick and fast on the bare head of the wanderer that, having reached the outskirts of Kassim, he sought refuge in the newly erected mosque of the Sultana Valide, called Yeni-Djami, with its lovely minarets and columns brought from the ruins of ancient Troy.

Entering the front hall where good Moslems cast off their shoes, Ahasverus left his dirty blood stained sandals among as rare a collection of variegated foot gear as it had ever been his cobbler's privilege to come across at Jerusalem. It was no mere sentiment of curiosity that impelled the dauntless Hebrew thus to penetrate within the sanctuary. His sole object was to rest his burning brow against one of the marble pillars from Troy. Soon he found himself within the temple, his dull eye grew dizzy at the sight of flashing lamps, and a sense of awe came over him as he viewed the closing scene of the great Mohammedan ceremony, through the cloud of incense which arose from golden censers, thuribles and tripods. He had no sooner lowered his gaze of the host of worshipers before him, in the vain hope of discovering perhaps a human being as wretched as himself, than the voice with the same pitiless injunction fell inexorably on his ear:

"On! on! on!"

He staggered foward to obey, just as the crowd of Moslems rose to leave the sacred building. They all made for the doorway so effectively that Ahasverus was pushed to the wall, and unable to reach the "hall of shoes" until well nigh every one had got out before him. When he did manage to quit the sanctuary, he sought for his mud covered, blood stained sandals. They were gone. First, his eye squinted awfully round the place; then it twinkled with delight on beholding a tall pair of boots, sumptuously lined with some soft material, which, like Castor and Pollux, uprose in dreamy, dual grandeur in a corner of the hall. He slipped them on and made off. Never before, throughout his checkered career, had he met with such a comfortable pair of boots. They were large and well furred throughout. As soon as he reached the doorway, two eunuchs caught hold of him by the arms and legs, and carefully lifted him into a well stuffed, silk lined and cozy sedan chair, which at once conveyed its precious burden towards the beautiful quarter of Galata, in the suburbs of Constantinople.

The storm had blown over, and the sun came out again, full of serene glory.

An hour after, Ahasverus found himself before a well dressed table inside of an elegant villa, with three lovely creatures, who ministered to his wants and formed his harem. The table literally gave way beneath the load of fruit and cakes and viands which it bore.

On arriving at the villa the eunuchs had plunged Ahasverus into a delightfully cool bath; the barber had combed his hair and cut off his long white beard, while a caftan of soft satin took the place of his former rags. Even his wrinkles had disappeared and his hair grown brown; in fact, so thoroughly transmogrified was he by the time he found himself at table that no one would have known him who had seen him an hour before.

He ate and drank as he had never done before, deluded by the sweetest dreams and beguiled by the loveliest women.

Doctors and learned men from all parts of the world visited and consulted him, for his erudition was profound, and his knowledge of languages unprecedented. The sultan caused thirty gold pistoles to be drawn from the private treasury and handed him by the seraskier of the palace, for a work of considerable merit by him on "Shoes," now unfortunately lost. Diplomas and decorations flowed in upon him so thickly that he had to have a room set apart for his archives.

In fact he who for upward of 1,880 years had been a wanderer on the earth now lived the life of a quiet, well to do citizen of the Ottoman empire under Abdul-Hamid II, the thirty-fifth sovereign in male descent of the house of Ottoman, the founder of the empire, and the twenty-eighth sultan since the conquest of Constantinople.

(May his shadow never grow less.)

It is alleged on good authority that, from the evening of the day Ahasverus was installed in his villa by the Bosphorus, he slept for forty-eight consecutive hours before he could be roused to his new life of ease and luxury.

II.

Meanwhile, the rightful owner of this handsome villa had become an outcast and a fugitive on the face of the earth.

Mahmoud, the dervish, to whom the house and harem belonged, had fallen asleep in the mosque while the Hegira was being commemorated. Now Allah, who regards this festival one of the most sacred in the year, was angry at Mahmoud for dozing off on such a day in his holy place. The flight of the Prophet—which the Hegira recalls—was to be matched by another no less memorable flight on the part of the dervish, as a punishment for his remissness on that occasion. So, awakening from his nap, and finding himself alone in the mosque, Mahmoud rushed out. He hunted about the hall for his boots, but, of course, they were not to be found, having been filched by Ahasverus. In a dark corner he discovered the mud covered, blood stained sandals of the wandering Jew, which he put on, horrible as they were, in order to get home. At once a strange experience came over him. Hitherto, being dropsical and gouty, his pace had been snail like and his walk a hobble. Now an electric fluid ran clean up through him, loosening the stiffness in his joints and muscles. The suppleness of youth and the strength of manhood returned to those legs, and he felt like starting off on a ten mile race with Deerfoot. A glass of brandy poured down the throat of a dying man could not have proved more invigorating. His almost impotent limbs were changed in a few minutes into those of a well trained and robust pedestrian. He felt like a new man and started for a walk. He no longer thought of going home, as was his wont. Besides, his sedan chair and servants were not in attendance. The weather was fine; the air had been cooled by the recent downpour, and the brown thrush sang in the hedge. Never before, at any season of life, had a dervish been known to run along as he did, with villainous sandals on his feet, through the muddy streets of Constantinople. And, O miracle! it was not his brain which led the way, but his feet that spurred him on. He soon got beyond the walls of the town, and fairly out into the open country. As night came on, however, feeling somewhat jaded, he was about to make up and knock at the door of a farm house by the way, when an unconquerable impulse to proceed got the best of his judgment. An invincible force kept him walking along the high road all night. At daybreak he found himself miles and miles away from his pretty home at Galata. He stopped to quench his thirst in the clear water of a brook, which mirrowed his features and form. He was dumfounded at the change which his roving freak had wrought in his personal appearance. Was it a dream? His jet black hair had grown white in a single night, like that of the prisoner of Chillon; his beard, which was carefully shaved every morning, had grown half a yard long; his brand new clothes were now in tatters; and he held in his hand a long, stout staff, which he must have cut as he passed through the wood.

He now fairly took fright at the state he was in. A ray of reason returned. He would get back to Constantinople by hook or by crook. He had only to make himself known, and fee some peasant. So muttering, he felt for his purse full of gold sequins. But the purse was gone. After fumbling in the depths of his pocket, he presently fetched up five bits of red copper, the lowest coin in the country. He flung the money away from him, with rage and disgust. But later on, as he passed a baker's shop, and began to feel the pangs of hunger, his surprise was unbounded at finding five other cursed bits of copper, like those which he had thrown away. This time, however, he bought some bread, and drank from a public fountain before proceeding on his way.

And thus, day after day, Mahmoud the dervish traveled. He visited many lands, and the five copper coins which he had at first despised, and which were constantly renewed in his pocket as fast as he spent them, proved in the long run a most providential supply. Thus, at Epinal, in France, where children's colored pictures are made, he bought for a cent his own portrait, together with a plaintive song set to a still more plaintive tune entitled "The Legend of the Wandering Jew." For he had no doubt, by this time, that he was the genuine article; not the Will o' the Wisp of the story, but the real Simon Pure. So he settled down to his task in sober earnest.

A twelvemonth had elapsed since the events here recorded took place, when, on the sacred day of the Hegira, at the same hour, and in a storm of thunder, hail and rain like that which had taken place at Constantinople on the same day the previous year, two men entered the mosque of the Sultana-Valide, called Yeni-Djami. One was Ahasverus, the Wandering Jew, and the other Mahmoud, the dervish. Soon as the public prayers were over, both sallied forth into the "hall of shoes," and a second interchange of foot gear took place. The false Jew, Mahmoud, got back his well furred boots and went back home to his villa and wines at Galata, while the spurious dervish, Ahasverus, stumbled upon his mud covered, blood stained sandals and went out again to wander forever and ever over the surface of the broad, old earth.—Translated from the French of Victor Hugo for Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Heiress Hunter.

Nothing can be more contemptible than the life of a man who makes a show for a few years that he may marry an heiress. He lives a purely selfish existence; he is a mere cumberer of the ground. To be the accomplished man of society he may cultivate a few gifts and graces, but he has no true manhood. He may be a convenient man to ask to dinner, an eminent club favorite; he puts down a very handsome contribution to every ball list and every fashionable charity; he should send good bouquets, be well mounted at the hunt; he must be one of those colorless, civil, useless nonentities whom society loves; he must have no disagreeable family connections. He will then be asked where the heiresses go.

He must be seen at every tea, ball, reception; he must give an occasional theatre party; he must know how to be mean, and snub all the people who have been civil to him, only inviting those of the highest fashion who have snubbed him; he must be a pure and perfect snob. He will then be spoken of as a young man of the highest fashion and of excellent manners. He must have that air of coldblooded ingratitude which none but real snobs know, and a perfect blindness in seeing his friends of the past; he must do the opulent bachelor business for a while, and adopt the languid crutch and toothpick style; he must fill his rooms with bric-a-brac and Eastlake furniture, and give very recherche little suppers. But if he wants an heiress who knows the value of her money, he must not appear fast or dissipated; he should at least seem very respectable.—Harper's Bazar.

An East India Joke.

It is not generally known that the downfall of Dhuleep Singh, in a social sense, was due to a monstrous trick he played some fourteen years ago. It was in a country house where the Prince and Princess of Wales were staying, and a certain noble lord was in the act of offering a candlestick to the princess as she was retiring up the stairs. The maharajah, at this moment, stuck his foot in the way of the noble lord, tripped him up and sent him and the candle flying. Such a gross piece of misbehavior was probably never before known, and the justly incensed nobleman "went for" Duhleep Singh like a bulldog as soon as he got him into the billiard room. It was with difficulty that Dhuleep Singh was rescued from his assailant.—St. Stephen's Review.

SCANDINAVIAN THRIFT.

THE MEN WHO ARE CONQUERING THE FAR NORTHWEST.

A Scandinavian Settlement in Northwestern Minnesota Sixteen Years Ago. How American Enterprise Has Since Yielded to Stolid Determination.

Sixteen years ago I rode slowly through a Scandinavian settlement in northwestern Minnesota. Today I have returned from a trip over almost the identical ground I then rode over. Then these people were poor and dirty. They lived in holes called dugouts. They owned but little property. They were strangers in the land and they were timid. The Chippewa Indians, then recently removed from Red Wing to White Earth, amused themselves by chasing, stick in hand, the Scandinavians around their farms and threatening to kill them. It was rare good sport for the rather cowardly Chippewa to find white men who were not expert with rifle and revolver, and who were afraid of fish eating Indians. The Americans who lived in the country previous to 1870 were rough, courageous men, who corrected an Indian but once; then he was buried by sorrowing relatives. So the Chippewa enjoyed the new breed of white men, who could not fight and would not swear, until they tired of the pleasures of the chase.

The dugouts in which the Scandinavians lived were generally excavated in the side of a hill which overlooked a small lake, and near at hand stood timber for fuel and shed building. Their plowed fields were very small. They impressed me as men who had been cowed and mentally injured by a life of hard, unremunerative toil and scanty diet. They were dirty and vermin infested. They drank sour milk and ate heavy bread. They were not meat eaters. Poverty stalked among them. He who owned a yoke of cattle, a plow, a wagon, a cow, and a few chickens was a man of wealth.

Scattered among these Scandinavians and living on adjoining claims were vigorous, courageous young Americans, who had been raised on Ohio, Indiana and Illinois farms, and who had been educated in our common schools. They sprang from prime stock. They were accustomed to our laws and ways of living and methods of thought. They were handy men with tools. They were resourceful. They worked hard and lived as well as they could. They, too, lived in dugouts, but, as a rule, they had a better start in life than their Scandinavian neighbors. It was patent to me in those days that the American youth were sure to succeed, and that the native Scandinavian would fail to make a living. That was a self evident proposition and easily comprehended by the dullest intellect.

HOW IT TURNED OUT.

How did it turn out? Today the larger portion of the Americans who attempted agriculture in 1871-2 on the northwestern plains are scattered from Lake Superior to Puget sound, from the Saskatchewan to the Rio Grande. They work in every mining camp lying in the Rocky and Salmon river mountains. They live in huts standing by lean and small placer mines. They pack heavy burdens on their backs as they prospect in the Vermilion Iron range. More than half of the Americans who then so hopefully undertook to create homes in Dakota and northwestern Minnesota mortgaged their farms and lost them, lost years of their lives, lost their hope and steadfastness of purpose, and they are today virtually wanderers who live from hand to mouth.

And the Scandinavians? They are, as a rule, highly prosperous. The dugouts were long since abandoned as places of residence, and in their stead are large, well built frame houses, which stand among shade trees and well kept gardens. Such houses as I looked into were well furnished. Sewing machines stood in almost every house. And the land which was wind swept and desolate sixteen years ago is today divided into fields by good, cattle proof fences, and heavy crops of wheat, oats and barley grow on the inclosed land. Cattle graze in fields or on the adjacent prairies, which is owned by land speculators, and frequently these small herds are tended by a light haired boy, who rides an Indian pony. In sheds stand valuable agricultural tools, which have been paid for. The work cattle were sold long ago, and in their stead are two or three teams of powerful horses. And meat is in the pot three times a day in the kitchens of these houses. These people have good credit at the trading points, and they seldom abuse it. They only of all the people who have pushed into the Northwest have, as a rule, made a success of life as lived under the hard conditions enforced by the climate, the land grant railroad corporations and the high price of the goods they consumed. They achieved this success by tireless industry, supplemented by rigid economy.

TODAY IT IS FALSE.

It has been said sneeringly and with lips curved with contempt, and so frequently as to be generally believed, by Americans who live in the west, that "the Scandinavians sell all the agricultural produce that they raise which is marketable. They feed the best of the remainder to their pigs, and what the pigs refuse to eat they eat themselves." Fifteen, sixteen years ago, when these people were getting a start, that statement was but a slight exaggeration. To-day it is false in every particular. They live as well as their American neighbors, and they pay for the groceries which they eat; and that is a financial transaction which the average American farmer who tills land on the frontier shrinks from until he is screwed up to the paying point by the long headed merchant flirting chattel mortgages which bear his name in his face and talking savagely the while of proceedings against him the next time court meets.

The land owned by Scandinavians is, as a rule, unincumbered, or so lightly mortgaged that the payment of interest is not an oppressive burden. Some of the farms are mortgaged for from $300 to $500. These mortgages were laid to raise money to buy stock and could generally be paid at any time. I know of no Scandinavian who has mortgaged his acres to the utmost extent, as Americans very generally do, and I know no farmer of that people who speculates in the wheat pits of Chicago, as thousands of American farmers do.

The young Scandinavians of American birth, or those who came here when they were young, have lost the peculiar look characteristic of their parents. And, what is more important, they have lost the methods of thought employed by their people when first they arrived on our shores. With good and abundant food has come courage and intelligence, and cleanliness, and in many cases beauty. They are Americans in thought and feeling and action. No people who have come to our land have been more quickly assimilated than these.—Frank Wilkeson in New York Times.

TENDING THE "YOUNG 'UNS."

One of the Crucifixions of Boyhood Days—Hereditary Depravity.

One of the crucifixions of my boyhood days was in the fact that I had the dry nursing of all sorts of "young 'uns," as they were generally termed. Every farmer that I worked for seemed to have one of these specimens, aged from 10 to 18 months.

If any proof is lacking as to the cause of natural depravity, it could be found in the breed I had to care for. They were always querulous, squalling, rapacious, intolerable. They were cruel, for they invariably scratched the faces of those who attended them, clawed the breasts that fed them, throttled dogs that came within their reach, drew cats backward by the tail, smashed, tore, and defaced everything which they were permitted to touch. They were voracious as sharks, and predatory misers in the matter of property. Everything they had, everything they saw in the possession of others, belonged of right, in their estimate, to them. After getting through the vernacular as far as "a-goo, a-goo," their next step was "Mine! Mine!" Each of them was Jay Gould from the start, and wanted the earth.

Often when holding some squalling bieruptive brat, which, with clenched fist, closed and streaming eyes, red and puffed features, legs and body as stiff as stone posts, yelled, struggled and fought without the slightest reason other than such as are to be found in natural diabolism, did I wonder why there is such a dislike of Herod the Great, who showed himself to be a ruler of consummate value, and whose only popular failure was the slaughter of the Bethlehemic babes.

I worked one summer for the wickedest man in the county, who lived on the outskirts of the hill country, who could neither read nor write, and who generally gave utterance to an oath or some atrocious blasphemy at every breath. He had an infant about 15 months old, which I had to trundle and coddle, and which I always believed was an incarnate devil. Long before it could say "da da" it could utter with vim the expression, "By Dod!" I remember even yet the little wretch as he sat in a high chair at the table, with a bullet head covered with red, close curling hair, beady gray eyes, thick lips, flushed cheeks, and with a chuckle of glee would reiterate "By Dod! By Dod!" It causes me no profound grief to say that the father, having moved out of the vicinity, was sent to the state's prison for grand larceny.—Poliuto in Chicago Times.

Identity of Mutilated Money.

I am often asked whether this or that piece of mutilated money is redeemable. It is safe to say, unless the money's identity is entirely gone, that it is redeemable. In fact, one may say that money in the shape of ashes can be restored. It is a fact that after the Chicago fire ashes were redeemed. It came about in this way: It is customary in banks to do money up in packages, say of $10,000 each, and in the big fire of course hundreds and hundreds of these packages were reduced to ashes. But the shape of the package remained, and wherever the package could be sent on to Washington without crumbling the ashes, the money was sure to be replaced. It was done by nimble fingered women in the treasury department whose trained touch and sight are wonderfully acute.

It is well known that the ashes of the newspaper if dampened will show traces of the printing. So was it with the bills. These women would moisten the package of apparently useless ashes, and to their experienced eye the number and character of the bill would at once appear as if they had touched it with a magic wand. So thousands and thousands of dollars were redeemed by these patient women. A friend of mine, a country merchant, afraid of banks, placed a large sum of money in bills in a stone jar on a shelf in his store, where he thought it would be quite safe. When he went to look at it one day some time after it was a mass of fragments. Mice had got into the jar and chewed the bills into the minutest parts. Then they had mixed them all up, and altogether it was a fearful looking mess. He sent a cigar box full of it to me. I forwarded it to Washington, and what do you think? Out of the $1,145 originally in the pile a little over $1,000 was redeemed, the parts beyond recall being only the mere fibers of the bills. So the man lost only $100 by his foolishness. The reclamation of such money is done entirely by women, whose patience especially fits them for the monotonous work.—Banker President in Globe-Democrat.

Daniel Webster's Advanced Age.

Guest (dining "upstairs" at Revere House to English waiter)—Daniel Webster has dined in this hall. He has made speeches here.

English Waiter (anxious to keep up a pleasant conversation and earn a tip)—Yes, sir; there was some talk of him here this morning, sir.

Guest—Indeed! What was said of him?

English Waiter (considerably taken back and exciting the guest's suspicion that his remark had been a bold, venturesome mendacity)—Well, sir, I don't know as I could tell you what was said—but there was some talk of him, sir.

Guest devotes himself to his tenderloin and remains silent.

English Waiter (distressed by the miscarriage of the conversation, starts on a new tack)—Mr. Webster must be getting along pretty well in years now, sir.

Guest ("catches on")—Yes; I shouldn't wonder if he dropped off very soon.

English Waiter (delighted at the auspicious renewal of the conversation)—Yes, sir; yes, sir; all the great men are dropping off nowadays.

Guest—Have you heard anything recently in regard to Mr. Webster's health?

English Waiter (doubtfully)—No, sir—nothing except what I see on the bulletin. When I get off at 8 o'clock I will see the bulletins again.

Guest—You must be sure to keep an eye on the bulletin. Mr. Webster is a great man, and his dropping off this year will create a great sensation.

English Waiter—I know it will, sir; I know it will.

Waiter scores a tip and guest departs with a beaming countenance, which legitimately accompanies the bestowal of a benefaction.—Boston Post.

Asking for a Light.

Americans abroad who stop people in the streets to ask for a light for their cigars are more or less politely directed to the nearest tobacco shop and advised to buy a box of fuses. This apparent incivility has its merits. At the Cortlandt street ferry, last week, I saw a man with a stump of a cigar importuning strangers for a light. The first stranger gave him a match, which blew out. The second reluctantly handed him a freshly lighted cigar, but the stump was ash-headed and would not take the fire. The third handed over his half smoked weed, shrugged his shoulders and walked off. The applicant had now incommoded three persons and spoiled two good cigars. Yet, as he puffed away contentedly at his stump, he doubtless considered himself a gentleman.—New York World.

Their Novel Adornments.

Two young belles appeared at a Boston dinner a few days ago with serpents apparently tattooed on their arms instead of bracelets, and a circle of strawberries and strawberry leaves round the neck, exquisitely done, both as to color and drawing, and producing a striking effect. Though it resembled tattooing, it was, of course, some thin substance exoblently painted, and made to adhere to the skin.—Pioneer Press.

ONTARIO GRAND LODGE

WILL HOLD ITS NEXT MEETING IN BARRIE.

Amendment to the Constitution Defeated by Three Votes—Election of Officers—Congratulating the Queen.

GRAND SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Grand Secretary submitted his 21st annual report. He stated that the goal of having 15 000 members, which had been aimed at for several years, had been reached and passed. Treating on the benevolent aspect of the Order, he said that charity had been dispensed with an open hand. He believed that Oddfellowship in Ontario, as a benevolent society, stood without a rival. He concluded his exordium with urging the brethren to be true to the principles of the Order. He then took up business of the Order clause by clause, 29 in all. A tabular statement showed that 1,668 members in Ontario received sick benefits during 1886 and that the average amount paid each was $14.37. Another table showed that the lodges in Ontario had grown from 12 in 1856 to 211 in 1886. It also showed that the revenue had swelled from $3,174.60 in 1863 to $136,536.10 in 1886. The cash account showed a net income of $1,696.19; and the balance sheet, $8,071.06 assets over liabilities. In the annual statement the amount of money spent in relief during the year is found to be $47,807.13. There is a cash balance in the bank of $129,243 94; the sum of $154,163.84 is invested in mortgages; the sum of $145,751.71 is invested in buildings, land, etc., and the sum of $129,344.80 in furniture, regalia, etc. Total assets, $558,504.29. The various funds amount to $563,014.53.

The committees were drafted as follows:—

The forenoon of Thursday was occupied in the consideration of the motion moved to amend the constitution, by which it was proposed to elect the Grand Officers in the districts throughout the Province instead of at the Grand Lodge Session. The object of the motion was to do away with the system of canvassing and to effect a check on the Past Grand's influence when the Session is held in large places. For instance, there are about one hundred and fifty Past Grands in Toronto and supposing the Session was held in Toronto, these Past Grands all being entitled to a vote would hold the key of election the Past Grands throughout the Province not being present. Under the new method it would give the Past Grands all over a voice in the election without entailing the expense of travelling to cast their votes. A long and heated discussion followed, in which both sides were ably defended. The debate ended just before noon, and the vote lacked three of the necessary two-thirds to make the amendment law.

In the afternoon Col. Jackson, Grand Secretary of Quebec, was introduced. He gave an interesting address on the state of the Order in his Province.

A number of communications and reports were read.

The next business before the Grand Lodge was the selection of the place of its next meeting. The representatives of Niagara Falls, Owen Sound, Gananoque, Galt, Guelph, Toronto, Stratford, Barrie and St. Catharines all did justice to their respective towns. The vote, however, soon narrowed till the contest was between Barrie and Stratford. Barrie was selected on the last vote by 102 to 96.

The election of officers then took place with the following result:—

J. R. Read, Brockville.....Grand Master
E.R. Robinson, London..Deputy Grand Master
J. B. King, (re-elected).....Grand Secretary
Wm. Badenach, (re-elected)..Grand Treasurer
Dr. Bell, Peterborough.....Grand Warden
Dr. C. T. Campbell, Redresentative to the S.G.L.

The grand Lodge closed its session for the day by passing endorsing a cablegram of congratulation to the Queen. It was as follows.—

Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, London; Greeting:

The Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, of Ontario, now in session desire to extend to your Majesty their sincere congratulations upon your being permitted to enter into this the fiftieth year of your glorious reign, and to express the hope that your Majesty may long be spared to reign over us, a loyal and patriotic people.

Signed,
JOHN ORMSBY DONOUGH,
Grand Master.

At the reading of the message the Grand Lodge burst into applause and concluded with singing the national anthem.

To-day the Grand Lodge resolved to pay the expenses of the Lodge of Instruction held on Thursday evening, so as to relieve the Peterborough brethren of that expense. Thanks were forwarded to the Oswego Lodge for the use of the required paraphrenalia.

Legal steps are to be taken against those who divided the funds of the defunct Burlington Lodge among themselves instead of forwarding the same to the Grand Lodge.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge was recommended to substitute light badges instead of having regalia; also to amend the constitution so as to prevent anyone except representatives having a vote in the Grand Lodge.

A special committee reported on widows' annuities, recommending that a certain sum be paid for a certain length of time or that a lump sum be paid in discharge of claim.

Resolutions of condolence were passed to Dr. Campbell, Past Grand Master, and Grand Warden Robinson, who all lost members of their families of late. One was also passed to the relatives of Bro. Ponsford, who was killed in the St. Thomas disaster.

The installation of officers is taking place as we go to press.

Lacrosse.

The Madoc lacrosse team arrived on Thursday morning with an unbroken record for the season of victories. The Riversides faced them shortly after eleven o'clock, and the game was briefly noticed yesterday. The teams were composed as follows:—

RIVERSIDES.		MADOC.
E Rogers	Goal	G Wright
A Rose	Point	E A E Hollewell
T Meagher	Cover Point	A Huff
J Meagher	Defence Field	John Orr
M Halpin	"	D Caverley
F Pakenham	"	T Kirk
F Larone	Centre Field	R Frances
J Phelan	Home Field	R Collinge
J Begley	"	W Wright
H Neil	"	W Cross
M Larone	2nd Home	E Cross
T Duncan	1st Home	H Price
S J Trew	Field Captain	D Simmons
R Tierney	Umpire	C McDonald

Dr. Brennan was chosen referee. The Riversides won three straights, Joe. Phelan putting the ball through each time, the last time by a fine shot. The time was six minutes, two minutes and twenty minutes. It was a very pretty game, and the playing was well worth seeing. Each one of the home team did well, and they have only to keep on to be one of the strongest teams in the district.

Canton Outcouals.

Canton Outcouals, No. 9, 24 strong, made a favourable impression during the marching through the streets of our town to the Driving Park for review. The Canton not only received the applause of the spectators for their excellent drilling, but also in consequence of the several military movements. Ottawa is to be congratulated upon having a portion of Oddfellows so deserving and receiving the appreciation of all who witness their public displays. This is the more meritorious as the Canton was organized only six weeks ago, being the youngest with the exception of our own, which was instituted on the parade ground by Gen. Underwood on Wednesday, the Canton mustering 28 members.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NORTHERN DIVISION, A. C. A.,

General Meeting of Members—Election of Officers—Resolutions on Financial Matters.

A. C. A. CAMP, Juniper Island, August 10.—Last evening the general meeting of members was held. After reading the minutes of the organization meeting, Vice-Commodore Rogers made a brief address. The following officers were elected:—

VICE-COMMODORE.—A. F. V. Macgachan, Lindsay C.C.

REAR-COMMODORE.—W. G. McKendrick, Toronto C.C.

PURSER.—S. Britton, Lindsay C.C.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—J. N. McKendrick, Ubique C. C., J. Miller, Otonabee C. C., W. M. Graham, Lakefield C. C.

DIVISIONAL COMMITTEE.—W. J. A. Read, Bobcaygeon C. C., E. K. C. Martin, Hamilton C. C.

The officers are members of the Executive Committee, and the officers and Executive Committeemen are members of the Divisional Committee.

Resolutions were passed advising that the A. C. A. secretary-treasurer should not receive fees of members but the pursers of divisions, also that admission fees should go to the divisions, not to the general fund.

Commodore Wilkins explained several points in the present and proposed constitutions and gave other interesting information.

There was none of the usual discussion as to next year's place of meeting.

The proceedings terminated with cheers for Commodore Wilkins, Vice-Commodore Rogers, and the officers elect.

The members then assembled round the camp-fire with their lady friends. There was much singing, and an eloquent address by the Rev. Mr. Neide in acknowledgment of his being made an honorary member of the Northern Division.

(Report of races crowded out till to-morrow.)

Lodge of Instruction.

A lodge of instruction demonstrating the private working of subordinate lodges of Oddfellows, was held in the Opera House on Thursday evening. The Opera House was filled with the visiting brethren, who thoroughly appreciated the magnificient team work of the Toronto team under the superintendence of Bro. Cogswell.

He Never Smiled Again!

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "biliousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needed a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure billiousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. A PAIR of Ladies' Button Boots and a Bottle of Good Polish for 80 cts. at KIDD'S.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE RAILWAY HORROR.

CAUSED BY A SPARK FROM A PRECEEDING TRAIN.

Terrible Story told by a Doctor—Removing the Dead and Wounded—Identifying the Bodies.

PEORIA, Ills., Aug. 12.—Another train arrived at 12 30 a. m., with twenty-six bodies and six wounded. A later train will arrive with fifteen wounded and ten bodies.

CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Despatches from Chatsworth say that indirectly the catastrophe on the Toledo, Peoria and Western Railroad was ascribed to the origin of so many other recent calamities. The unprecedented drought had rendered the tall grass under a little culvert a few miles from Chatsworth as dry as tinder, and a locomotive spark set it ablaze. The timbers of the culvert caught fire and were smouldering unseen when the train of sixteen coaches of excursionists from Peoria and Bloomington and neighboring cities approached. There was a terrific crash, and an accident almost unprecedented in horror. This was the brief story quickly gleaned on the streets of Chatsworth last evening. At nine o'clock last night, when the Associated press correspondent left the scene of the wreck, it was estimated that all but six or seven bodies had been removed.

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 12.—Coffins were taken to the depot in waggon loads yesterday afternoon to receive the bodies of Peoria's victims. At the call of the Mayor a public meeting was held last evening to take steps to aid the sufferers by the disaster. Committees were appointed to take charge of the various departments of relief work, which was commenced at once.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Dr. Vaughan, of Chatsworth, was almost the first to appear at the scene. He says: "When I arrived I found there the greatest of confusion. Hades itself could not present a more horrible picture. Men and women were fighting with death and ready to clutch at a straw to get saved. One man held his dead wife and a dead little child on his arms, while his own feet were broken and propped in the wreck. I relieved the unfortunate man of his burden and he ped to drag him out and bring him to a sleeper. One of the greatest misfortunes was the fact that the wreck took place in a desert. It was impossible to accord the wounded sufficient assistance. There were no ambulances, nothing to carry them on. They were dragged and pushed, and this accounts for the large number of people who succumbed to their pains."

The work of identifying the dead is going on more rapidly now, and will probably be completed to-day.

CHATSWORTH, Ill, Aug 12.—The track will be cleared for trains by noon. All the bodies have been removed from the wreck. President Leonard said that so far as the officials could estimate, there were about eighty-four killed and one hundred seriously wounded. There are many who were slightly injured, of whom no record has yet been obtained. Mr. Leonard said that as near as he could ascertain, the train was making about thirty miles an hour at the time of the accident, not an excessive rate of speed, as the track was in good condition. The bridge, an ordinary fifteen foot wooden structure, was all right at five o'clock in the afternoon, when a train passed over it, and half an hour later the section men inspected it under orders in advance of the excursion train. It was all right then. As to the liability of the company or the future of the road, President Leonard could not say anything. The first thing the officials would do would be to devote their attention to the care of the victims. It was a blow which would, of course, be most serious to the road, but that was as nothing compared with the death and injury of human beings. Mr. Leonard said he could in conscience say that he believed the road had provided every reasonable and customary safeguard. With the consent of the coroner, President Leonard has arranged that all unclaimed bodies will be cared for, and placed in coffins and conveyed to Peoria, where, with all their effects, they will wait identification. Notwithstanding the contrary opinions expressed by the railroad officials, a survey of the wreck early to-day confirmed the belief that several bodies were still under the debris of the smashed engines and cars. The horrors of the wreck seemed deepening early this morning instead of lessening. Added to the pitiable spectacle of the dead, and miseries of the dying, a stench sickeningly foul was issuing from all the places where the corpse of the victims yet remained. No picture of the horrible occurrence immediately succeeding the accident could equal in revolting details the scene at the Toledo, Peoria and Western depot here to-day. The west end of the little structure is a coal house and lumber room. Here, stretched on the floor in the coal and rubbish, were seven unidentified bodies.

THE HANLAN-TEEMER RACE.

Interest Rapidly Increasing in the Coming Contest—Betting Very Light.

TORONTO, Aug. 12.—As the time for the great three mile sculling race between Edward Hanlan and John Teemer draws near interest rapidly increases, and the prospects are that a crowd will be present that will exceed anything ever seen at a similar contest at Toronto Bay. Daily large numbers flock to the island to see the men at practice, and keenly watch their every movement. Both men were out twice yesterday. James Keenan, Teemer's backer, arrived from Boston yesterday and went over to the island in the afternoon to watch Teemer's practice spin. He brought with him a new boat, which Teemer found suitable, though he discarded it for his old one for his usual spin over the course. Mr Keenan says if the water don't suit him there will be no race. Both Teemer and Hanlan seem to be in the pink of condition and are rowing fast. While overwhelming interest is being manifested in the contest, so far only a few solitary small bets have been reported. Teemer's friends are holding out for odds, which Hanlan's friends decline to give. The latter have the utmost confidence in the ability of their man to win, but they do not think that there is such a disparity between rivals as to warrant odds being given. Mr. Keenan does not appear anxious to invest any great amount of money.

THE ALLEGED HARD COAL.

An Ottawa Scientist Does Not Take Much Stock in the Discovery.

The reported discovery of "anthracite coal" at Campbellford, Ont., is not believed to be a very reliable report. Mr. Henry M. Ami, of the Geological Survey, being questioned, said to-day:

"The supposed discovery is astounding from many standpoints, as the geologic structure and mineral capabilities of that district are already known, and in no way agree with the discovery reputed to have been made. The rocks which occur at Campbellford and the district for hundreds of miles all around are such as are not coal-bearing. They belong to a period anterior, and were deposited long before the coal measures came in, so that the discovery has no geological foundation. The rocks at Campbellford belong to the Trenton formation, and are exactly of the same age as those which occur at Parliament Hill in this city. A coal mine is no more likely to be discovered at Campbellford than at our very doors."—Ottawa Journal.

AN AWFUL DEED.

A Man in Toronto Horribly Burned by Oil of Vitriol Thrown on Him.

A dastardly outrage was committed in Toronto on Friday, a young man, Louis Sievert, having his face terribly disfigured by vitrol thrown at him by a man named Edward Graham. By his condition it was judged that the fluid must have struck Sievert full on the forehead and top of the head and then flowed down his face. The top of the head, his face and neck were all burned, and so were both hands to above the wrists, these evidently being burned when he threw up his hands to protect himself He suffered terribly. The act was done in the cigar store of Sievert's father. No motive for the deed is known. Graham said he was an Englishman; that he had come to Montreal and had come on to Ashburnham, finally going to Toronto.

REVIEWS.

THE CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE.—The August number of this magazine fully sustains its usual variety and excellence of contents. The opening, will-illustrated article by A. R. Carman, B. A., on "Livingston and Stanley," will be read with deepened interest on account of the reported death of the great explorer, whose name will be forever associated with the great missionary. Lady Brassey's West India sketches are as charming as ever, and the numerous engravings are simply exquisite. Mr. R. W. Boodle, an accomplished writer of Montreal, contributes an admirable paper on "Side Lights on Dr. Johnson." All music lovers will be delighted with the charming sketches of Mozart and Beethoven, with portraits, by Arnold Doane, of Nova Scotia. Another of Guy Pearse's capital stories is given, with a portrait of "Bob," its hero. A paper of permanent value is that by Dr. Abel Stevens, the distinguished historian of Methodism, on what England has done for India. This is a very superior number.

He Never Smiled Again!

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "billousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needed a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure billousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. LATEST CABLE NEWS.

MR. BLAINE IN IRELAND.

DUBLIN, Aug. 12.—The Trades' Unions, the Protestant Home Rule Society, and various other bodies of Dublin, had been arranging demonstrations in honor of Mr. James G. Blaine, and the knowledge of their intention, it is understood, tended to hasten his departure from Ireland. Lord Mayor Sullivan believes Mr. Blaine will receive a banquet from his Irish admirers on his way home.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The Cabinet met to day and discussed the advisability of proclaiming the Irish National League. They finally adjourned until early next week without coming to a decision.

THE ARMY MUST BE EFFICIENT.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—Gen. Ferron, the Minister of War, inspected the Artillery school at Fontainebleau yesterday. In a speech he said that the military measures recently passed by Parliament would partially remedy a serious weakness in the army. He intended to present further proposals dealing with the artillery and engineer branches of the service, and he was confident they would meet with the approval of Parliament. To raise the defensive strength of the country to the highest standard was in his opinion the best guarantee of peace.

KATKOFF'S TAKING OFF.

BOBCAYGEON.

ACCIDENT.—A strange accident happened at Mr. McIntyre's blacksmith shop on Monday. Capt. Bottum's pony was being shod, and it appears she had a habit of backing. To prevent this the halter was fastened around her nose, so that in drawing back she would choke herself. By some means she drew back and shook her head, fell over and broke her neck, dying almost instantly without a struggle. She was a pretty beast and of some value.

FIRES.—As a result of the exceeding dry weather, reports of bush fires come from various sections, South Galway, Kinmount and Oobocook. On Wednesday the atmosphere was filled with smoke, and it is evident that terrible destruction of the forests is in progress. Campers in the woods should be particularly careful about their fires, and see that they are thoroughly drenched with water before leaving them. Even a match drooped in the woods at this time might send destruction raging for miles around, destroying everything in its way.—Independent.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should a ways be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and ake no other kind.

Tenacious Train Wreckers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—The west bound passenger express train on the Southern Pacific was run off the track near Papago, about fifteen miles east of Tucson, Arizona, on Wednesday night, by four masked men. The engine was ditched and the express car robbed of about $35,000.

DISCRIMINATION.

THE Globe recognizes that the objection that commercial union would discriminate against Great Britain is one that has weight, and in a labored article it tries to show that our tariff already discriminates against the mother country and that she does not object. To prove present discrimination it quotes figures from the trade returns, which it coolly states were selected at random. There is a great deal of random quotation and statement in commercial union arguments, but in this instance the Globe deliberately sets to work to mislead.

Its argument is that on the variety of goods that we import from Great Britain we impose a higher rate of duty than we do on the variety we import from the United States. It proceeds to quote the duties on cottons, which we import more largely from Great Britain, which range from 20 to 30 per cent., and duties on articles of the same material of which we import a larger quantity from the United States, which are from 15 to 24 per cent. But in doing this it deliberately omits articles that would injure the table for the purpose for which it was intended. For instance it passes over cords, etc., 20 per cent., thread in hanks 12½ per cent., cotton netting 10 per cent., prunella (none from the United States) 10 per cent., and velveteens 20 per cent., all of which are imported more largely from Great Britain. Again it quotes window glass 30 per cent., silvered plate 30 per cent., which are imported more largely from Great Britain, and porcelain shades, 20 per cent., of which the larger quantity comes from across the lakes. But it quietly passes over carboys, etc., 30 per cent., the larger quantity of which comes from the United States, and all other not otherwise provided for, 20 per cent., of which Great Britain supplies us with the larger quantity. And so on through its table; what would tend to disprove its argument is left out and only what suits its purpose is quoted. Perhaps one of its boldest attempts to mislead is in reference to coal. It says:—"We tax bituminous coal, of which we import some from Great Britain, 60 cents a ton, almost a phohibitive duty—yet allow anthracite or American coal to come in free." Would anyone reading such a statement think that we imported of bituminous coal $2,419,586 worth from the United States and onl $171,968 worth from Great Britain? Yet such is the fact, and it scarcely shows discrimination against Great Britain. The Globe's table is a most dishonest one, deliberately intended to mislead its readers.

Leaving details aside, its assumption is a wrong one. The tariff is the same on any article, no matter where it comes from. That shows that there is no discrimination. Besides, if the Globe's statement means anything, it is that of luxuries and highly wrought articles we import more largely from Great Britain than from the United States, and that those luxuries the people purchase dispite the higher duty. Under the National Policy our trade has been larger with Great Britain in proportion to our dealings with the United States than before, and the protective system has operated in favor of, instead of against, trade with the mother country as compared with our American neighbors. The Globe argues on a wrong basis, a false principle and its details are dishonest.

Another statement in the same article in the Toronto organ deserves to be noticed. It is:—

"But for British connection the people of this country would not be in the slightest danger from the only nation that they could not beat off with ease, and against that nation British protection would not be of the least avail."

The malice against Great Britain which sees a danger of our connecttion with her leading us into trouble with the United States, and the love for the United States which leads the Globe to believe that it could easily overpower the British Empire, are only equalled by the cowardice that prompts the use of such an argument in favor of commercialu nion. It is really, if anything, an argument for annexation. The spirit of the argument will not meet with much favor with public spirited Canadians and is deserving of severe condemnation. The Globe has in this article, as at other times in this discussion, shown a cowardly spirit and dishonesty in argument for which, perhaps, the bad cause it champions is largely responsible.

COLLEGE SOCIETIES.

NOTED ORGANIZATIONS AMONG THE CLASSES AT YALE.

The Most Profoundly Secret "Skull and Bones"—The "Scroll and Key" and the "Wolf's Head"—Other Prominent Class Societies.

Yale's most celebrated senior societies are "Skull and Bones," "Scroll and Key" and "Wolf's Head." To be elected a member of "Skull and Bones" is considered one of the greatest honors that can fall to a Yale man. To secure such an election a man must achieve celebrity in one direction or another. Wealth or popularity is of minor importance. The society is limited to fifteen members. Among them are generally to be found the captains of the university crew, the baseball and football teams, and also prominent track athletes. Among others generally chosen are the valedictorian of the senior class, one or more members of the board of editors of The Yale Literary Magazine, and one or more officers of the various athletic organizations. The society has been in existence fifty-five years, and numbers among its past members some of the most noted men who have graduated from Yale. Its meetings are held in a moss covered sandstone building situated not far from the campus, and are conducted with the most profound secrecy. No "Bones" man has ever been induced to disclose any of the doings of the society, and genuine offense is taken if it be referred to in his presence.

Next in importance comes the "Scroll and Key" society. Its members are all men prominent in some direction, but, as a rule, they are less celebrated than the "Bones" men. Popularity and wealth are important considerations in the choice of many of the "Keys" men, and the honor of membership is almost as eagerly sought as in "Bones."

The society yclept "Wolf's Head" has sprung into existence within a few years, and has grown to a good deal of importance and popularity. It has, like its sister organizations, a beautiful building, the interior of which is said to be handsomely furnished.

THE JUNIOR SOCIETIES.

The junior societies, "Delta Kappa Epsilon" and "Psi Upsilon," are ancient and honorable organizations which have been celebrated in story and in song. Prominence and popularity are the important factors in the choice of members. Up to the year 1877 both societies were accustomed to give Thanksgiving plays in Alumni hall. These performances were very attractive to old graduates and town people, but the college boys fell into the habit of doing and saying such objectionable things on these occasions that the faculty finally prohibited further public performances; and so it has come to pass that the yearly exhibitions are now witnessed only by the members of the society under whose auspices they are held. The exhibitions take the form of minstrel shows and burlesques on the plays of Shakespeare or some more modern author. The minstrel shows frequently include imitations of eccentricities of the various professors, and are invariably received with great gusto. Costumes from New York are employed, and much time is spent in rehearsing for the presentations. Similar plays are given in May on the occasion of the initiation of the sophomore members.

In addition to the fraternities mentioned above, there are several sophomore and freshman societies and a large number of Sheffield Scientific school societies; but they are less important than those that have been named.—Arthur Edmands Jenks in Lippincott's.

Sword Practice in India.

The quiet dweller in Europe will scarcely believe the prodigies performed in sword cutting by these coarse, ill looking bits of curved metal, costing frequently no more than 1s. 6d. to 2s. I had shot numerous wild beasts, when I was told by an expert that my hunting education was very deficient, as I could not handle a scimeter to stop my game. I was told to exercise continually on a pillar of soft clay, and thus acquire the drawing cut at the proper part of the blade, then on a newly killed wildcat or jackal, kneaded previous to the practice by the feet of a heavy man till the carcass became a loose, soft mass; then on a great pond carp, a fish clad with heavy, horny scales, like elastic mail—considered an A1 feat to test man and sword.

My first trial at this experiment resulted in a triple fracture of the good blade, sundry scales flying through the air uncut, only dislodged; then the artistic tour de force at paper cones placed on a table, and muslin thrown up to a height—all manner of strange and difficult tasks, which being only ornamental, I forsook for the useful and more easy decapitation of fierce quadrupeds, beginning with a wounded wild hog of full growth, and on essaying the sloping stroke behind the ear sweeping off the head nearly, that important part dropping between the fore feet. Not long before I had seen a bold young Ghoorka princeling dismount from his elephant, leaving it standing to await his return, and follow on foot alone an immense boar he had wounded with his rifle. On nearing the powerful brute it champed its foamy tusks to charge. He drew his kookre (or Nepaulese sword) and as it sprang at him the blade was buried across piggy's back, all but severing him in two parts!—English Mechanic.

She "Hollered Right Out."

The Listener gives it as he heard it from Aunt Nancy herself, delivered in a deep, awed tone, while she sat up as straight as an arrow, in her best black gown (not quite comfortably "dressed up"), knitting rapidly and occasionally looking over her spectacles at him. "You see, I'd never rid in the keers before, an' 't was all kind o' strange, and I was narvous an' oneasy, an' kep' a fearing that suthin' o' ruther was goin' ter happen. But she kep' a tellin' of me 't was all right, an' that they'd ring a bell in a minute, an' then we'd be off. I was lookin' outen the winder, an' I dunno how 't was; I didn't hear no bell, but all of a sudden, jist as I was beginnin' to think we never would go—ugh!—an' we began to move all to once! Well there! it took me so sudden—you see I've been used to drivin' our old mare, an' she's awful apt to start, an' I hev' to be on the lookout always when I'm a drivin' of her, an' when that thing gave that jerk I jist hollered right out, 'Whoa!' When I'd done it I looked around to see if any one had heard me, and everybody was a starin' at me. I dunno what they thought!"—Boston Transcript "Listener."

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is woe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

TRICK OF "TICKLING" TROUT.

A Process Well Known Among the Boys of Ireland—Its Success.

"I was astonished to learn by Mr. Thorndyke's statement that the bears on the shores of Carbon river, at the base of the precipitous Mount Tacoma, have mastered the process of catching the hook nosed salmon by the art of 'tickling,'" said a gentleman who was born on the Emerald isle, and is proud of it. "I wonder whether the boys in Ireland taught it to them or learned it from them? I know when I was a youngster we Irish lads carried on the sport to an extent that led the gamekeepers to suspect that there were more and shrewder poachers in that part of the country than had ever been hounded out of it; but they never suspected that the ragged, barefooted boy, who whistled as he plucked the blackberries from the hedges, and would have been as familiar with the mariner's compass, had it been placed before him, as with a trout rod, creek reel line and cast of flies, was one of the licenseless culprits who caused the scarcity of trout.

"Yet so it was. When the keeper was well out of sight the small boy would throw away the blackberries which he had collected, but did not care to eat, and knowing by long experience where the big speckled fellows loved to lurk, he would dart to a deep still spot, well shaded, and where the bank overhung the water. Then, crawling to the edge, he would look cautiously over. If a trout was basking near the surface the dirty little hand, making no perceptible ripple in the stream, so carefully was it put in, was soon under it. The fingers were then raised until, with almost incredible gentleness, their points touched the trout's stomach, when a slight oscillation was commenced. This was the 'tickling' part of the maneuver. The boys thought the trout enjoyed it, but perhaps they supposed that it was only the weeds softly brushing them. Anyhow, it rarely disturbed them, and the hand gradually assumed a surer position, until, with a dexterous movement, swift as the lightning flash, the fish was cast out of the water, generally on the opposite bank. The probability is that the trout so captured is asleep, and, though its eyes are of course open, it can see nothing.

"I have often caught two dozen fine trout in a day after this fashion, and all the time kept a bright lookout that I was not caught myself; and while I was 'tickling' them I was carefully avoiding sportsmen who, not far away, were fruitlessly whipping the stream.

"The bear seems to capture his prey, as it were, by main strength. He just puts his claw under the fish and casts it out. The hook nosed salmon must be a stupid fellow to be so easily taken. The Irish boy has to be more artistic, so, perhaps, he taught the mode of fishing to the bears."—San Francisco Examiner.

Triumph of the Divining Rod.

One of the most recent triumphs of the divining rod in Britain has been at the Avondale docks. The company owning the docks having received an intimation that an American company proposed establishing a sugar factory near the docks, provided a good water supply could be secured, a certain Mr. Lawrence—who has the reputation of success as a water finder—was engaged to examine the neighboring ground. In this case the rod employed was a piece of spring steel, which was bent to the shape of a horseshoe, as the searcher, holding his elbows close to his sides, began to walk slowly over the field. After a while the steel became so violently agitated, and twisted itself with such force, that one of Mr. Lawrence's fingers was cut. He directed the company to commence boring at the spot thus indicated by the shedding of his blood, and the work was accordingly commenced. At the depth of 107 feet water was struck, and has since flowed at the rate of a thousand gallons per hour.

In New England, also, the location of wells is said to be frequently decided by the aid of the water twig. And moving westward, we are told that the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific railroad companies have, in crossing arid plains, been glad to avail themselves of the services of the divining rod in order to successfully locate their artesian wells.

Doubtless ere long this seemingly mysterious power will be scientifically explained. For the present, however, it remains among the number of unfathomed mysteries, of which a few still remain, to puzzle our wisest men and to provoke contemptuous sneers of those who (forgetting how little our great-grandparents knew of the forces of steam and electricity and how certain it is that nature still holds many a secret which science has yet failed to discover) believe that whatever is beyond their own power of understanding must necessarily be foolishness.—Miss Gordon Cumming in The Quiver.

THE DEPREDATING HEN.

Of all the things in nature that afflict the sons of men,
There is nothing that I know of beats the depredating hen;
If you see a wild eyed woman firing brickbats from the shed,
You can bet a hen has busted up her little flower bed.
She plunders and she scratches, she cackles and she hatches,
And forty thousand cowboys couldn't keep her in a pen;
She was sent on earth to fret us, to excoriate the lettuce;
She's a thero going nuisance, is the depredating hen.

I threw a brick and missed her, as she hustled out my beans,
But Julius Cæsar's statue was smashed to smithereens;
I saw her digging rifle pits where I'd put my pansies in,
I fired a good sized rock and hit my hired man on the shin.
She busts all bounds and shackles; she giggles and she cackles,
She makes me say some earnest things I haven't time to pen.
I never used bad language, but now I'm filled with anguage.
Alast I've broke the record, thro' that depredating hen.

But now thro' out my cabinet there floats a pleasant smell,
And the reason for that perfume isn't hard to tell;
For when I rose this morning, saw my cabbage bed a wreck,
I caught that depredating hen and fiercely wrung her neck;
I hear her fizz and crackle, no more she'll scratch and cackle,
Or make my summer garden look like some hyena's den,
She far too long has bossed me, she far too much has cost me,
I'll eat at luncheon time today a hundred dollar hen.

—The Khan.

The Whole Table Snickered.

We noticed a dear little bride with shy eyes that hardly dared lift themselves from the tablecloth, and such a habit of blushing that it even extended to the new husband sometimes and made him feel uncomfortable. He was a gentlemanly young fellow, with soft, white hands, blonde mustache and that carefully groomed appearance that well kept New York men show. The couple had evidently slipped down here to enjoy their honeymoon, sure that none of their friends would find them in such an out of the way place. They were never out of each other's sight for a moment, and the struggle they had to keep prying people at a distance was pathetic. A sharp faced woman from New Egypt sat at the same table with them. She had made up her mind to get acquainted. The long suffering couple answered her questions in polite monosyllables and turned away. Still she persisted. The talk ran somewhat like this:

"Live in York?" she asked.
"Yes," said he very quietly.
"In business there?" she persisted.
"Yes," in a still lower tone.
"Been there long?"
"Yes."
"What do you do for a living?"
"I drive a coal cart," very quietly and distinctly.

This was too much for even her case hardened feelings and she turned with a sniff of disgust. Even her dull comprehension could grasp the fact that the soft handed gentleman did not get his living that way. The whole table snickered, and for the remainder of their stay this bride and groom at least were let alone.—Cor. New York World.

White Races in Africa's Interior.

The statement contained in Rider Haggard's new novel, "Allan Quatermain," concerning the existence of white races in the interior of Africa, has received a most remarkable confirmation from the man who above all others is qualified to speak on the subject. Zebehr Pasha, the grand old slave king of Central Africa, whom the German traveler, Dr. Schweinfurth, describes in 1871 as living in a palace "where visitors were conducted through halls of state by richly dressed and attentive slaves, and where chained lions guarded the doors and soldiers in mail armor waited on his will," is now a captive in the British fortress of Gibraltar, whither he was deported from Egypt some two years ago in consequence of his suspected complicity in the Soudan rebellion.

Talking the other day to a correspondent about the slave countries on the White Nile which are entirely savage, he remarked: "At Sakara and Benghieh, in the very heart of the slave country, there are tribes as white as Europeans, with long and silky hair. The beards of the old men sometimes reach down to their feet." Zebehr, in describing others of the black tribes, asserts that cannibalism still prevails and that many of them eat none but human flesh. "Men and women are sold in the markets by the pound exactly as one sells mutton and beef. The old and fat are preferred. Sometimes they are sold dead and cut up."—New York World.

A Charity Concert in Paris.

The Paris correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph discovered how differently from London fashion things are ordered in France, when with Miss Van Zandt's aid he gave an entertainment at his home in the French capital, a few weeks ago, for the benefit of the Opera Comique relief fund. In London one can give in his house a charity concert for which tickets are sold, without the interference of any police authorities. Not so in Paris. The government, in various forms and divers ways, is constant in its attentions, or at least demands them from you. You wish, for instance, for the comfort of your guests, to have an awning over the sidewalk in front of your house. You must first obtain permission, and two special policemen will be detailed for service at the awning—at your expense. Then, when you are about to begin your little show, representatives of the Society of Authors and Composers and of the Public Charities appear to watch the receipts, upon which each levies a tax, the first named according to an established and authorized scale, the second according to a rigid law. It is possible to avoid or at least to secure reductions of either impost, but no end of correspondence and calls is necessary.—Boston Transcript.

Accumulation of Bonds.

An observing Washington gentleman has been examining the records and finds that the accumulation of government bonds is becoming marked. Interest checks are now sent to 39,000 persons, whereas not long ago 60,000 checks were issued on the same amount. The concentration of holdings in large cities is also noticeable.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TRICK OF "TICKLING" TROUT.

A Process Well Known Among the Boys of Ireland—Its Success.

"I was astonished to learn by Mr. Thorndyke's statement that the bears on the shores of Carbon river, at the base of the precipitous Mount Tacoma, have mastered the process of catching the hook nosed salmon by the art of 'tickling,'" said a gentleman who was born on the Emerald isle, and is proud of it. "I wonder whether the boys in Ireland taught it to them or learned it from them? I know when I was a youngster we Irish lads carried on the sport to an extent that led the gamekeepers to suspect that there were more and shrewder poachers in that part of the country than had ever been hounded out of it; but they never suspected that the ragged, barefooted boy, who whistled as he plucked the blackberries from the hedges, and would have been as familiar with the mariner's compass, had it been placed before him, as with a trout rod, creek reel line and cast of flies, was one of the licenseless culprits who caused the scarcity of trout.

"Yet so it was. When the keeper was well out of sight the small boy would throw away the blackberries which he had collected, but did not care to eat, and knowing by long experience where the big speckled fellows loved to lurk, he would dart to a deep still spot, well shaded, and where the bank overhung the water. Then, crawling to the edge, he would look cautiously over. If a trout was basking near the surface the dirty little hand, making no perceptible ripple in the stream, so carefully was it put in, was soon under it. The fingers were then raised until, with almost incredible gentleness, their points touched the trout's stomach, when a slight oscillation was commenced. This was the 'tickling' part of the maneuver. The boys thought the trout enjoyed it, but perhaps they supposed that it was only the weeds softly brushing them. Anyhow, it rarely disturbed them, and the hand gradually assumed a surer position, until, with a dexterous movement, swift as the lightning flash, the fish was cast out of the water, generally on the opposite bank. The probability is that the trout so captured is asleep, and, though its eyes are of course open, it can see nothing.

"I have often caught two dozen fine trout in a day after this fashion, and all the time kept a bright lookout that I was not caught myself; and while I was 'tickling' them I was carefully avoiding sportsmen who, not far away, were fruitlessly whipping the stream.

"The bear seems to capture his prey, as it were, by main strength. He just puts his claw under the fish and casts it out. The hook nosed salmon must be a stupid fellow to be so easily taken. The Irish boy has to be more artistic, so, perhaps, he taught the mode of fishing to the bears."—San Francisco Examiner.

Triumph of the Divining Rod.

One of the most recent triumphs of the divining rod in Britain has been at the Avondale docks. The company owning the docks having received an intimation that an American company proposed establishing a sugar factory near the docks, provided a good water supply could be secured, a certain Mr. Lawrence—who has the reputation of success as a water finder—was engaged to examine the neighboring ground. In this case the rod employed was a piece of spring steel, which was bent to the shape of a horseshoe, as the searcher, holding his elbows close to his sides, began to walk slowly over the field. After a while the steel became so violently agitated, and twisted itself with such force, that one of Mr. Lawrence's fingers was cut. He directed the company to commence boring at the spot thus indicated by the shedding of his blood, and the work was accordingly commenced. At the depth of 107 feet water was struck, and has since flowed at the rate of a thousand gallons per hour.

In New England, also, the location of wells is said to be frequently decided by the aid of the water twig. And moving westward, we are told that the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific railroad companies have, in crossing arid plains, been glad to avail themselves of the services of the divining rod in order to successfully locate their artesian wells.

Doubtless ere long this seemingly mysterious power will be scientifically explained. For the present, however, it remains among the number of unfathomed mysteries, of which a few still remain, to puzzle our wisest men and to provoke contemptuous sneers of those who (forgetting how little our great-grandparents knew of the forces of steam and electricity and how certain it is that nature still holds many a secret which science has yet failed to discover) believe that whatever is beyond their own power of understanding must necessarily be foolishness.—Miss Gordon Cumming in The Quiver.

THE DEPREDATING HEN.

Of all the things in nature that afflict the sons of men,
There is nothing that I know of beats the depredating hen;
If you see a wild eyed woman firing brickbats from the shed,
You can bet a hen has busted up her little flower bed.

She plunders and she scratches, she cackles and she hatches,
And forty thousand cowboys couldn't keep her in a pen;
She was sent on earth to fret us, to excoriate the lettuce;
She's a thoro' going nuisance, is the depredating hen.

I threw a brick and missed her, as she hustled out my beans,
But Julius Cæsar's statue was smashed to smithereens;
I saw her digging rifle pits where I'd put my pansies in,
I fired a good sized rock and hit my hired man on the shin.

She busts all bounds and shackles, she giggles and she cackles,
She makes me say some earnest things I haven't time to pen.
I never used bad language, but now I'm filled with anguage.
Alas! I've broke the record, thro' that depredating hen.

But now thro' out my cabinet there floats a pleasant smell,
And the reason for that perfume isn't hard to tell;
For when I rose this morning, saw my cabbage bed a wreck,
I caught that depredating hen and fiercely wrung her neck;

I hear her fizz and crackle, no more she'll scratch and cackle,
Or make my summer garden look like some hyena's den,
She far too long has bossed me, she far too much has cost me,
I'll eat at luncheon time today a hundred dollar hen.
—The Khan.

The Whole Table Snickered.

We noticed a dear little bride with shy eyes that hardly dared lift themselves from the tablecloth, and such a habit of blushing that it even extended to the new husband sometimes and made him feel uncomfortable. He was a gentlemanly young fellow, with soft, white hands, blonde mustache and that carefully groomed appearance that well kept New York men show. The couple had evidently slipped down here to enjoy their honeymoon, sure that none of their friends would find them in such an out of the way place. They were never out of each other's sight for a moment, and the struggle they had to keep prying people at a distance was pathetic. A sharp faced woman from New Egypt sat at the same table with them. She had made up her mind to get acquainted. The long suffering couple answered her questions in polite monosyllables and turned away. Still she persisted. The talk ran somewhat like this:

"Live in York?" she asked.
"Yes," said he very quietly.
"In business there?" she persisted.
"Yes," in a still lower tone.
"Been there long?"
"Yes."
"What do you do for a living?"
"I drive a coal cart," very quietly and distinctly.

This was too much for even her case hardened feelings and she turned with a sniff of disgust. Even her dull comprehension could grasp the fact that the soft handed gentleman did not get his living that way. The whole table snickered, and for the remainder of their stay this bride and groom at least were let alone.—Cor. New York World.

White Races in Africa's Interior.

The statement contained in Rider Haggard's new novel, "Allan Quatermain," concerning the existence of white races in the interior of Africa, has received a most remarkable confirmation from the man who above all others is qualified to speak on the subject. Zebehr Pasha, the grand old slave king of Central Africa, whom the German traveler, Dr. Schweinfurth, describes in 1871 as living in a palace "where visitors were conducted through halls of state by richly dressed and attentive slaves, and where chained lions guarded the doors and soldiers in mail armor waited on his will," is now a captive in the British fortress of Gibraltar, whither he was deported from Egypt some two years ago in consequence of his suspected complicity in the Soudan rebellion.

Talking the other day to a correspondent about the slave countries on the White Nile which are entirely savage, he remarked: "At Sakara and Benghieh, in the very heart of the slave country, there are tribes as white as Europeans, with long and silky hair. The beards of the old men sometimes reach down to their feet." Zebehr, in describing others of the black tribes, asserts that cannibalism still prevails and that many of them eat none but human flesh. "Men and women are sold in the markets by the pound exactly as one sells mutton and beef. The old and fat are preferred. Sometimes they are sold dead and cut up."—New York World.

A Charity Concert in Paris.

The Paris correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph discovered how differently from London fashion things are ordered in France, when with Miss Van Zandt's aid he gave an entertainment at his home in the French capital, a few weeks ago, for the benefit of the Opera Comique relief fund. In London one can give in his house a charity concert for which tickets are sold, without the interference of any police authorities. Not so in Paris. The government, in various forms and divers ways, is constant in its attentions, or at least demands them from you. You wish, for instance, for the comfort of your guests, to have an awning over the sidewalk in front of your house. You must first obtain permission, and two special policemen will be detailed for service at the awning—at your expense. Then, when you are about to begin your little show, representatives of the Society of Authors and Composers and of the Public Charities appear to watch the receipts, upon which each levies a tax, the first named according to an established and authorized scale, the second according to a rigid law. It is possible to avoid or at least to secure reductions of either impost, but no end of correspondence and calls is necessary.—Boston Transcript.

Accumulation of Bonds.

An observing Washington gentleman has been examining the records and finds that the accumulation of government bonds is becoming marked. Interest checks are now sent to 39,000 persons, whereas not long ago 60,000 checks were issued on the same amount. The concentration of holdings in large cities is also noticeable.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A. C. A. CAMP.

Annual Meeting of the Northern Division at Stoney Lake.

A. C. A CAMP, JUNIPER ISLAND, Aug. 10.—There was so little wind yesterday that the sailing races had to be postponed.

The first race was paddling in open or decked canoes, with any blade. The places were as follows:—

1st. H. F. McKendrick, U.C.C., Doubtful.
2nd. W. A. Leys, T.C.C., Dawn.
3rd. D. Strickland, L.C.C., Mabel.
4th. J. N. McKendrick, U.C.C., Mamac.
5th. Colin Fraser, U.C.C., Una.

Harry McKendrick was an easy winner.

There followed a paddling race for decked sailing canoes with centreboard. The result was as follows:—

1st. W. A. Leys, Toronto C. C., Dawn.
2nd. W. Lister, Lakefield C. C., Wa wa.

Leys won without any trouble.

The next race was a paddling race for three paddlers in a canoe, any class or paddle. They were placed as follows:—

1st	P. W. Strickland, L.C.C. H. S. Greenwood, R.M.C. A. Blade, Peterborough.	Junebug
2nd	D. Strickland. R.C.Strickland Dr. Douglas.	Lakefield, Boschink...
3rd	H. F. McKendrick. J. N. McKendrick. W. A. Fraser.	U.C.C., Mamac.

This was a very good race, with a close struggle between first and second. The McKendricks lost ground for want of good steering.

Then followed a tandem paddling race for lady and gentleman. They were placed as follows:—

1st.	Mrs. Wright Dr. Douglas	Orphe.
2nd.	Miss Topsy Hall H. F. McKendrick	Doubtful.
3rd.	Miss Blomfield Darcy Strickland	Mabel.

The Orphe led from the start to the finish. The Doubtful and Mabel had a close contest for second place. The ladies gave such efficient assistance that the pace was good throughout the half-mile course. All in the three canoes placed used the double blade Mr. A. I. Wright and Miss Emma Strickland also started, using the single blade, but did not finish.

There was next a portage race, with a bad landing, a carry over shelving granite rock and a worse place for a fresh start. The judges placed them as follows:—

1st. H. S. Greenwood, R. M. C. C. C., Imp.
2nd. Percy W. Strickland, Lakefield C. C., Dinah.

Greenwood and Blade, who also started, were in the water after a rapid portage about the same time and raced for the winning buoy, Blade being ruled out by the judges for fouling. Strickland was impeded by canoes of spectators on re-taking the water, but paddling over the course was awarded second place.

Next came a "catch the duck." Allan Bell represented the duck so successfully as to win by remaining uncaught for five minutes. His pursuers were Messrs. J. N. McKendrick, Darcy Strickland, W. Lister, J. Speer and D. A. Burgess and starting after him overtook the "duck" before he reached, in his light canvas canoe with sculls, the rock on which he was seeking refuge. Just when Strickland was almost within reach Bell took to the water, dived under Strickland's canoe and neatly capsized it. He then took to the rock, where he was nearly caught by McKendrick, who, however, could not do so till the duck took to the water and was safe. There was some skirmishing on and about the rock, in which Lister was also upset before the signal proclaimed the time expired and the duck the winner.

It was now announced that Judge Dartnell had offered two belts for the winners in a race for boys under fifteen. There were six entries, the judges placing them as follows:—

1st	Edmund Tate, Fred Lefevre,	Lakefield.
2nd	W. Cox, Fred Tanner,	Lakefield.
3rd	Jack Fairbairn, Sanford Smith,	Peterborough.
4th	Fred Anderson, Bert Jaffray,	Toronto.
5th	Fred Cox, Gus Sawers,	Peterborough.
6th	Archie Reid, Fred Roxburgh,	Norwood.

Tate and Lefevre, who were at least as young as any other pair, paddled remarkably well, and increased to the end the lead they had soon taken. After the second canoe, the others came in very close together. All paddled creditably.

A. C. A. CAMP, JUNIPER ISLAND, Aug. 10, 4 p.m.—There was so little wind to day, and that little so shifting that the remaining races under sail were postponed.

Many of the members went for little excursions, among others a large party going to Burleigh to inspect the locks and other works there for the Trent Valley Canal.

FINAL WINDING UP.

The Oddfellows Meeting Over—Notes of the Days.

The meeting of the Ontario Grand Lodge of Oddfellows came to a close on Friday evening, when the delegates were all paid off, secured their gripsacks and made their way in crowds to the railway depots.

The principal business before the Lodge in the afternoon was the instalation of officers, which ceremony was performed by the retiring Grand Master, John O. Donugh. The list of Grand Officers are as follows:—

J. R. Read, Brockville.....Grand Master
E. R. Robinson, London Deputy Grand Master
J. B. King, (re-elected).....Grand Secretary
Wm. Badenach, (re-elected) Grand Treasurer
Dr. Bell, Peterborough.....Grand Warder
Dr. C. T. Campbell } Representatives to the
W. McDermid } Sovereign Grand Lodge
Chas. Packet, Toronto .....Grand Auditor
Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, Toronto ..Grand Marshall
R. Brockbank, Paris .....Grand Conductor
A. Jardon, Prescott .....Grand Herald
Geo. T. Bickle, Cobourg.....Grand Guardian
Rev. J. H. Simpson, Brucefield, Grand Chaplain

The distribution of districts occupied the attention of the Grand Lodge for a considerable time.

It is a pleasant thing to announce that after all the expense that has been gone to the receipts will meet, or almost meet it. A larger amount was expected to be forthcoming as receipts at the promenade concerts, considering the excellence of the performances, but the deficiency there was made up at the Driving Park, the total receipts at which will foot up close to a $1,000. The receipts at both promenade concerts was about $380. The total expenses were $2,200. The $200 given by the town and other sources of revenue will pretty nearly close the gap.

In connection with the demonstration, too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the ladies. They seemed to take as much interest as anyone in making the demonstration a success. The Oddfellows owe them their deepest thanks for the valuable assistance given.

The cantons which visited town on Wednesday all had their distinguishing features. The Montrealers were conspicuous for their gallantry; the Londoners wore cuffs on their boots, and won applause for excellent drill; the Torontonians mustered the largest number and are such fine looking fellows that all of the girls were falling in love with them; The Capitals had a name that embarrassed everybody who tried to get their tongues around it—Outaouais. Lieut. Hooper became frantic in trying to tell people how to pronounce it, and the more he told them the more they couldn't pronounce it. They were sure to get it "Octavious" or "Outuvious" or something just as ridiculous. The proper pronunciation is "Ootawa," with the accent on the first syllable. It is the Indian name for Ottawa and is pronounced nearly the same. The distinguishing characteristics of the Newmarketers was that they couldn't leave town. They saw the thing through to the last and sighed as they boarded the train.

The decorations were elaborate, reflecting the greatest credit upon Mr. Watson and staff. George street never wore a more artistically designed dress than on August 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th.

The illuminations were equally brilliant. Special notice is due to Messrs. T. E. Boddy, of the Canadian Pacific up-town office, W. H. Chamberlain, H. LeBrun, A. Hall and James Stevenson for the pretty designs in gaslight they put forward to make the street look its best. Also do the Electric Light Company deserve the thanks of the Oddfellows for generously giving their quota to the illumination.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

THE SEMI-TONTINE RETURN PREMIUM PLAN

Provides that should death occur prior to the expiration of the Tontine period the whole of the premiums that have been paid will be payable with, and in addition to, the face of the policy—thus securing a dividend of 100 per cent. on the premiums paid, should death occur during said period.

THE COMMERCIAL PLAN.

The large number of business and professional men who have taken out large policies on the Company's Commercial Plan, show the demand for reliable life insurance, relieved of much of the investment elements which constitutes the over payments of the ordinary plans, is not confined to men of small incomes, but exists among all classes of our people.

THE RAILWAY DISASTER.

More Deaths Among the Victims—The Incendiary Theory Discredited.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Of the victims of the Chatsworth disaster the unidentified are being held at Peoria. All the wounded able to move, except those in private houses, have been taken to Peoria. Seven, however, yet remain in the city in the building used as the City Hall and engine house. Three of them will certainly die, with possibly a fourth. Few of the wounded have as yet been removed from the hospital at Piper city. Some improvement is noted in the condition of most of them. Two, however, are past all hope.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., Aug. 13.—During the morning the condition of the six wounded survivors in the Town Hall has changed for the worse. Mortification has set in in most of the cases and the physicians fear that of the six only two can recover. Mrs. Peter Valentine, of Peoria, died at Piper City at noon. She was terribly injured.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—A Times special from Champaign, Ill., says:—J. O. Baker, President of the Illinois Society of Engineers and Professor of Civil Engineering in the University of Illinois, returned last night from a careful examination of the engineering problems of the Chatsworth disaster and an examination of the condition of the bridges and culverts and protection from fire given these culverts by the road officials and track hands. He favored the Times correspondent with the following: "The incendiary theory has no foundation whatever. I am unable personally to find any citizen of Chatsworth who have seen suspicious characters loitering about. The flames of the burning culvert were plainly seen from Chatsworth at intervals for several hours before the accident. From the lay of the land they must have risen five or six feet above the track to have been seen so far. It is plain that an attempt had been made to protect the bridges of the road from fire, but a personal inspection of the other culverts in that vicinity shows that it was not done so as to afford complete protection. A personal inspection along the line of the road for several miles shows that the grass and weeds were not all burned off, but many patches left unburned and in the immediate vicinity it was more carelessly done than elsewhere. The culvert itself was of the usual build and of abundant strength to carry the train but for the fire which had destroyed the lower portion.

HANLAN BEATEN.

John Teemer Rows Faster than Hanlan on Toronto Bay.

The three mile race on Toronto Bay on Saturday resulted in a victory for Teemer. The race started at about half-past five, Teemer taking the water at once and getting an advantage, which he increased before the turning buoy was reached. Hanlan rowed pluckily, pulling steadily and hard, but he could not overtake his opponent, although he crowded him over the whole course. Teemer came in ahead by a length and a half of clear water. The time was 19.31.

Fire at Bobcaygeon.

BOBCAYGEON, Aug. 14.—Mr. Irvine Junkin, postmaster of this village, had his dwelling and outbuildings destroyed by fire about 3 o'clock this morning. The family had a narrow escape from being burned to death, the rear part of the building being all in flames when first discovered. Most of the furniture in the front part of the building was saved. Insured in the Western for $1,000. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary.

TWENTY MILLION DOLLARS.

The Liabilities of a Young Man Who Hadn't a Cent Five Years Ago.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The firm of Henry S. Ives & Co. yesterday made a formal assignment to one of their counsel. Their liabilities are estimated at upwards of $20,000,000. The assets are of such a character that it is impossible to tell what their value may be. The assignment was not a surprise to Wall street, and was received with demonstrations of joy in the Stock Exchange. It is the culmination of the extraordinary series of negotiations and monstrous juggling with railroad properties which have held the attention of Wall street for several months. It will be a long and tedious labor for lawyers and experts to unravel the Gordian knot which "the young Napoleon of Finance" has succeeded in tying up the affairs of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and the various other railroads brought into relation with it in the furtherance of Ives' ambitious schemes for securing control of the Baltimore and Ohio trunk line.

When the failure was announced on Wall street the Stock Exchange people were joyous. Twenty millions! The figures were astounding. But nobody appeared to question the possibility that the quiet, rosy cheeked boy of 26, who, five years ago was working for $10 a week, had really been able to run into debt to the tune of $20,000,000. The biggest actual creditor and the heaviest loser by the Ives bubbles will be the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton. The stockholders are out in the snug sum of $6,700,000. There was about $2,200,000 in cash in the treasury when Ives came into the control, all of which is missing. Then he has used about $4,500,000 of the preferred stock of the company.

Twice he was suspended for crooked dealings on Change. But when Mr. Ives began to buy whole railroads and borrow money by the millions and make a great stir generally, his firm was again recognized, and Mr. Doremus, his suspended partner, still holding to the obnoxious partnership, was again admitted to the Stock Exchange—"whitewashed," as they call it. This was four or five weeks ago. District Attorney Martine says he will inquire into Ives' methods as he did into Ferdinand Ward's, who is now in penitentiary.

THEY WILL CO-OPERATE.

British War Vessels to Aid in Protecting Canadian Fisheries.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Aug. 13.—The Minister of Fisheries, Hon. Mr. Foster, on being asked if it was true that Imperial war vessels would assist in protecting Canada's fisheries, replied: "If you will refer to the fishery correspondence laid on the table of the House of Commons last spring you will see that the British Government was, in 1886, asked to support the operations of our cruisers by the presence and co-operation of their war vessels. While not acceding to the request, so far as last year's work was concerned, the Secretary of State said, in reply, that if the protection service was continued another season the required support would be extended. In pursuance of this promise, I have received a notification of the instruction to be issued by the British Admiralty for the guidance of vessels of the North American squadron coming in our waters These are very satisfactory, and fully sustain the position taken by Canada, and under these British vessels will doubtless cooperate in the protection of our fisheries."

"It is not proposed to substitute steam launches for the cruisers at present employed during this season. If the service has to be continued whatever changes experience shows to be in the direction of efficiency will be made, and it is not improbable that the employment of small steam launches will be one of them. My interview with Admiral Luce was altogether informal and certainly pleasant. I found him very affable and thoroughly frank. We discussed several points of the Canadian regulations in relation to their practical application to United States fishing vessels. The admiral appeared desirous of thoroughly understanding the Canadian position, and while he does not abate anything from the standard American contention, he is disposed to discountenance infractions of law by the fishing vessels of his country, and to assist them by information and advice to avoid detention and seizure."

A Mysterious Affair.

On Monday morning of last week Samuel Leslie found a woman's hat near the 6th concession of Thurlow, on a cross road running from the 5th to the 6th concession, near the Bronk cheese factory. Half a mile further south, as he passed through Royal Sheffield's woods, he came upon a number of articles of female wearing apparel, which were torn and had blood stains. There was also a man's tie with the other articles. How the clothing got there, and to whom it belongs, is shrouded in mystery. The find has created considerable excitement in the neighborhood, but diligent enquiry has not been rewarded with anything like a clue to the case.—Belleville Intelligencer.

Union of Christian Churches.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 13.—The proceedings in connection with the annual meeting of the Provincial Synod of the Church of England were brought to a close last night, when a meeting was held in connection with the centenary celebration of the first Episcopal bishop in Canada. A resolution was passed in the direction of the union of all Christian churches, and a committee was appointed to forward it. It was decided to create a new diocese of Calgary, by the division of the Diocese of Saskatchewan, and of which Bishop Pinkman will have temporary charge.

PRINCE FERDINAND'S PROGRESS.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The progress of Prince Ferdinand toward the Bulgarian capital greatly excites the Turkish ministry, and for the last two days they have been in almost continuous session without arriving at any definite conclusion as to a plan of action so far as can be learned. This may be a "blind," however, as it is certain that the Porte has announced its intention of occupying Bulgaria if Prince Ferdinand persists in carrying out his intention of assuming the throne, and the Porte having gone thus far it is difficult to believe that the Turkish programme is not fully agreed upon and endorsed by Russia at that. The report from Rustchuk that Prince Ferdinand had concluded to forego his journey and return home appears to have been premature, but it would surprise nobody to hear of its confirmation.

OBSTRUCTION THREATENED.

LONDON, Aug 13.—Mr. Parnell's powerful utterances in the House of Commons last night in rejecting the amendments of the House of Lords to the Land Bill and his emphatic manner while speaking, implies that he does not care for the passage of the measure in its present shape, and would rather the matter should go over to a later session. In dealing with the question of reducing rents the Lords have gone over the grounds which the Government party did not deem it expedient to traverse, and in some respects the action of the upper house places the Tories in the lower body in an embarrassing position. Absolute insistance on the part of the Government leaders in the Commons that the Lords' amendments shall be adopted will precipitate an obstructionist fight on the part of the Parnellites and greatly imperil the Government's success in carrying out its programme of a recess a fortnight hence. The absent Parnellite members are coming back by twos and threes, and the Nationalist party will be present in full strength when the Lords' reduction amendment is taken up on Monday.

THE MIDLAND STRIKE.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The directors of the Midland Railway publish a statement admitting that the strike of their engineers and firemen has cost the company $500,000, but declaring that ten times that sum would not offset the necessity for maintaining discipline among the employees of the line and arguing therefore that the loss is trivial compared with the interests at stake and the results gained.

BLAINE OF MAINE.

DUBLIN, Aug 13.—Mr. Blaine's hurried departure from Ireland puzzles the National League greatly. They had hoped, and, indeed, were led to believe that he would deliver one or two speeches before leaving the country, from which they might derive assurance that the sympathy with Ireland which he is credited with entertaining, was really genuine. But the complications of the Irish situation, as viewed in Ireland, evidently unnerved the American statesman, and induced him to refrain from committing himself.

CANALS.

EVEN now, in spite of all the evidence to the contrary, we sometimes hear those who ought to know better remarking that the days of canals are passed, and that railways have superseded inland navigation.

At a convention held not long ago at Rochester by the advocates of canal improvement no encouragement was given to this erroneous idea. Three hundred delegates, many of whom were men of high standing, passed resolutions in favor of the enlargement and improvement of the system, and acknowledging the great benefits derived from the Erie Canal.

One of these resolutions is so striking and so directly applicable to our own case, that we beg to lay it before our readers. It ran as follows:—

"Resolved, -In the judgment of this convention, that the State of New York is indebted for its commercial supremacy to its peculiar and fortunate geographical location between the great lakes, nature's highway on the north and west, and the Hudson River, an arm of the ocean, on the east, and to the sagacity and enterprise of Governor Clinton and his contemporaries in connecting the same in 1825 in one grand system of canals, by means of which the great and constantly increasing trade of the producing Northwest and Canada is secured to the state and city of New York, now the metropolis of the nation."

What the Erie Canal has done for New York, the Trent Valley Canal will do for Montreal. Not only will it shorten and render more secure and convenient the route from the Northwest to the mouth of the St. Lawrence, but it will also largely counteract the successful efforts of Governor Clinton to divert traffic from Canadian ports to his own State. Our own costly canal system on the main stream of the St. Lawrence has greatly tended to aid the design of Governor Clinton, for it has actually brought traffic to the Erie Canal and New York that would otherwise have gone to Canadian ports. On the other hand the Trent Valley Canal, which will render possible cheap barge navigation from Lake Huron to Montreal, while carrying the traffic far away from the entrances of the Erie Canal, will divert this traffic to the St. Lawrence ports rather than to New York. This is so evidently for the general benefit of the Dominion that no obstacle should be allowed to impede the speedy completion of this important public work.

CUSTOM HOUSES.

AFTER remarking that "the least that should be expected of customs officers is that they should collect revenue enough to pay their own salaries," the Ottawa Free Press attacks the Dominion Government because of several ports in which this is not the case. It concludes:—

"If the expenses at the ports mentioned cannot be cut down, it will be for the tax-payers of the country to consider whether their interests would not be served by closing them up. It is true that a few officials would be obliged to seek other employment, but customs outports are supposed to be established for the purpose of collecting revenue, and not as a means of furnishing easy and lucrative employment for political favorites."

A very complete answer to this is given in the following quotation from the Toronto Globe:—

"American whalers are not only allowed access to Hudson Bay, but have presumed to carry on trade in defiance of Canadian customs laws. This must be put a stop to, though the expenses of suppressing the illicit trade may be greater than the collections."

The bulk of the duties received throughout Canada, especially in the larger ports, would fall off materially if through short-sighted parsimony the staff of custom officers in smaller ports and outlying districts were reduced so as to be inefficient. It may well happen that the necessary expenses at certain ports may exceed the receipts at that particular point, while contributing to protect the general revenue.

As to the Hudson Bay we fully agree with the Globe that provision should be made for the prevention of smuggling as well as of poaching, and that without l ng delay. The expenditure would be judicious even if there were no immediate return.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

THE COUNTERFEITER.

TALK WITH BROCKWAY, THE FAMOUS MAKER OF "QUEER."

Successful Imitation of the Famous '81 Bonds—Copying the Elaborate Lathe Work on the Greenback—Counterfeiting Foreign Moneys—Bank Notes.

Among the men who have been classed as great criminals no one has had wider fame than William E. Brockway. He has been a very rich man, he is a very clever one, his years approach 70, he is just ending a short sentence in Sing Sing. Is he a great crook? I do not know. I have been accustomed to meet him in a journalistic way at intervals reaching over ten years, and once I asked him if he was a great rascal. He said no. I am not bound to believe him, nor are you; but I never knew him to lie in anything, and I am bound to believe that he does not regard himself as a bad man.

Brockway is credited with the counterfeiting of the famous '81 bonds. It was not his biggest job by any means, but it was successful. They were bonds issued by the government early in 1861, and the treasury department redeemed no end of the bogus ones before accident betrayed them. These bonds were not registered, and the plates from which they were taken were never found. Indeed, the supposition almost takes the power of positive statement that the original plates were used with the guilty knowledge of a then official who lives now in great splendor in London and is a frequent guest in Marlboro house and at Sandringham. However that may be, the fact remains that the United States treasury did buy bogus bonds under the administration of Salmon P. Chase, and these bonds, if not counterfeit, were illegal.

WON'T TELL IT ALL.

It is something more than can reasonably be expected that Brockway will tell all he knows, and even if he did he would, as is customary with his guild, hint at so much unrevealed that his interviewer could never know when he had pumped him dry. For example, he says that the white line which encircles the seal of scroll work, called th counter, on the national currency is named as one of the actual protections against counterfeiting—as a matter of fact the skillful counterfeiter has no difficulty in printing that line white. I asked him how they did it, but he said there were enough who didn't know how to make the knowledge too valuable for newspaper columns. I asked him for his opinion as an expert of the security of the paper currency.

"There are no experts," he said; "there are good judges of paper money. I used to be a fair judge, but no expert can tell the difference between two lines made by a ruling machine. The geometrical lathe work which is the great security on bank work is mechanically cut with a lathe that costs from $3,000 to $8,000. Witnesses, called as experts, have sworn that this work can't be imitated, but there are a dozen men in New York who can make so perfect a copy of it that he who made the original can't tell it, and the imitator need not be an artist either. But that is not a great danger to paper money. The different styles of chemical engraving are now almost familiar knowledge, and it is well known that by such processes the elaborate lathe work on the greenback can be copied as accurately as manuscript can be copied photographically, and when printed in carbon or colored inks are about equal to the original.

IMITATING SCROLL WORK.

"The fact is a man cannot make that which a less able man cannot counterfeit, although he could not create the original. For example, if you will examine the scroll cut by the geometrical lathe you will see in the seal that some eight parts are all duplicates of the other, that in these divisions there is simply a repetition of the same forms and intersections. The imitator in cutting his plate would certainly never go to the trouble of cutting a complete circle. He would make one of the divisions and then repeat it in the chemical printing. The most difficult thing to make in counterfeiting are the likenesses. The infinite variety of human expression, which can be created by a line, the faintest shadow, the merest deviation in the angle of a curve of the lip, the set of the nostrils, are so far from arbitrary that one can only be copied with infinite pains."

"What is an approximate figure representing the amount of foreign moneys counterfeited here?"

"It is enormous. I have the authority of the Brazilian minister for the statement that $200,000,000 of counterfeit money is circulated in Brazil. Money for the South American countries has all been liberally counterfeited, and even Bank of England notes. But it is a curious fact that the counterfeited money of foreign countries emanating from here is nearly exclusively of those who have come here to have their money made.

"Bank note counterfeiting was most prevalent during the reign of the state banks, but the boys had to hurry up or the bank would fail before they could get their stuff out. I was caught twice in that way and had no redress, as the banks had no assets. The counterfeits then were generally poor and there was seldom an attempt at imitation. When an imitation was attempted by an amateur, who had picked up engraving, he would select his note, oil it to make it transparent, paste it on a plate face down, and with a fine needle (using a microscope) he would prick through the lines on the note and then follow the dots with a graver, which would reproduce the lines. Of course the exquisite etching of the landscape, the beautiful lines of the portraits and the delicate ruling were lost, but there were very few of the dear public who could tell a hawk from a handsaw."—New York Cor. Philadelphia Times.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

The Winnipeg gentlemen who were induced to go into the scheme are now sorry they had anything to do with it, and Mr. Gibbons, who took a contract to string wires and erect poles, is minus a considerable amount through the failure of Wallace to carry out his agreements. LEGEND OF KUNAI.

Many years ago, when I was in the army, my regiment was suddenly ordered to India. We were stationed in the Bengal presidency. Shortly after our arrival in the country, when I was quite a griff, I was sent with a detachment of men to a place called Fort Kunai, situated on the banks of the Ganges. At that time this was one of the most dreary stations I have ever been at. Everything about it reminded one of its past greatness, which contrasted painfully with its present desolation. It was built on a small hill, at a point where the river takes a sudden bend; and from our quarters the Ganges could be seen wending its way for a considerable distance on each side.

At the time that I was stationed there the only European inhabitants consisted of the colonel commanding, the padre, the doctor and myself. Shortly after that the colonel went on leave, and I took over command. Then the padre was ordered to another station, and his duties also devolved on me. Finally, the relief of the doctor was ordered; but as I was not skilled in medicine, another was to replace him. The doctor had two very nice spaniels that I had taken a great fancy to; and as he did not wish to take them away with him, he presented both of them to me shortly before he left. I must tell you that, in India the man who usually looks after one's dogs is the mahter or sweeper, a man of very low caste, or perhaps of no caste at all. These men often become absurdly fond of the animals under their charge; and Tajoo, the doctor's sweeper, was no exception to the general rule. The parting between him and Beauty and Bouncer was most affecting. Lest they should get away and follow him I shut them up in the one remaining room of the old palace in which the rajahs formerly used to live. It was an odd looking room in its way, and no one lived in it then. It was approached by a flight of well worn stone steps, and was probably used in former times as a lookout tower. The floor consisted of large flagstones; the walls were of solid masonry about three feet thick; the roof was vaulted. There was at that time but one small window—the rest being walled up—and that looked onto the Ganges. A metal ring was fastened to one of the flagstones, and to this I tied the dogs.

The next day Tajoo came to my room in a state of considerable excitement. He had brought a note—or chitti, as they call it in those parts—from the doctor for me, and had evidently noticed something on his arrival which exercised him greatly. In the intervals between his numerous salams he wrung his hands and jabbered away in a most incomprehensible manner. I occasionally detected the words kutta and kutti in his incoherent ramblings, so knew he must be saying something about the dogs, that word being the Hindustani for dog.

It appears that in the days of the East India company some soldiers, while out shooting, were met by a party of villagers in the neighborhood of Kunai. A quarrel ensued, which was followed by a fight, and a European was killed. The quarrel arose out of the Europeans having killed a peacock, which is a sacred bird in that part of India. The villagers took refuge in the fort. The rajah of Kunai was called upon to give them up to justice; but he, secure in his fortress, bade the messengers return and tell their sahib to come and fetch them himself—if he could. Only one result could follow such a reply. The East India company had long cast an envious eye on this strong and powerful fort. This was an opportunity not to be neglected. An army was sent to subdue the imperious rajah, and his territory was proclaimed. The fort was soon besieged.

For many weary months the siege went on. Kunai would never have been taken had there not been a traitor within its gates. The rajah had a lieutenant, by name Muttri, in whom he placed the greatest confidence. Though Muttri feigned the utmost devotion for his lord, his heart was black with treachery, for he had dared to lift his eyes to the beautiful ranee, and he loved her. Day and night he cherished his passion, and thought how he could make her his own. All the favors that he owed to the rajah's generosity were forgotten. Love alone for the Ranee burned in his soul, absorbing every other passion. At last a plan suggested itself to Muttri's mind by which he thought he could gain his ends. Among the garrison were certain relatives of his own. He took them into his confidence, and a promise of a large reward made them his devoted tools. That night, when all were at rest except the sentries, a swift messenger left the fort for the English camp. He returned unperceived, and was admitted by Muttri. The reply he brought was favorable. Muttri's black eyes gleamed with savage delight.

A few nights afterward Muttri and his friends were all on guard at the principal entrance to the fort. While the rajah was sleeping in fancied security, stealthy steps approached; the gates were silently opened; one by one the English soldiers crept in, and still the rajah slept. Then came a sudden shout, followed by a heartrending cry. One of the the soldiers on guard at the palace, within the citadel, had seen the intruders and gave the alarm at the same moment that he received his death wound. Then, in that still night, followed the din of war and the clashing of arms, confusion and dismay. The victory was not a bloodless one, for the rajah, at the head of a few stanch adherents, fought desperately, with all the courage of despair, while the ranee, with her young child, was being lowered from the walls overhanging the river. She escaped by way of the Ganges. Shortly afterward her gallant lord fell mortally wounded.

In the morning the English were masters of the fort. The heads of the villagers who had killed the Europeans were hung over the gateway by which they had entered. War in those days was a much more savage game than it is now. Then Muttri claimed the fulfillment of his compact, which was, that his life and those of his friends should be spared; also, that he was to be left in command of the fort. The English were in such sore straits when they were offered these conditions that they were only too glad to accept them; so they retired, and Muttri ruled in place of his master. But with power was only another name for tyranny.

The ranee in the meantime, hearing that the English had withdrawn, collected a great force and led it in person on Kunai. On her arrival the gates were joyfully flung open by the garrison; the traitor Muttri was made a prisoner by his own servants. He was brought before the ranee to receive the sentence that his perfidy deserved. Before she could utter a word he flung himself at her feet and poured forth his tale of love with all the ardor of a pent up passion suddenly broken loose. His story made his traitorous act appear doubly black. The Ranee heard him in severe silence; then a smile of bitter scorn curled her lips, and she briefly pronounced his doom. Muttri was a brave man; but even he shuddered to hear his fate. At a sign from the Ranee he was removed. The Ranee had decreed that never from that moment was he to taste water or other liquid again.

He was taken to the room that I have described as being now the only one of the old palace left standing. There his terrible sufferings soon began. Chained to the ring in the flagstone that still remains, his chain was just long enough to admit of his dragging himself to the window to watch the Ganges flowing ceaselessly by. He could hear it rippling and gurgling as it passed, while his parched lips hungered for a few drops of the precious liquid. His sufferings were beyond all description; but the Ranee's heart softened not. Savory looking dishes were placed before him; but they were only temptations to be resisted, for in the sauce of all was brine. As the end drew near Muttri's ravings made the night seem hideous. His bloodshot eyes, swollen tongue, lacerated lips and swollen features made him a spectacle awful to behold, as he crouched by the window and watched the waters of the Ganges flowing by, and shrieked out the single word Pani, pani, pani! (Water, water, water!) The word Traitor, traitor, traitor! seemed to come back in mockery as an echo. At last, one gloomy midnight, his fearful torments ended in death. None mourned his fate.

At dawn next day the following legend was found, scrawled in letters of blood, on the wall of his prison:

Whatever sleepeth here again,
Shall ne'er a year its life retain.

The servants read the words and trembled; the ranee heard them with a shudder.

Muttri's head was severed from his body and hung over the gateway that he had surrendered to the English. His body was flung into the Ganges for the alligators to devour.

Neither man nor beast was again allowed in the room in which he died; yet at night the servants would start from their sleep and huddle together in fear, declaring that they heard wailings and unearthly moans coming from that deserted chamber.

A few days after Muttri's death the ranee's only child escaped from its nurse and wandering about the palace, came at last to this ill fated room. With childlike curiosity it entered and began to play about on the floor. Tired at last of playing, it lay down on a mat and fell asleep. When the frightened nurse found him the boy was dead. One hand was grasping the ring on the floor, and the other was held over his eyes, as if he was endeavoring to conceal some awful object from his sight. When the news of this death spread in the city, the superstitious populace repeated to each other in awestruck tones the prophecy that they had heard was written on the walls.

The Ranee and her followers once more fled from Kunai. The palace was allowed to crumble away in ruins until the English again took possession of the fort.

Shortly before I left Kunai one of the two dogs, Bouncer, went mad and had to be destroyed. I thought very little of this at the time, as the heat was very excessive and the dogs often went mad at that period of the year.

A short time after Bouncer's death I was relieved by another detachment and returned to the headquarters of my regiment, taking Beauty with me. Slowly the year went by; the hot weather gave place to the monsoons, which were heralded as usual by some heavy dust storms—an extraordinary sight for those who see them for the first time. Then the monsoons yielded grudgingly to the winter—delightful months as long as they last. Once more the summer burst upon us, hotter and more shriveling, if possible, than it had been the previous year. One special Sunday—I remember it well—the heat was almost suffocating. During the early morning church parade several men had to "fall out." Yet the irritating movements of the punkah, as it passed backward and forward before my eyes, made me feel so giddy that I could hardly endure it. In the afternoon I went for a ride. Beauty wanted to follow, as usual; it was so hot, however, that I would not take her out. It was a little after sunset when I returned. On the doorstep was Beauty, anxiously watching for us, she and the pony being great friends. She barked joyously, and ran across the compound to meet us. As I was to dine with some friends that evening, I entered my bungalow and began my toilet at once. A few minutes afterwards my sweeper rushed into my room in great consternation, and cried out: "Sahib, sahib, the dog is dead!"

I ran out, and there she lay panting in the veranda. I dashed a bucketful of water over her; it did not revive her in any way. In a few moments she had breathed her last. Suddenly the prophecy in connection with the room at Kunai occurred to me. I sought my diary, and turned over the pages to the date on which the two dogs had been given to me. April—May—June. Yes, there it was, June 17—a year that very day! Both dogs had died within the specified time.

I thought over this curious coincidence on my way to dinner, and was not a little disturbed at it. During dinner I was rallied on my silence, and, by way of excuse, related to my host the legend of Kunai, and the strange fulfillment of the prophecy that very night. I had hardly concluded, when my khidmutgar, who was standing behind my chair, started forward and shouted; "Sahib, sahib, deko!" (Sir, sir, look!") His black face was almost blanched with fear, as he turned and fled from the room, his snow white puggaree, which had tumbled off in his haste, streaming behind him.

I looked in the direction in which he had pointed. I, too, was startled. Outside, on the lawn, I saw through the glass door the full outline, clear and distinct, of the dog that I had just left dead at my bungalow. Unearthly, unreal, it appeared, as it stood rigid and motionless, the rays of the full moon falling upon its form. Its eyes, which glowed like coals of fire, seemed to look a mournful farewell at me. I rubbed my eyes and looked again. In that moment the spectre had melted away in the dim shade. I could see nothing. Was I awake, or was I the victim of a dream, or was this but a freak of vision? I looked at my host in blank amazement. He had seen nothing. I was about to explain when—a yelp and a cry, and Beauty herself came bounding into the room in propria persona. No ghost this time, but solid flesh and blood. She had only had a fit, after all, and recovered shortly after I had left my bungalow.

We laughed heartily over the occurrence, and it was a long time before my "Legend of Kunai" was forgotten in the regiment, for the story soon got wind. Beauty lived for many a year after that. When she did die it was of a prosaic disease called old age.

Fast Work.

Messrs. Robert Evans and Patrick Crowley, both of the township of Otonabee, have been putting their reapers to a test of late. Mr. Evans succeeded in taking down two acres of grain in one hour and a quarter. Mr. Crowley gave his both a long and a short test. He cut thirteen acres in seven hours and an acre and three quarters in fifty minutes, the reaper being drawn by a span of colts. Mr. Evans cut the whole of his harvest with one team on the reaper. This speaks well for the reaper, the Brantford, of which Mr. Henry Owens, Peterborough, is the agent.

POLICE COURT.

ASSAULT.

SATURDAY, Aug. 13.—This afternoon at four o'clock John Adlum appeared in court to accuse R. Wabbicock of having committed an assault upon him. The whole story of the assault was listened to patiently by the Magistrate, including Wabbicock's yarn of "self defence." A fine of $10 or 30 days was imposed upon the defendant.

COW AT LARGE.

MONDAY, Aug. 15.—Jas. Garside was charged by Acting Chief Adams with having allowed a cow to roam at large on the public streets. It was proved that the cow got out accidentally.

LARCENY.

Geo. Hunter had A. Armour before the Court on a charge of having stolen tomatoes from him. The case was, however, withdrawn, the complainant paying $3.50 costs.

HIS WORSHIP WORRIED.

At the opening of the Court, His Worship made a few remarks. He said that in the past he had been greatly annoyed by people coming to his office to give him "the true version" of the case. He explained to such persons the impropriety of their coming to him on such an errand, and told them that he would have to give judgment in an unprejudiced manner on the evidence that was presented to him in open Court. Some people would still persist in trying to get his ear. It was very annoying to him and if he acted short with such persons he did not wish to be accused of rudeness.

Personal.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, of St. Luke's, has returned to town after having spent a pleasant holiday at Murray Bay. While there he met the Rev. E. F. Torrance, of St. Paul's.

Mr. David English, of Montreal, brother of Mr. Wm. English, arrived in town on Saturday. He and Mr. W. J. White, son of Mr. Richard White, of the Montreal Gazette, return to Montreal by canoe, going by water and rail to Belleville, and by water from there to Montreal.

Mr. H. H. Smith, Dominion Lands Commissioner, Winnipeg, is in town.

Councillor Cahill and Mr. Martin, No. One Ward, are leaving this evening for a holiday tour to the Pacific coast. The REVIEW wishes them a pleasant trip.

Second and Third.

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute passed ten candidates at the recent examination in Toronto. In addition to the five, whose names were published a day or two ago, securing second class certificates, three more have succeeded in getting third class certificates: Miss Ruth Hathrington, Miss M. Mahood, and Mr. W. Stone. Mr. A. Sherin also passed under the head of Peterborough, but he was not trained here. Two of those getting second class certificates also took thirds, so that there are five seconds and five thirds taken by pupils from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

UP IN A BALOON.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The aeronauts, Mallet and Jovis, made an ascent yesterday in the balloon Hoorla, starting from the Lavellette Gas Works. It is presumed their object was to penetrate to the greatest height at which it is possible to live. After a few hours' voyage in the air the balloon descended, landing in Marche Belgium. The following telegram has been received from Jovis:—"Victory. We attained an altitude of over 7,000 metres. We were obliged to descend for want of ballast. The conditions were excellent, except that Mallet fainted twice. The apparatus is intact."

RUSSIA'S HAND IN DENMARK.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 13.—Among the incidents in connection with Russian hostility is Denmark's extension of the fortifications at Copenhagen. The Danish official papers assert that the new works are undertaken solely to complete the defences in accordance with the old plans, and that this does not indicate any intention on the part of Denmark to interfere if Germany engages in war with Russia or France. The facts are that the fortifications are being constructed vigorously under Russian prompting and on a scale hitherto unknown in Denmark. The reports of Denmark's armaments led Berlin papers to give warning that the result of Danish interference would be the absorption of Denmark by Germany.

HARVEY.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Harvey Council met in the Clerk's Office on Monday, August 8th, pursuant to adjournment. The members were all present. After routine a by-law was passed, to provide for levying the rates and taxes in Harvey, for County, School and Township purposes; County levy, $769.68; Township levy, $900; S. Section No. 1, $200; No. 2, $300; No. 3, $256; No. 4, $175; No. 6, $150; No. 7, $220; No. 8, $400. A by-law was passed reappointing Wm. Irwin as Collector of taxes in Harvey for 1887. The sum of $6.25 was ordered to be paid to Daniel Ward for repairing crossing on road beat No. 37. Mr. Hicks and Mr. Ingram were appointed to go and examine for a road north from Gilmour's Depot, to the boundary, on Thursday, the 11th of August. On motion the Council adjourned, to meet at the Town Hall on Monday, the 3rd day of October next.

CROPS.—The crops in Harvey are light; wheat and peas are far below the average; oats are pretty fair; potatoes and root crops are more promising. The late spring and continued drouth dried up the cereals, causing an early harvest all in a heap. Farmers are busy harvesting oats and peas.

ROAD WORK.—Our Mr. Hicks, overseer, is busy with his gang of men opening up another link of the Government road between lots 25 and 31, concessions 14 and 15. When completed it will shorten travel for a large number of settlers.

HORSE KILLED.—One of our new settlers, Mr. Wm. Graham, had the misfortune to lose a valuable three year-old colt by a sharp stick piercing its body.

NORWOOD.

STRUCK WITH LIGHTNING.—The rain and thunderstorm that passed over this section on Friday evening did considerable damage to outstanding crops, etc. At Stoney Lake the storm was very severe and made things decidedly lively for the campers for a time. M. Wm McMillan, 9th concession of Dummer, had three head of cattle killed by lightning.—Register.

BY FOUR GAMES TO TWO

THE RIVERSIDES ADD ANOTHER TO THEIR LIST OF VICTORIES.

A Well Contested Match—Large Attendance—The Teams Get Through Before the Two and a Half Hours.

The Riverside Lacrosse Club added another to their unbroken succession of victories this season on Monday afternoon, when they defeated the Young Torontos by four games to two.

The first game commenced at a quarter to three, the crowd being disposed to favor Toronto. The teams lined up in the following way:

Young Torontos.		Riversides.
McGuire	goal	Rogers
Gourlay	point	Rose
McGrath	cover point	Butler
McMichael	defence field	Meagher
Anderson	" "	Henderson
Rennie	" "	Pakenham
McCleary	centre	Larone
Gundy	home field	Phelan
Briggs	" "	Begley
Millar	" "	Neil
McMillan	outside home	Duncan
Park	inside home	M. Laron
Curran	field captain	M. McDonald

On the pull Larone got the rubber and threw in the right direction. It lurked around the Torontos' goal for a little while and then worked up as far as centre field. It passed from one to another in quick succession, till Begley had it in his stick. He gave it to Larone and Larone passed it to Duncan, who put it through in pretty style. Time, 9 minutes.

In the commencement of the second game the ball again showed a preference for the Toronto goal. Some nice by-play was done there, both Harry Neil and Begley tossing some neat drop shots. McGrath, having come to the rescue, made a brilliant run. The effort did not bring the result it should have, though. In tossing it to Rennie, Larone's stick got in the way and it was returned to Torontos' goal. The point neatly rescued it and sent it spinning past centre. In a squabble for the ball McMillan touched it and time was called. The face favored the Riversides and Toronto goal was soon in jeopardy. Good defence play stopped the umpire from shouting "game," and for the next few minutes the Peterborough defence men were given some exercise. Begley, who crossed the centre to reinforce, got it in his net and made a magnificent run. It flew to the Torontos' defence and again rebounded down field. It was secured at centre and found its way to Joe Phelan's stick and a second later game was called. Time, 20 minute's.

The Riversides stock went up here, and bets of two to one were made that they would take three straights.

The third game was commenced by both teams with much spirit. The play was evenly balanced. Both teams possessed fine runners and some really fine team work was done on both sides. At the close of fifteen minutes play there was a very exciting defense game played directly in front of the Riverside goal. For the moment defeat was averted. At this juncture one of the Toronto men fell of his stick and time was called, but in a short time he was up and doing and the game went on. An accident happened to another a few minutes after, a checking stick having hit one of the Torontos. The game proceeded with eleven men, Neil withdrawing from the Riversides. The Ball was faced again. Side and overhand shots made Rogers work. For the next few minutes he batted off several dangerous balls. But victory declared for Toronto by Briggs putting through the ball by a an overhand shot. Time 27 minutes.

The fourth game did not last long enough to warm the boys up. After just thirty seconds the ball passed through the Riversides stakes. It was pulled by Toronto and passed to the left side of the goal. Here McCleary grabbed it and sent a swift one through in neat style—at which the crowd cheered. Time ¼ minute.

Betting was now even, with an inclination toward Toronto.

The fifth and sixth games were stubbornly contested. Both teams went at it determined to win. Rose, Butler and Maher, covered the Riversides goal effectually while on the field Pakenham, Phelan and Larone were distinguishing themselves. Duncan never played a better game; in fact few could fill the position with greater credit. On the visitors side Anderson, McMillan, Gundy and Gourlay won the applause from the stand. After twenty-seven minutes Larone put it through.

The sixth game was concluded by Phelan sending the ball through at the expiration of 15 minutes.

Though neither side escaped without the customary hard knocks, the best of good feeling prevailed, as was evidenced by the hearty cheers the one team gave the other at the end of the match.

NOTES.

A Toronto man let his temper get the better of him during the fifth game when he was checked closely, and a fight would likely have ensued had not several come between the two players. Mr. Devlin wielded his umbrella effectually in scattering the crowd, and the sight of Charlie McGinty also had its effect.

Mr. Gorrie acted as umpire for the visitors and Mr. H. Phelan for the Riversides. Mr. H. LeBrun occupied the position of referee.

Father O'Brien, a member of the old Peterboroughs, was on the grounds and seemed to take great interest in the match.

Councillor Yelland quit work for the afternoon to see the match. He always does. A more ardent lover of the game isn't to be found.

Several of the old Peterboroughs say they are going to play. They should buckle on again and give the boys a hand.

One gentleman who sat on the grand stand smoking a cigar remarked that he never saw better lacrosse played in Peterborough.

The Riversides have certainly improved very much since the last game. Or perhaps it is owing to their having more equal opponents.

Jimmy Sheehy couldn't sit still when he saw the centres kneel. It was more than his nerves could stand, seeing he had been there so often himself.

Direct Importation.

That enterprising firm of grocers, Rush Bros., believe in taking advantage of every facility for benefitting their trade and supplying their customers. They have therefore made use of the C. P. R. line of steamers on the Pacific ocean and the transcontinental railway to import direct from the place of production fifty packages of black tea of excellent quality, which was the first lot imported directly over these lines to Peterborough. Their customers receive the benefit of their enterprise in quality and price, and they will continue the system of direct importation, as they have another lot of tea coming, which they expect to arrive in about three weeks. Rush Bros. have a fine stock of staple and fancy groceries. Cross & Blackwell's goods in all lines, and keep on hand everything that should be found in a first-class establishment. They receive every Friday morning on the Canadian Pacific early train fresh sea salmon, fresh mackerel, cod fish and haddock. As the firm buys nothing but first-class goods, and for cash only, they supply the best articles at close prices.

A Compliment.

On Monday evening the 57th Battalion Band, learning that Mr. J. B. King, Grand Secretary of the Ontario Grand Lodge, I.O. O. F., had decided to remain in town till Monday evening, took advantage of the opportunity and serenaded himself and his wife at the residence of Mrs. E. E. Henderson, whose guest they were. The Grand Secretary was quite surprised, and under the circumstances made a graceful reply. Mr. E. E Henderson then invited the band to come into the house, where the members were introduced to the Grand Secretary and afterwards entertained in a substantial manner.

A Hustler.

Lieut. Hooper, of Canton Outaoulas, Ottawa, writes to a friend in town and concludes as follows:—"Our Canton is in love with Peterborough, and the handsome way in which we were treated by the ladies and citizens generally. The Plate Glass City is a 'hustler' and we hope to visit you again."

The Clerks.

A largely attended meeting of the dry goods clerks was held on Monday evening for the purpose of seeing what could be done to secure the closing of the dry goods establishments at 6 o'clock in the evenings, Saturdays excepted. It was decided to canvass the ladies of the town to get them to sign a paper agreeing not to purchase any dry goods after the hour stated.

LATEST DYNAMITE SENSATION.

Arrest of a Woman and Her Maid at Cowes With Forty Pounds.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The latest dynamite sensation is the arrest of a well-dressed woman and her maid, at the fashionable resort of Cowes. The arrest was made by London detectives, who claim to have obtained information that the woman, or at least the mistress, was acting as an accomplice of dynamiters. The statement is made that forty pounds of the dangerous explosive were found in a satchel in the possession of the suspected parties. The theory that this means was taken of smuggling the dynamite into London without arousing suspicion, or that the intention may have been to use it at Cowes, in case certain objectionable personages should make their appearance at that place. The latter suspicion is not credited, however. There are hints that the Irish party are not suspected in this case, but that it is a Nihilist scheme. Developments are awaited with considerable interest.

THE QUEEN'S CLEMENCY.

Her Majesty Grants a Reprieve to a Condemned Murderer.

LONDON, Aug 15.—The Home Secretary, Mr. Matthews has been against humiliated by the Queen's overruling his action in the case of Lipski, the young Hebrew, who was to have been hanged to-day for the murder of a women. Lipski was convicted wholly on circumstantial evidence, and his solicitor solemnly assured Mr. Matthews that he had discovered facts since the conviction which would justify a new trial. The inexperienced lawyer, however, made the mistake of telling his story to Mr. Stead, of the Pall Mall Gazette, who hastened to publish it, and to somewhat arrogantly demand that the Home Secretary grant a reprieve. Mr. Matthews was so furious at being lectured by his old enemy, Mr. Stead, that he announced through the press that Lipski would hang according to programme. The solicitor being warned in time by the announcement that no hope was to be looked for in the direction of the Home Office telegraphed immediately to the Queen setting forth the facts and praying for the exercise of mercy and justice. Her Majesty ordered the execution of Lipski to be deferred for a week pending the application for a new trial.

KILLED WITH A KNIFE.

A Grenville County Farmer Fatally Stabbed by a Neighbor.

PRESCOTT, Aug. 15.—The quiet little village of Bishop's Mills, about eighteen miles north of here, has been thrown into the greatest excitement over the murder of Henry Dool, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer residing in that locality. The man accused of the crime, John Morris, is also a farmer, whose farm runs alongside that of Dool's. So far as can be learned tonight, the circumstances surrounding the sad affair are as follows:—Dool and Morris for a considerable time past have been quarrelling about a piece of land, as to the title to which there is said to be some doubt. Great enmity existed between them. On Friday afternoon last they met on one of their farms and had a few words about a yoke of oxen, on which there seems to be a chattel mortage. A farmer named Straight was present and Morris asked him to settle the difficulty. "Settle your own troubles," said Straight, at the same time marching away. Scarcely had he turned round when he heard a cry, and, looking back, saw Dool lying on the ground, stabbed in the side. Morris, so it is said, then started to the house for an axe, saying, "I will finish him." He, however, did not return. Dool on being taken to the house was found to be very weak from loss of blood. The wound was made with a clasp knife with a blade about six inches in length, was fully three inches long and so deep that part of the lung was protruding. It was plain he could not live. Medical aid was summoned, but Dool died the following morning. Morris took flight shortly after committing the crime and has not since been heard of, although police were soon in pursuit. Morris is about forty-five, while Dool was about fifty-six. Both have large families. Some maintain that Morris is hiding in the bush, and the neighboring farmers are scouring the same for him.

A DISAGREEMENT

TIRNOVA, Aug 15.—Prince Ferdinand held a council at Sistova, at which, it is reported, Foreign Minister Natchevitch disagreed with the Prince in his views upon the formation of a cabinet, and tendered his resignation. It is rumored that Prince Ferdinand has insured his life for two millions florins.

State Attorney Grinnell is preparing an application for extradition papers for the return of boodler McGarigle to Chicago.

Friday night's fire in Pittsburg, Pa., was not subdued till 3.30 on Saturday morning. The total loss is estimated at one million dollars.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk railway for the week ending August 6 a were $343,378 an increase of $14,758 compared with the corresponding week last year.

NO POLICY.

The Liberal party has no policy on any subject, for the simple reason that it accepts as members all who oppose the Conservative government of the day, whether they oppose it from principle or merely from personal prejudice. Thus there are protectionists and free-traders, monopolists and anti-monopolists, railway promoters and anti-railway promoters, prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists, men of all stripes in its ranks, and it, therefore, cannot formulate a policy on any subject. What is the party for anyway?—Montreal Witness (Reform.)

He Never Smiled Again!

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "biliousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needed a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure biliousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. YOUNG MEN'S CONVENTION.

A CONVENTION of Conservative young men of the Province of Ontario has been arranged for, to be held in Toronto on September 13th and 14th. The arrangements are in the hands of the Young Men's Liberal-Conservative Association of Toronto and they have been pushed forward so vigorously that they are drawing near completion. The dates selected are at a time when it will be convenient for delegates to attend, and, as they are in the second week of the Toronto exhibition, travelling facilities will be good and rates lower than usual. The object of the convention is to bring the younger members of the Conservative party together and to enter into a thorough organization throughout the entire Province.

The Conservative party has received strong support from the young men of Canada. Its policy is one that attracts those who have faith in their country, are hopeful of its future and desire to see a prosperous and united people in the Dominion. As these are characteristics of the political faith of the young men they are naturally drawn to the party led by Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Meredith, and are interested in the success of that party.

Confederation, the National Policy, the Canadian Pacific Railway and other undertakings that have united the Provinces, have built up trade, have aided the prosperity of the people and have animated the minds of Canadians with patriotism, we owe to the Conservative party. The policy, that has given ground for patriotic pride appeals to the sentiments of the young as well as the older Canadians who desire to see their country grow and flourish, a prosperous part of the Great British Empire, but not dependent on any other country for life or for success, and as such a policy has been the central idea of the Conservative party the hold it has maintained on the people is not a matter for surprise.

There are those, however, who lack faith in their country, whose hopes for its success are dimmed by a too narrow idea of its resources, and who would carry out a policy inimical to Canada's position as a British Dominion and that would weaken its strength. Politicians holding such views and advocating such a policy must be met and checked, else hope of our future would be gone. Those who would sow seeds of discord and water them with disloyal or unpatriotic agitations must not be allowed to have their way, or a united country and a consolidated and prosperous people would be impossible. Thus those who favor the Canadian policy of the Conservative party need to be ready to maintain their opinions and organized when the time of political battle comes. "In the time of peace prepare for war," said the hero of a hundred battles, and this is so far true in a political sense that the party which neglects to propagate its views and allows its organization to become defective will go into a campaign at a disadvantage.

The organization of a Provincial Association of Conservative young men will be an important step and one that may have considerable influence. The meeting together would of itself have a good effect, and when the meeting results in a permanent organization the effect will be greater. The Conservative young men of West and East Peterborough should make a point of being well represented, as each one of them may be present if they so desire, the attendance not being limited.

Some of the advocates of commercial annexation are claiming that the Anglican Synod of Nova Scotia shows sympathy with their proclivities by electing an American bishop to preside over this Canadian diocese. As Dr. Perry happens to be a British subject the criticism has no foundation. Besides Canada is open to men of all nationalities who choose to settle here and become Canadians. So even if Bishop Perry were a "Yankee" this discourteous reception of him would be simply inhospitable and impertinent.

Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

THE WEED IN PERSIA.

AN ORIENTAL LAND, SAID TO BE THE SMOKER'S PARADISE.

The Persian's Social Position Shown by the Number and Value of His Pipes. The Eternal Water Pipe—The Etiquette of Smoking.

Persia is the smoker's paradise. In the first place, tobacco is cheap; fourteen pounds of it in the cured leaf cost from three to ten shillings. There is no middleman or manufacturer to mix, chop, scent, flavor and adulterate it. The grower cures it and packs it in bags of skin. In these bags the merchant sells it to the retailer; and then the smoker, pipe in hand, samples the various lots, and purchases from a pennyworth to a bagful, as seemeth to him good. There are various kinds of tobacco in Persia: the leaf tobacco, which is smoked in the kalian, for hubble-bubble; the Kurdish tobacco, which is almost white, and consists of the leaves and stalks of the plant coarsely pulverized. This is a very fragrant pipe tobacco, and may be obtained mild or excessively strong, and it is smoked in chibouques or in the Arab short clay pipe. The only recommendations of the Arab pipe are its cheapness and its portability. It is a simple tube of clay about six inches long, with a bore an inch in diameter; it is constructed in the middle, and bent at nearly a right angle. It is essentially the poor man's pipe. Crammed with a Kurdish tobacco, of which it will hold half an ounce, it is passed from hand to hand until it is smoked out.

In the north of Persia and in the capital the papiros, or cigarette, is rapidly gaining ground; the commonest Samsoon tobacco is used as a rule, or a very similar article grown in Ghilan and rather superior to it. But the real national pipe of Persia is the kalian. Among the merchant and tradesman class the kalian is ever between the lips. The peripatetic vender of smoke is seen in Persia in every place where men congregate for business or pleasure. Even at executions the criminal will ask for and receive a farewell whiff of the eternal water pipe before he is blown from a gun. I have seen a man undergoing the long agonies of crucifixion seeking solace in the kalian.

THE PERSIAN AND HIS PIPES.

The social position of the Persian is shown by the number and the value of his pipes. The pipebearer to a great man is a highly paid domestic, who may have in his care from fifty to a hundred pipes, varying in value from £5 to £500. The pipes of the king and of the royal princes are often made entirely of gold incrusted with a profusion of gems; the middle and upper classes generally content themselves with kalians whose reservoirs and stems are of solid silver, the bowl only being of gold ornamented with gems or enamels. The religious classes mostly affect a kalian of the simplest kind; the water reservoir being a wide mouthed bottle of coarse porous clay, the stem being composed of curiously turned wood stained a bright crimson, and the bowl made of a black porcelain resembling ebony in appearance. But in the privacy of their own harems the holy men do not disdain to smoke the costly pipes of their wives; for everybody smokes in Persia—old men and maidens, young men and children—and the old women are the most inveterate smokers of all.

Among the middle classes the water reservoir is often composed of glass, elaborately cut and often decorated with the florid colored and gilt ornamentation which Turkish art has rendered familiar to us. These glass reservoirs, for which there is an enormous market throughout Persia and central Asia, are made in Russia. Rose water is frequently used in place of the vulgar fluid; rose leaves, tiny rosebuds, and the immature fruit of the almond or plum are tossed into it, and as the smoker at each inhalation sets the liquid in violent motion a pleasant sight is thus offered for his contemplation, much resembling the pretty toys that may be seen in some of the filter shops in London. In the hot weather a porous clay reservoir is affected by all classes, as it is supposed to cool the water that purifies the fragrant smoke; they will even ice the water. The water is changed every time the pipe is lighted, and is itself not without its uses; for it is an ever handy and never failing emetic—a useful thing in a country where poisoning is not infrequent.

ETIQUETTE AND PUNCTILIO.

Probably the Persians are the most poetical as well as the most practical people in the world. All through the summer the stems of their pipes are decorated with circles of tiny moss rose buds; or, the interstices having been filled with grass seeds or grains of corn, the pipe is handed to the smoker covered with rows of sprouting verdure an inch and a half long. This decoration of pipes is part of the duty of the pipe bearer or of the ladies of the harem, and the pipe bearer's office is no sinecure. He has several stocks of tobacco of varying quality.

The etiquette and punctilio of pipe smoking are endless. When a visitor is offered a pipe, and there is not a second one, he declines it at once; his host must smoke first. This, if the entertainer be much superior in position, he will actually do, but otherwise he declines, and the guest, having first offered the pipe to the other visitors, who decline it as a matter of course, proceeds to smoke, and then it is handed round to everybody in order of rank.

No business in the east can be done without the smoking of many water pipes; it forms a large portion of the enjoyment of the Oriental bath, it fills up the pauses of conversation, and, when a man is at a loss for an answer, it gives him time to think. The very sound of the bubbling water in a hot country is soothing to the ear. That it is not smoked in Europe is probably due to the fact that he who would smoke the Persian water pipe would need to keep a Persian servant to fill it for him.—Foreign Letter.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

AUTUMN.

Feathery clouds are few and fair,
Thistle down is on the air,
Rippling sunshine on the lake,
Wild grapes scent the sunny brake,
Wild bees murmuring take the ear,
Crickets make the silence dear;
Butterflies float in a dream,
Over all the swallows gleam.

Here and yonder, high and low,
Golden rod and sunflowers glow,
Here and there a maple flushes,
Summer reddens, woodbine blushes,
Purple asters bloom and thrive—
I am glad to be alive.

—Robert Kelly Weeks.

AN ENGLISH SPECIAL ARTIST.

His Experiences in Following Up Political Agitation.

Great political excitement, there is no doubt, turns men's heads. Once I recollect finding a most dignified provincial politician in this state, and necessity compelled me to turn him into a sketching stool. Mr. Gladstone was speaking at Bingley hall, Birmingham. I could not, being only five feet two, see over the heads of others when all stood to cheer. I mentioned this fact to my neighbor. "Oh, you must not miss this scene!" he said, and quickly, without ceremony, he had me on his back, his bald head serving as an easel. It has struck me since that had this old gentleman, a big man in his native town and still bigger in his own estimation, seen himself as others saw him at that moment, the probability is that he would not have felt anything like so kindly to me as I did to him.

Telegram—"Election, Liverpool, see to it at once." So I did, on arriving in the evening. I rushed off to a ward meeting. To my surprise the artist of a rival paper sat beside me. He did not frighten me away, but candidly confessed that he had seen a private telegram of mine saying I was starting and his editor packed him off by the same train. Ha! I must be equal to him! I sat up all night and drew off a page on wood, ready for engraving, and sent it off by the first train in the morning. It was in the press before my rival's rough notes left Liverpool. One would hardly think, to see candles stuck in my boots, that the hotel was the Old Adelphi. I trust the special of the future will find the electric light, or a better supply of bedroom candlesticks.

All day again sketching and all night hard at work, burning the midnight oil (I was nearly writing boots). A slice of luck kept me awake in the early morning. A knock at my door and to my surprise a friend walked in who had come down on a night train for a daily, and seeing my name in the visitors' book had looked me up, thinking I could give him some tips. "All right," I said, "a bargain; you sit for me and I'll talk. Here, stand like this," the Liberal candidate. "Capital!" "Now round like this," the Conservative, "drawn from life." And after another day of this kind of thing, I reached home without having had an hour's sleep. Oh! "a 'specials' life is not a happy one!"—Magazine of Art.

A Sketch of Von Moltke.

The great strategist represents in its highest development the modern military mind. His intellect is scientific, cold, mechanical. He was remarkable in his youth for his great powers of sustained thought. Imagination, though not absent, is in abeyance. For all great scientific, even mechanical achievements, a certain amount of imagination is necessary. He is constituted to be the soul of a machine. His genius, which is constructive and not creative, is a faculty for mechanical combination, for scientifically manipulating military forces; combining, dividing, concentrating, launching them in new combinations, rearranging them, and hurling them again so as to thwart, paralyze and decimate systems of opposing forces, according to far reaching, elaborate schemes.

Yet his method is not rigid or bizarre; his plans are not laid down according to mere theory; as were those of the strategist of the Russian army in Turkey—in consequence of which defeat was heaped upon defeat. Moltke's plans are simple and general, essentially vital, flexible, adaptable, giving perfectly free scope for modification. Everything is taken into account; everything calculated for; all is contrived with perfect tact of circumstance, with regard to all contingencies, all situations, with a foresight that has appeared well nigh prophetic. Again and again during the last war he divined the enemy's plans and counteracted them.—Time.

Antidote for Germs and Fungi.

Dr. A. B. Griffiths, an English physician, has just published a communication which is of great importance to horticulturists and agriculturists. He demonstrates that iron sulphate is an antidote for many of the most virulent epidemics which attack field and garden crops. These diseases are due to microscopic funguses, whose structures are built up in a somewhat different manner to the corresponding parts in other plants. It appears that the cellulose in these funguses is acted upon by iron sulphate, whereas in the higher plants the cellulose of the cell walls is not influenced. The iron sulphate destroys the cellulose of the funguses, but does not affect that of the attacked plant. It is, therefore, an antidote and destroyer of such parasitic germs and funguses as the potato disease, wheat mildew, etc.—Frank Leslie's.

Food of Our Childhood.

"Given your order, sir?" inquired a waiter at one of the down town lunch counters the other day of a customer. "The food of our childhood, please," was the rather mysterious and sententious reply. The next moment the gentleman was tearing a half loaf of bread into shreds and depositing the pieces in a huge bowl of milk. The charge for this is twelve cents, and the waiter explained that there was a pretty good run on the dish daily. A side issue, not nearly so often called for, is dubbed the "grub of our daddies," and consists of milk and mush.—Philadelphia Call.

The Train Medicine Chest.

The medicine chest is as much a necessity on trains as on ships. So think the managers of the Maine Central railroad, who have now provided each one of their conductors with "emergency" cases, if we may so call them, containing, besides medicines, linen and rubber bandages, surgical instruments and whatever else may be needed by the conductor or the chance doctor in cases of accident.

Mourning bands on the hats of men who have not lost relatives or friends are now declared to be the "worst possible bad form."

A Pugnacious Poet.

At the lacrosse match on Monday afternoon a poet from Toronto with a fair supply of Scott Act aboard got it into his head that he could lick any French-Canadian on the grounds. He went around telling what he could do, but when a burly young man came up, tapped him on the shoulder and mildly announced that he was a French-Canadian the poet's pugnacity suddenly left him. He reached out his hand and exclaimed: "How are you friend."

In the recent regatta at Lachine of the Lake St. Louis Canoe Club, Mr. Charles S. Shaw, formerly of Peterborough, where he learned his paddling, carried off a number of prizes. He with Mr. Sherwood won for the second year the tandum challenge cup, using the single blade and defeating among others Messrs. Leys and Jakes of the Toronto C. C., who used the double paddle. Mr. Shaw with his three associates was also first in the tug of war, for which there were four entries. He was second, with Miss Horne in the lady and gentlemen's race, in the single paddling race, and in the four in a canoe race, for all of which events there were several entries. Mr. Shaw certainly maintains the reputation of Peterborough canoeing.

PARKDALE AND PETERBOROUGH.

Peterborough Wins at Cricket by a Handsome Score—Individual Play.

For the sixth time time this season victory declared itself in favor of Peterborough, the vanquished eleven being Parkdale. The visitors won the toss and batted first, scoring 83, of which Smith played in fine style for 30. Sills hit hard for twelve ,including two mammoth hits for 4, and Garratt played well for his ten. Stratton took 5 wickets for 41 runs and H. Ray 2 for 19, and the bowling was backed by fielding just a trifle better than the usual run of Peterborough fielding.

Things did not look particularly rosy for Peterborough when Sam Ray was bowled in Smith's first over, and Stratton and Rutherford met the same fate in his third. Nor was the prospect much improved when after playing a good innings for 18, Thomas was bowled at 35. Hamilton and H. Ray played good cricket and brought on new bowling, one a fast underhand: At 60 Ray was caught for an excellent 18, and Max Hamilton after getting a dozen in fine form fell a victim to the underhands at 68, a fate which befel Logan a few runs later. There were now 7 wickets down and twelve runs to get, so the game got exciting as both sides still had a chance of winning. Rogers and Stirling, however, not only managed to get the runs required, but pulled the score up to 130 before they were parted. Stirling had not up to this time won his spurs, but he "came off" in good form when it was most needed—his 30 being well put together. Rogers' 43 speaks for itself. E. Stratton played some good cricket for his ten, which was made up of three threes and a single. The innings finished for 156

Dignum had five wickets for 42 runs, Smith three for 43 and Eyer two for 24, and the fielding was fair.

To play out time, Parkdale went to bat again and scored 103 for 6 wickets, Smith again heading the score with 28, Hall 26 not out, Ledger 20, Garratt and Featherstonehaugh ten each. The Peterborough fielding was—well, not good; but two of the team were disabled, two subs fielding for them. As a second innings for Peterborough could not be played owing to lack of time, they grew careless as the match was already won.

The following are the scores:—

The home club have still five matches to play, two being at home.

The Staten Island Club will make a tour through Canada this fall, and an effort will be made to arrange a match with them here.

The frequent delays, seldom found on other grounds seems to be again growing characteristic, although nothing to the old-time pauses when men had to be hunted up to bat.

Pushing Business.

Mr. C. Porter, of Porter Bros., has returned to town after having been down to Ottawa to attend the races. The O. B. & S. cart he presented to the Ottawa Driving Park Association was won by Freeman D., owned by A. McLean, in the colt stakes contest. Mr. Porter left the capital carrying home thirty orders for this celebrated cart. The Citizen in its report of the races says:—"The winner of the colt stake, in addition to taking the prize, wins the road cart presented by Messrs. Porter Bros., of Peterborough. Mr. C. Porter, of the firm, and Mr. Stewart, the book-keeper, came down from Peterborough yesterday just in time to see Freeman D. win the prize donated by the firm. The Ottawa Driving Club were very pleased to see the interest that the gentlemen took in the races, more especially as it was with difficulty that they could get away to attend them."

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to take. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

POLICE COURT.

DRUNK.

TUESDAY, Aug. 16.—This heading is really a little astray for Walter Kerr was quite sober when marched into court this morning. The week spent with Mr. Nesbitt seemed to have done him good. Walter was discharged.

LARCENY.

The case Queen vs. McFarlane for the larceny of a watch was heard. A. Gibson, who preferred the charge, said that the defendant had returned the watch and that he did not wish to proceed with the case. His Worship informed the latter that this court was not to be used as a means to regain property but as a means to punish criminal offences. If he wished to withdraw the charge he would have to pay the costs. The costs, $1.35, were paid.

INSANITY.

A case of insanity was brought before the court. The circumstances were related and the prisoner committed.

I. O. O. F.

Visit of Grand Officers to Otonabee Lodge—Cordial Reception.

Dr. Bell, Grand Warden, and Mr. J. B. King, Grand Secretary, paid Otonabee Lodge an official visit on Monday evening. They were both received with honors.

A candidate for membership was presented, and was put through the initiatory ceremony by a team of Otonabee Lodge, under the superintendence of Bro. T. Workman, P.G., and Bro. R. M. Roy, the new team work introduced by Bro. Cogswell at the Opera House a few evenings ago being used.

The GRAND WARDEN addressed the brethren, thanking them for their reception, and also for their support at the recent election. He stated that his course would be in the future, as it had been in the past—to do everything in his power to advance the interests of the Order.

Both of the Grand Officers expressed themselves as highly pleased with the Otonabee Lodge team work.

The GRAND SECRETARY spoke a few words, eulogizing Peterborough's hospitality. He had spent a very pleasant time in Peterborough, as he felt sure had all the delegates to the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment.

Bro. Stevenson also gave a brief address.

After the close of the Lodge three cheers were proposed for the Grand Officers, which were given with a "tiger."

The brethren were then entertained by Grand Warden Bell in the ante-rooms.

A. C. A. CAMP.

Annual Meeting of the Northern Division at Stoney Lake.

A. C. A. CAMP, JUNIPER ISLAND, Aug 12.—Yesterday morning there was sufficient wind for the two sailing races that had been postponed. In the afternoon there were some extra paddling races and a repetition of the tournament.

In the evening there was a second illuminated parade after which the canoes closed up into one compact body and singing passed the time pleasantly.

A. C. A. CAMP, JUNIPER ISLAND, Aug. 13.—Yesterday there were some more scratch races.

In the evening there was a camp fire at "Squaw Point," where the camp is chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Lundy, and includes the Misses T. G. and B. Hall, daughters of Mr. J. J. Hall and Miss E. Hall, daughter of the Sheriff. This last camp fire was very successful. there were over a hundred assembled round the blaze and songs and recitations went round with spirit till a late hour. Chinese lanterns decked the trees, and the dining tent, where refreshments were offered, was also decorated with lanterns, ferns and vines.

The majority of the remaining members left to day, though a few still linger to prolong their holiday, among whom is Vice-Commodore Rogers, whose family with a party of friends are camped at Mayetta Island.

In closing the report of this very successful camp a tribute must be paid to the officers who did so much to make it a success. Vice-Commodore Rogers was indefatigable and was well supported by acting Rear Commodore Colin Fraser and the members of the Divisional Committee. It is also right to acknowledge the services of the Regatta Committee, Messrs. R. C. Strickland, J. N. McKendrick and J. G. Edwards; the judges, Judge Weller and Mr. G.W.R. Strickland, the referee, Dr. Douglas, and the clerk of the course, Mr. W. Graham. Mr. Archie Moffat as acting Purser was also kept very busy.

The A.C.A. camp at Stoney Lake is now at an end, but many who were present left with the full determination of attending the meeting next year, and renewing the pleasant time they have been enjoying.

THE YACHT THISTLE

Arrived at New York Her Voyage Across the Ocean.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The yacht Thistle has arrived. She dropped anchor off Tompkinsville at 6 o'clock this morning. She crossed the Bar at 4 a.m. and was towed to her anchorage by the tug Goodwin.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The Thistle was met about 45 miles outside by a pilot boat. Capt. Barr reports a pleasant voyage except three days of rough weather and three days without a puff of wind. The rest of the time they had a light breeze. Several vessels were spoken, but they evidently did not make out her number. The steamer Clyde was the only one which answered her signals. The Thistle is certainly a pretty model and her model does not belie her claims to speed. She is clean cut forward and carries an overhanging stern. She is strongly but lightly built and has a wonderful amount of cabin room. Below decks she is comfortably but plainly finished and is marked by the absence of decorative art. All her beauty is visible from the water line. Her dimensions are 20 ft. beam, 85 ft. on the water line, 105 ft. over all and 13 ft. draught. It will take about two weeks to clean her up, set up her topmast and bend on her rigging. She came over under a small mainsail, topsail, staysail and jib. For two days of the trip she carried two reefs in her mainsail. The rest of the trip she took out everything. The trip took 21 days. The officers and crew, 21 men in all, are a fine-looking lot of men. Captain Barr is a heavy set Scotchman, heavily bearded and bronzed by exposure to the weather. His crew share with him a just pride in their cutter.

DROUTH IN ENGLAND.

Scarcity of Water and Damage Caused by Fire.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Most of the counties in England are suffering terribly from water famine. In Manchester, Bradford and Darwen the deprivation is intensely felt and the hardship daily increasing. The Manchester reservoirs contain only a sufficient supply of water to last ten days, and the engineers are trying other resources to meet the danger wich is imminent. A great many wells that have been closed, some of them for many years, for various reasons, have been reopened, and even the coal mines have been drawn upon to supply the pressing needs of the inhabitants of the towns near them. It is from these two sources that the Manchester engineers expect to replenish their depleated reservoirs. The mills at Bradford are shutting for want of water to run them, and the municipal authorities of Darwen have shut off the supply to large manufacturing consumers, with the result of compelling the workshops to close. Counties mainly devoted to dairy and produce farming are also suffering greatly. Farmers are lessening their stock of cows, many of which are dry for want of pasturage, and the crops are in many places entirely destroyed. Destructive fires in the heaths and in the woods are numerous, and special prayers were offered up in many churches on Sunday that a copious downfall of rain may be sent to relieve the widely prevailing distress.

NOVA SCOTIA'S NEW BISHOP.

The Man a Reform Paper Insulted as an Annexationist

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Many Americans were present in Westminister Abbey under the impression that the services held were to be in memory of the centenary of the American Episcopate, and not of the British Colonial Episcopate, as was the case. The mistake is to be accounted for by the fact that the Right Rev. Bishop Perry, of Iowa, preached the sermon, there being no Colonial Bishop of the English Church in London at present. The Bishop of Iowa, however, revealed himself in his discourse as a more thoroughgoing John Bull than the Englis themselves. He fought over once again the war for American Independence, terming the patriots rebels and Lord Howe's army the loyal forces—a style of nomenclature which must disgust the Americans present. He also highly eulogized the conduct of the Rev Dr Inglis, subsequently first Bishop of Nova Scotia, who, according to the Right Reverend speaker, "continued to read the prayers for King George III, at the imminent peril of his life in New York, the city being at the time in the power of the rebels."

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

"SPENCER" AGAIN.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Montags Zeitung states that Lord Randolph Churchill is living near Vienna under the name of "Spencer." He leads a retired life, takes long walks and drinks Carlsbad water.

A BITTER FIGHT PROMISED.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—The tenants on Ponsonby estate have engaged a civil engineer to supervise the construction of works of defence in preparation for expected evictions. Barricades are being erected and trenches and drains made and in case of emergency the farms will be flooded from a bog.

CHOLERA.

ROME, Aug. 16.—The cholera returns for Monday are as follows:—Naples, eight new cases and six deaths; Palermo, seven cases and four deaths; Catania, ten cases and six deaths; Syracuse, five cases and three deaths; and at other places 93 cases and 46 deaths.

THE BULGARIAN SITUATION.

SOFIA, Aug. 16.—Prime Minister Stoiloff has consented to form a provisional Cabinet. All the officers and soldiers of the garrison here have taken the oath of allegiance to Prince Ferdinand.

A BAD PRACTICE.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The North German Gazette hints that a bill will be submitted to the Reichstag at next session to suppress usurious practices of shops in taking payments by instalments.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Owing to the exodus of Conservative members of Parliament the Government will probably find it necessary to abandon both the Allotment and Education bills.

THE CHESHIRE ELECTION.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The full significance of the Gladstonian victory in the Northwich election of Saturday cannot be realized by a mere inspection of the figures. It has a much greater moral force than is apparent from the gain of 1,357 votes as compared with the last previous election in that district, and the changing of Mr. Brunner's minority of 661 then to a majority of 1,129 now. The triumph of the Liberals lies mainly in the fact that this reversal of majorities in their favor has taken place in the very hotbed of Conservatism, and under the eyes of the powerful Duke of Westminster, whose dominion over the people of that locality is well nigh as supreme as that of a feudal baron over his subjects. The Duke made every effort to secure the success of his son, the young Lord Henry Grosvenor, but so strong is the undercurrent of popular dissatisfaction with the party in control of the Government, that even that powerful influence of the richest nobleman and most extensive loandiord of the kingdom was unavailing against it. Only those who know the secret potency of such influence can properly estimate the importance of the result. Both the Gladstonian and Tory leaders realize it fully, and the former are correspondingly elated and the latter as greatly depressed.

NOT DYNAMITE.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Colonel Majendie, Chief Inspector of Explosives, declares that the satchel of the woman arrested at Dowes on suspicion of having dynamite in her possession, contained, not dynamite but some specimens of moddelling in clay, which the officers mistook for something of a more dangerous nature. The over-diligence of the police, as exemplified in this instance, indicates the prevalence among them of a latent dynamite scare, which the slightest provocation to suspicion awakens to activity.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 16.—The Porte has sent a circular to the Powers asking their advice as to the course to be taken by Turkey toward Bulgaria in view of Prince Ferdinand's action.

BRITISH ARMY SMALL ARMS.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A special committee appointed by the War Office to examine and report on the small arms in use in the army, has decided that the calibre of the military rifles should be reduced, and the decision will have the effect of discarding 100,000 new Martini-Henry rifles, some of which have not yet been issued from the arsenals.

THE PRESS ON THE ELECTION.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Daily News referring to the Northwich election, says: Seldom has any government a year after its formation met with such an emphatic rebuff. A remnant or simulacrum of the dissident party still flits about the lobbies and benches of the House of Commons, but in the constituencies it is not to be seen. The Morning Post is depressed over the result and urges the Conservatives to effect a better organization. It refuses to believe that the country is changing its mind in regard to Home Rule. The Times says the Government make a fatal mistake if they see in the recent elections any reason for slackening their efforts to cope effectually with the force of disorder in Ireland. The Telegraph says the Unionist converts have become preverts and the abstentionists have returned to their Gladstonian allegiance. The paper attributes the result in Northwhich to the weakness of the unionist canditate and campaign and begs the Unionist leaders to abandon the belief that it is sufficient to send a candidate to a district with their blessing to secure a victory. The Standard thinks there is evidence that the Irish question is no longer so powerful a lever, proving that the minds of Unionists electors are becoming lulled to a condition of false security. The Northwich election, the Standard adds, shows unmistakably that the battle for the Union has yet to be fought.

BREACH OF THE BERLIN TREATY.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The North German Gazette says the manifesto of Prince Ferdinand announcing his acceptance of the Bulgarian throne appears to be intended as a declaration of Bulgarian independence, and aggravates the breach of the treaty of Berlin of which he has been guilty. Germany, says the paper, cannot approve of Prince Ferdinand's course.

ANOTHER GLADSTONIAN VICTORY.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The election in the Northwich division of Cheshire on Saturday to fill the vacancy caused by the death of R. Verbin, Liberal Unionists, resulted in another victory for the Gladstonians The vote stood: J. T. Brunner, Gladstonian, 5112; Lord Henry Grosvenor, Liberal Unionist, 3983. Lord Henry Grosvenor, is a son of the Duke of Westminster. In the last election, when the Liberal Unionists candidate was successful, the vote was as follows: R. Verdin, Liberal Unionists, 4416; J. T. Brunner, Home Ruler, 3958.

AN EXPLORER DROWNED.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Prof. Adolf Puntzch, of Kiel University, who was a member of the German polar expedition of 1869, was accidentally drowned while sailing in Kill harbor yesterday.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Prince Bismarck had a long conference yesterday with Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, at which all pending political questions were discussed. This will enable the Chancellor to dispense with an interview with M. Delliers.

RECEIVED AN OVATION.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Mr. Brunner, the new Gladstonian member for the Northwich division of Cheshire, took his seat in the House of Commons to-day for the first time. He received an ovation from the Gladstonites.

ZOBEHR GONE TO EGYPT.

GIBRALTAR, Aug. 16.—Zobehr Pasha, who was held here for two years as a prisoner of state on behalf of the Egyptian Government, but who was recently released, has started for Alexandria.

FERDIAND BANQUETTED.

TIRNOVA, Aug. 16.—The garrison gave a banquet yesterday in honor of Prince Ferdinand. In reply to a toast the Prince expressed his devotion to Bulgaria and promised that he would preserve intact everything with which the name of Prince Alexander was connected in view of the fact of Bulgaria's love for its late ruler. Prince Ferdinand afterward reviewed the troops.

QUEEN AND PRESIDENT.

Message of the Empress Queen to the Head of the Republic.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The following letter has been received by the President from Queen Victoria in response to a letter from the former congratulating her of her Jubilee:

Our Good Friend: We have received from the hands of Mr. Phelps, United States Minister at our court, the letter which you addressed to us on the 26th of May last and in which you convey your congratulations and those of the people of the United States on the occasion of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of our ascension to the throne. We request you to accept our best thanks for this proof of your friendship and good will which, with the similar proofs we have received from rulers and peoples of other states, has caused us most sincere gratification. In thanking you also for the choice which you have made of Mr. Phelps to be interpreter of your sentiments on this occasion, we request you to accept in return our best wishes for your own uninterrupted happiness and welfare and for the prosperity of the United States, and so we recommend you to the protection of the Almighty.

Given at our court at Windsor Castle this 18th day of July, in the year 1887, and in the fifty-first year of our reign. Your good friend, VICTORIA.

Counting Up the Costs.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., Aug. 16.—The damages on account of the accident will not be short of $1,000,000. Probably eighty people will die and $5,000 is the limit that can be collected for a dead person. This one item will figure up $400,000. The seriously wounded may collect $10,000 or $15,000 each. Add to this the loss of business and the damage to property, and the disaster will cost the company a round sum.

Cold-blooded Murder.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16.—A horrible murder was committed here this afternoon, the murderer being Thomas Newton, a bricklayer, and the murdered man John Ingo, a milkman. A shot gun was the weapon used, and the affair started in an altercation some days ago. The shooting appears to have been entirely unprovoked. Newton made an attempt to escape, but was promptly arrested.

The Mexican Engineers' Strike.

MEXICO, Aug. 16.—The mail and passenger trains on the Mexican Central Railway are running on time despite the strike of the engineers. The officials of the road maintain that the strike was prompted by professional agitators from the United States and that no real grievances exist. The engineers claim that they struck because an engineer was discharged without proper enquiry.

Arrested With the Money.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—Page, who swindled the Jacques Cartier Bank out of $35,000, was arrested this evening at Versailles, about six miles from St. John's, Quebec, and about eighteen miles from the border line. All the money was found in his possession.

A Fight With the Utes.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 16.—A special from Glenwood says that a battle has been fought with the Indians, and that Colorado got the worst of it. It is known that five Indians were killed or wounded, and that the renegade Utes concluded to go back to the reservation if permitted to do so.

Fishermen Flying Light.

CANTOS, N. S., Aug 16.—No less than forty American schooners have left this coast for home to refit after a practically fruitless season. The only had from ten to a hundred barrels of mackerel each. They attribute their "bad luck" entirely to the Canadian fishery protection service.

Breweries Raided.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—The United States Secret Service officer made a raid on the breweries here yesterday and seized ten of them for violating the Internal Revenue laws.

A Bankrupt Railway.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Aug. 16.—On the application of the bondholders of the Grand Southern Railway Judge Palmer has placed the control of the road in the hands of a receiver. R. L. Sturdee, of St. John, has been appointed to the position.

REFORM PURITY.

In the absence of any definite policy, the Reform party is fond of claiming the support of the people of Canada on the ground that it is pure while the Conservatives are corrupt. That in making this claim the Reformers only add hypocrisy to corruption has been proved over, and over again. In fact so forcibly has this been shown, that they seem now to have become inured to the exposure, and to pursue their course with reckless effrontery. Perhaps the most striking instance of this corruption and effrontery is that of Yarmouth, N. S. Mr. Lovitt, the Reform candidate has been unseated by the courts because he was found to have been elected by the most corrupt means. Money flowed like water and it was evident that there was a systematical organized plan to buy up the constituency without regard to cost. It was a repetition of the wholesale corruption practiced by such Reform lights as H. H. Cook, M. C. Cameron and others, whose history is preserved in the public records. In fact the proceedings of our law courts show that such corruption by wholesale is rampant among these "pure" Reformers, while there is no similar case against Conservatives, though some candidates have suffered through such comparatively trifling breaches of the law as drinking a glass of beer on polling day, treating a few friends in the backwoods after a long drive, a small bet made by a careless supporter in the habit of betting, and such like. Even such slight breaches of the law must of course meet with the penalty prescribed by our laws, but they reflect no such stigma on either individuals or the party as the wholesale expenditure of money in the purchase of votes in which Reformers have been proved to indulge.

But what most conclusively shows the utter disregard of purity of elections by the Reform party is the fact that they have given their approbation to the grossest offenders, have retained them as political leaders, have rewarded them with fat offices, and have eagerly chosen them as candidates.

In the Yarmouth case Mr. Lovitt "threw up the sponge" when the means by which he had been elected had been clearly proved in court, thus avoiding a full exposure of the whole extent of the organized corruption and the risk of being personally disqualified. Yet the Reformers of Yarmouth have again placed Mr. Lovitt in the field as their appropriate candidate, as the fitting representative of their party. They ought to be good judges of his fitness to be their chosen specimen, but it is an insult to Yarmouth to say he is fit to represent the constituency. Yet his friends are asking for his election on the plea of sympathy for the annoyance and expense to which he has been put. No doubt it is a great annoyance to have the expense of corruption exposed and rendered futile, but honest men cannot be expected to feel the sympathy demanded. The Reformers of Yarmouth, however, are economical; having purchased votes without satisfactory result they now ask that what they bargained for should be handed over to them, that the ballots should still be marked according to the corrupt bargain. Mr. Lovitt may not be technically disqualified, but if he should again be elected there will be no room to doubt that it is not by the free choice of the constituency, but by corrupt votes, purchased before, as was abundantly proved, and now delivered.

Mr. J. A. Barron, M.P. for North Victoria, is one among a number of gentlemen who deny the accuracy of the descriptions of interviews with them published in the Detroit News.

The sensational report of the sinking of an American fishing schooner by a Canadian cruiser off Buctouche, N. B, and the loss of all her crew, telegraphed from Ottawa to the New York press, is authoritatively denied.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

SOLDIERS ON CYCLES.

Some of the Advantages of the Machines Over Cavalry Horses.

Mounted infantry suffer in any case under many disadvantages as an effective force. One-third of the number must be left to take care of the horses, and the remaining two-thirds are hampered by the necessity of keeping within a certain distance of the animals, while the horses themselves form a conspicuous mark for the enemies' artillery. Compare mounted infantry under these conditions with a similar number of men mounted upon cycles. More inconspicious and more silent, the cycle soldiers could advance with equal rapidity and ease, and the machines, stacked in pairs or thrown down on the grass or under trees or hedges, would be quite invisible at a very short distance, and even if seen, much less easily damaged than a similar number of horses. The whole of the men would then be available for the ordinary work of infantry, thus adding one-third to the effective strength of the detachment. Such bodies of cycle soldiers, drawn from among the marksmen of our army, would, as Lieut.-Col. Savile recently suggested, possess a special value in the field. As scouts the cycle soldiers would again have many points in their favor. When compared with infantry they would be decidedly superior in speed, while, should occasion arise, the cyclist could drop his machine in its tracks and act entirely as an infantryman. When keeping touch over a wide stretch of country the extra pace attainable by the light-riding scout would be of immense advantage. As compared with the cavalry scout the cycle-mounted soldier would possess many important recommendations; he would be much less conspicuous than the cavalry-man, not inferior to him in speed, much more independent of his mount should it be at any time necessary for him to operate on foot; while his progress would be much more silent, especially at high speeds. Behind the fighting line the cyclist would be found very useful. Message carrying, as was remarked at a recent discussion on these points, is poor work for a cavalry soldier; valuable horses are wearied, and useful soldiers sent away on duties which could be at least as effectively rendered by any average cyclist, and a properly trained and organized body of cycling messengers would, I feel sure, show much higher average of speed.—Longman's Magazine.

SOUTH DOURO.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WATER FAMINE.—Owing to the exceedingly dry weather the wells around here are nearly all dried up. There is a perfect famine for water, scarcely enough being available to supply the demands of the inhabitants. The famine is very severe in one house. The man of the house found that others were patronizing his well, and, wishing to keep a reserve for himself, he took off the handle of the pump so that none could draw the water but himself. But to his dismay an old crow came along one day and picked off the thimble and neither the man of the house nor anyone else could draw the water now. It is reported that one of John B. Condon's injectors is to be applied for.

FIRE.—A fire broke out in the swamp, south of the Central cheese factory, on Sunday afternoon, and was making rapid progress westward when an honest woman, it is said, charmed it and turned it back on Johnny Moloney, who set it out. The latter had to exert himself to get it put out, happily, however, before any damage was done.

A Modern Version.

The Hare and the Tortoise (with apologies to the late Æsop)—There was once a Tortoise, who having read the fable of Æsop, became possessed of a desire to try a race with a Hare. It struck him that he could make a good thing of it if he could only find the right kind of Hare. After considerable trouble he succeeded in arranging a match such as he desired. He induced many of his friends to put up their money on the result of the race, and he staked all his own possessions on his success. The day of the race arrived, and the track was lined with interested spectators. The word was given and off they started. The Tortoise indulged in a quiet smile as he saw the Hare rushing along far ahead of him, for he reflected that it was about time, according to Æsop, for the impetuous animal to lie down and take a nap. But to his amazement and chagrin the Hare did not seem to feel sleepy, but kept right on, and reached the goal in 2.7½ amid vociferous applause. Having won the race, the animal thus addressed the Tortoise:—"Old man, times have changed since Æsop's day. The nineteenth-century Hare is a hustler, if you will pardon the slang, and never naps during business hours. You want to remember that the world moves." Moral—Keep up with the times.

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Beautiful Barkeepers.

"The handsomest men in New York," said a well known physician the other day, "are the bartenders. The modern bartender of a first class barroom is required to be abstemious in his habits. Saloon keepers, as a rule, do not want a man around them who drinks. The result is that bartenders have good complexions and clear eyes. They have plenty of time to pay attention to their personal appearance, and as a class make up better than any other set of men in New York. You might put a hundred of them in a ball room and they would outshine the pick and flower of New York aristocracy."—New York Tribune.

Russia has sent four cruisers and one ironclad to the Pacific Ocean with everything in readiness for war. This move, the London correspondent of the Mail thinks, furnishes an additional reason why the Imperial Government should subsidize the Canadian route, so as to be able to send troops to the East, as large ironclads cannot navigate the Suez Canal.

He Never Smiled Again!

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "biliousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needed a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure biliousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. A FOUL ACT.

P. C. McGinty Captures a Pot of Hens.

This morning at about one o'clock P. C. McGinty made quite a find. He was going up George street when he saw two young fellows carrying a pot. He looked in and found it was hens they had. He examined the hens and found that they were warm, having been killed only a short time. With that he took one of the young fellows, John Swanson, in charge so that an account might be given of the fowl. The young fellow wanted to go on across to Ashburnham, but Charlie who was never before known to get off a pun said "not heny," and took him under his wing to the cells.

The pot and its contents were spread before the view of His Worship this morning and the young man stood before him. As no charge was preferred against him prosecution was not proceeded with. His Worship merely questioned him and then said he could go till called for again.

"When will you have me up again?" queried the prisoner.

"I don't know," said his Worship, hastily, "you can go now."

And John Swanson went down the stairs and the pot and the hens remained up stairs.

Some of the spectators said that the animals in the pot were a brace of Wiman's broilers, and that the boys were going to see what the New Yorkers were to pay such fabulous sums for.

P. C. McGinty took charge of the pot and the hens, which are now at the station awaiting the owner.

NATURAL GAS.

A Flow of Gas from a Well in Otonabee Lights up the Neighborhood.

Mr. Thomas Leary, of Leary & Co., well borers, came into town this morning from Otonabee, where he had been boring for water and struck natural gas. The well is on the property of Mr. J. H. Pallin, blacksmith, at Germyn post office, about nine miles from Peterborough on the Norwood road.

The drill had been driven down about eighty feet through solid rock on Tuesday afternoon. At this point the drill became light and it was feared it had come apart. The drill was withdrawn, and it came up easily until it was near the top, as it was upborne by a pressure from beneath. When the drill was taken out water rushed up and fell back, as if it was lifted up by air from below.

A smell indicating the presence of petroleum attracted Mr. Leary's attention and led the belief that there was something unusual about the well. Gas was escaping freely and a match was applied to the top of the tube. The result was a bright clear flame, which burned strongly. The tube reached three or four feet from the ground and the flames rose about three feet from the tube.

It was about five o'clock in the afternoon when the gas was set on fire. It burned all night and was still burning with undiminished strength when Mr Leary left this morning. The flames were clear and bright, more, Mr. Leary remarked, like electric light than like gas light.

The flames and the report of the discovery of natural gas attracted people from the neighborhood around, and a large number watched the unusual sight for some time. This morning again people collected to see the phenomenon and to speculate on the possible results of the discovery.

DAMAGES AND DIVORCE.

An ex-Canadian Official Awarded £1000 in an English Divorce Case.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The suit of Springett v. Springett and Scarth has been decided in the Divorce Court. The petition was that of Mr. Arthur Richard Springett, for a divorce by reason of his wife's adultery with the co-respondent, Mr. Robert William Scarth, farmer, of Cundall, near Boroughbridge, against whom damages were claimed. The petitioner, in which evidence, deposed that he was formerly agent under the Indian Department appointed by the Canadian Government, he having partly the care of the Blackfoot Indians. He made the acquaintance of Ida Paley, the respondent, at Ripon. He married her in 1882. A fortnight after he married her he went to Canada, as he had no means. He was prepared to get his wife out there as soon as possible. He did not wish her to come out to him until he was able to receive her. He did not send her much money. His family never recognised the marriage, and they did not make any provision for her. At Canada he was ill for three or four months, and this cost him $350. After further evidence it has intimated that neither the respondent nor the co-respondent would be called. The only question that remained was as to the amount of damages to be assessed against the co-respondent. In the result the jury found for the petitioner, and assessed the damages at £1000. His Lordship granted a decree nisi, with costs.

A STARTLING STORY.

Thos. Hoolihan and a Young Lady Narrowly Escape Drowning.

Mr. T. Hoolihan, who came to town today, tells a startling story of his experience on Monday night, when himself and a young lady were precipitated from the Mud Lake floating bridge into the water.

His own words are:—"We had been across to Ennismore and were coming back at about nine o'clock towards town. When on the other side of the Mud Lake bridge, as it was exceedingly dark, I pulled the horse up and listened to hear if there was anyone coming across. We heard no noise and I drove on the bridge. We went along till we came near the first turning off place when I heard some teams coming. I shouted to the drivers to stop, but they paid no heed. I could hear them swearing, and, coming to the conclusion that they were drunk, I edged the buggy close up to the railing to let them pass. It would have been all right if they had drove quietly by, but instead of that they stopped as if to find out whether I wanted to fight. Then their horses commenced to back up and mine did the same. The railing broke away and the buggy fell into the water and both of us were precipitated into it. My first care when I got above the water again was to save the young lady. It was no easy thing to find her in the darkness, but at last I found where she was and succeeded in getting her on the bridge. As we were getting up the horse was just on the edge of the bridge. I shouted for some of them to grab the horse so as to prevent him getting in, but not one of them stirred a foot. The horse went over and they went on. We walked across to Fobert's hotel where we got dry clothing. I went back on Tuesday, when myself and Mr. W. H. Montgomery, who gave me every assistance, got the buggy and other things out. The horse was drowned and now lies on the shore of the lake."

Mr. Hoolihan says he intends to take action against the persons to blame. He says that men by the name of Murphy, Crowley, Johnston and Hall were in the rigs.

Wedding Bells.

This forenoon at ten o'clock, Mr. Thomas McJennett, of the Normal School staff, Ottawa, was united in matrimony to Miss Eliza Johnston, leading soprano of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church Choir, at the residence of the bride's mother, Water street. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. I. Tovell. There were a large number of guests present, and most of whom, after congratulations went to the Canadian Pacific Railway station to see Mr. and Mrs. Jennett off on their wedding trip. They will go east as far as Quebec. The presents were very handsome, among the large list being a beautiful silver epergne, presented by the Charlotte Street Church congregation, and a certificate of life membership to the Mission Band Society in connection with St. Paul's Church, presented by the Society, both of which Mrs. McJennet values very highly.

Coopers on Strike.

BUFFALO, Aug. 16.—Nearly all of the flour barrel coopers of the city are on strike to-day. The strike does not affect coopers on light work. About 200 men are out. The flour barrel makers are nearly all Knights of Labor, organized in two assemblies, North Buffalo Assembly and Erie Assembly. They are now getting 9 cents a barrel and demand 10 cents. They make on an average about 100 barrels a week, or $9.

A Raised Cheque

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—Charles Page, a clerk employed by Brauchemin & Valers, booksellers and publishers, has disappeared. It has been discovered that he swindled the firm out of $25,000. It is charged that he raised a cheque on the Bank Jacques Cartier from $25 to $25,000, got it cashed and skipped out.

RUSSIA'S CIRCULAR.

A Feeler on the Bulgarian Question—Forcing the Hands of the Powers.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The circular which M. de Giers, Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has issued to the Powers on the subject of Prince Ferdinand's assumption of the reins of government of Bulgaria, fully expresses the views of Russia and France, and, judging from its general tone, is put forth as a feeler. After giving the reasons for Russia's attitude, the circular requests the Powers to join the Czar's government in protesting against the validity of Prince Ferdinand's claims and his action in proclaiming himself prince of Bulgaria. There is nothing in the circular of a character denoting Russia's determination to oust the new prince at all hazards, but there is throughout a vein of firmness in the note that is calculated to force the hands of England, Austria and Germany and cause those powers to say definitely whether or not they intend to act strictly in accordance with the Treaty of Berlin and whether in the event of their taking no part, active or passive, in the Bulgarian muddle they will acquiesce in Russia's maintaining her rights under the same treaty. All the acts of the new prince of Bulgaria thus far have been performed with a view of reversing the rule of Prince Alexander and emphasizing the outrage of his expulsion, and the policy of Prince Ferdinand in thus acting was evidently conceived with the idea of securing for himself the adherence of the people of Bulgaria, who loved Alexander, and of obtaining the support of England. As yet it is not known that the Porte has made any reply to the protest of Russia presented by the Russian charge d'affairs, but it is likely that it will be acted upon in a manner measurably favorable to Russia, since the Sultan has ample excuse for withholding his full recognition of Prince Ferdinand in the fact that the Prince neglected to apply for and receive the Porte's consent to his assuming the throne before going to Bulgaria, a formality required by the terms of the Berlin treaty.

ANOTHER RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Three Persons Killed and Many Others Seriously Injured.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The St. Louis, Chicago & Cincinnati express train on the Baltimore & Ohio road, due here at 6.20 a. m. to-day, ran upon what is known as the "Y," near the depot at the rate of 40 miles an hour. A general wreck ensued, and all the cars except the sleeper were badly smashed.

The only deaths reported at this hour (10 a.m.) are those of Hamilton Brozins, the engineer of the train, and two passengers. The fireman was badly scalded and fifteen passengers were seriously injured. The signal tower was completely demolished. The telegraph operator fortunately observed the derailment in time to escape by jumping from the window of the structure. His arm was broken, but he was not otherwise injured.

AGAIN REPORTED DEAD.

Stanley Said to Have been Massacred Deserted by His Escort.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A despatch from Zanzibar has been received at the Foreign Office, which says:—Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, has been massacred by the natives, after having been deserted by his escort.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Neither the Foreign Office nor the Emin Bey Relief Committee has received any word regarding the massacre of Henry M. Stanley. The officials at the Foreign Office are surprised at the intelligence in the despatch received by the French Government, and say that if news of Stanley's death had been received at Zanzibar the British agent had failed to send it.

A Shocking Casualty.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 17.—The Newport express train for New York yesterday struck a carriage containing four persons, a man, two ladies and a boy, at Five Mile River. All four were killed.

Fall of a Rock.

QUEBEC, Aug. 17.—A rock of about a ton weight fell from a cliff behind the Quebec warehouse buildings at Point Levis yesterday afternoon, demolishing the offices of the company. Damage about $800. No one injured.

A LARGE DEPOT.

The Canadian Pacific's New Building in Montreal.

People have been very skeptical regarding the location of the west end depot of the Canadian Pacific Railway, many believing that it would finally be established in Victoria Square. All doubts regarding this are now set at rest, as the contracts for the foundations for the edifice on Windsor street have been awarded to M. Davis & Sons, the well known contractors of Ottawa, who have already done a large amount of work for the company on the Ontario and Quebec and other portions of the great highway.

The foundations involve an expenditure of about $60,000, and are to be completed within six weeks. Before that time the contract for the whole building will have been let, and, it is anticipated, will be sufficiently advanced by next May to allow the company to vacate the present offices on Place d'Armes square, as stipulated with the insurance company, which has purchased the premises.

Mr. Shaughnessy, Assistant General Manager, says the company hope to have trains running out of the new depot before a twelvemonth. The right of way within the city has almost been completed, and the new line outside of the limits has been decided upon. The building, it is said, will cost over $800,000. This, added to the cost of acquiring the right of way, will run up the cost of the western entrance into the city at considerably over a million dollars, but as the depot is to be one of the finest on the continent, and as the short line to Toronto is already admitted to be one of the best in America, the C.P.R. authorities consider the money well invested.

The contractors for the depot have secured valuable quarries in the vicinity of Montreal, from which the blue stone will be taken for the building. A new plan of dressing the Montreal stone to be employed will be followed, which it is believed will have a very striking effect.—Montreal Star.

BEHRING SEA SEIZURES.

The Sayward Only Took Seals in the Pacific Ocean.

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—The Department of Fisheries to-day received the official report of the seizure in Behring Sea of the Canadian schooner W. P. Sayward. The account varies somewhat from the account given by the American authorities, the most important difference being that American account says that seals found in the vessel were caught in Behring Sea, while the mate of the Sayward, who makes the affidavit forwarded to the Canadian authorities, says that the seals were all caught in the Pacific Ocean, north of Vancouver Island, and not one was taken after the vessel entered Behring Sea. It appears from the affidavit of the mate that the schooner sailed from Victoria on May 18 on a sealing voyage carrying a crew of 7 men and 16 Indian hunters, that a good deal of fishing was done in the Pacific Ocean, off Cape Scott, at the north end of Vancouver Island, 479 fur seals being taken. On July 2 the vessel entered Behring Sea, but took no seals there as the weather is very foggy. On July 9 the vessel was captured by the United States revenue cutter Rush while about forty miles from the nearest land, and was taken to Ounalaska. From thence the vessel was sent to Sitka, where the officers were held for trial on Aug. 22. They were only allowed to remove their clothing from the vessel. The Indians were left to find their way back as best they could, they being about 700 miles from their villages. On the receipt of this information the Department of Fisheries took immediate steps to bring to the notice of the Imperial authorities the facts above stated.

How Germany Duped Russia.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The Herald's Paris cablegram says: Victor Tissott has published an extract from a letter which, he asserts, the late Czar wrote to his Morganatic wife, the Princess Dolgorouki, after the Berlin congress. In the portion of the letter made public the Czar says:—"The congress has been an immense misfortune to Russia. Germany sold us. The Russian statesmen who had full powers were not equal to their important mission. Bismarck has revenged himself for the support I gave France in 1875 during my stay in Berlin." The letter is regarded here as confirmatory of the revelations recently made by Gen. Leflo.

Mysterious Murder.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Alonzo Stone, a young tinsmith, lives at East Rochester with his wife and one child. About 6.30 o'clock last night Stone found Mrs. Stone dead in the cellar of his house. She was lying at full length with a cloth knotted tightly about her neck, while a cut was found on the temple, evidently inflicted by some sharp instrument. There were evidences of a struggle in the floors above. Stone has been arrested, but he asserted his innocence. Several neighbors say that they saw a strange man in the vicinity of Stone's house.

The Indian War Over.

RAWLINS, Wyoming, Aug. 17.—A despatch from Meeker, dated Monday morning, says: Mr. N. Major has just returned from the Ute camp. After holding a conference with Colorow and other Ute chiefs, Mr. Major requested them to leave the state. They promised to comply with his demand. They asked fifteen days in which to gather stock and allow their wounded to recover. The request was granted and no further trouble is anticipated.

Eviction in Belleville.

On Wednesday afternoon High Constable Johnston, acting under instructions from Col. Jas. Brown, evicted Miss McAdie from property that she had occupied for years. She is over sixty years old. Her household effects were strewn along the fence, where they had been dumped over. The neighbors say that her cries for mercy whilst the work was going on were pitiful. The W. C. A. have interested themselves in her case —Intelligencer.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE IRISH OUTRAGES.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—The attempt to blow up the West Clare railway bridge near Ennis yesterday has created a great sensation. The outrage is attributed, of course, to the American section of Irish dynamiters, and in support of this opinion attention is drawn to the fact that the cartridges that did not explode are of the American type. This is not the most conclusive evidence that could be brought, but it is quite sufficient to satisfy the police and the public that the plot was conceived and executed by Irish-Americans. It is more probable, however, that the outrage was the work of discharged employees or peasants actuated by some real or fancied grievance against the railway.

RUSSIAN IMPORT DUTIES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—It is reported that the Council at its meeting in September will further increase the import duties.

EMIGRATION OF DESTITUTE ALIENS.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—In the House of Commons last night Sir James Ferguson, parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, announced that at the next session he would ask for the appointment of a committee to enquire into the emigration of destitute aliens and consult on the measures adopted by other countries to remedy the evil.

AN ALCOHOL MONOPOLY.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—The Bundsrath has authorized the raising of a loan of 85,000,000 marks to enable the Government to work the alcohol monopoly.

THE BRITISH MINISTRY.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Standard openly advocates a coalition Ministry. It admits that Mr. Gladstone is still followed by the bulk of the Liberals in the country through the anomalous position occupied by the Unionists. The Cabinet will sit to-morrow to decide finally upon the course of business during the remainder of the session.

THE CHOLERA.

ROME, Aug. 17.—King Humbert has sent $6,000 to be used in relieving distress in the cholera infected districts. The King's liberality has greatly stimulated private donations. The latest reports show that the disease is fast decreasing everywhere in Palermo. Yesterday only three new cases were reported. At Naples and Resina there are only isolated cases.

THE LEAGUE MEETING.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the National League, yesterday, Mr. Harris M. P., announced that the receipts since the last meeting amounted to £2,138, of which £2,000 came from the Parliamentary Aid Society of New York. The Nationalists, he said, were on the eve of success. The victory in Norwich virtually made Mr. Gladstone premier. Speaking of his Home Rule measure he (Harris) hoped it would be an advanced one, if the landlords got one-half of what Mr. Gladstone offered them before they ought to be happy.

THE POPE'S COMMISSIONER.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—Mgr. Persico, the Pope's special commissioner to Ireland, is gradually making his way through the country, visiting the archbishops and bishops en route. He is at present the guest of the Right Rev. Bartholomew Woodlock, Bishop of Ardagh, at Longford. Mgr. Persico, since the presentation of his report to the Vatican, has greatly risen in the esteem of the Irish people and their admiration of him is enthusiastically manifested whenever he appears in public.

THE REASON WHY.

BERLIN, Aug 17.—The North German Gazette's article saying Germany cannot approve Prince Ferdinand's course is supposed to have been inspired by Prince Bismarck as a result of his interview with Count Schouvaloff, the Russian ambassador.

THE GREAT POWERS POSITION.

SOFIA, Aug. 17.—It is stated that Austria, England and Italy have notified the Porte that their agents will remain in Bulgaria and continue relations with the Government. Russia insists that the appointment of Artinas Turkish Commissioner to Bulgaria be cancelled.

MR RAIKES AND "REFORMS."

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Mr. Henry Cecil Raikes, the Postmaster-General, appears to be uncompromisingly opposed to the adoption of reforms and improvements in the telegraphic service. Only a few days ago he flatly refused to consider a proposal to put in operation a system of half-rate telegrams to be transmitted during the night, as is done in America, on the ground that he did not think it advisable to try any new experiment, and last night, in reply to a proposal by Mr. Jacob Bright, member for Manchester, to discuss the subject of long distance telephony, he declared that he very much doubted the advantage of a system enabling conversation to be carried on between the great towns of England. The present system of communication, he said, had hitherto sufficed, and he could see no reason why it should not answer for the future.

ALPINE FATALITIES.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Four fatal accidents to Alpine tourists are reported from Zurich, making eighteen deaths in the Alps within a month

A CYCLONE IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A cyclone yesterday ravaged a great part of the south of France. It was severest in the department of Aude, where a number of houses were destroyed and several persons were killed.

EVICTIONS POSTPONED.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—The proposed evictions at Hestertown and Ardagh have been postponed, Mr. Plunkett, the magistrate, having stated that he was unable to furnish a force of police to assist the evictors.

Over Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 17.—On Monday afternoon while C. H. Frank was standing near the residence of Peter A. Porter, he noticed what appeared to him to be the head of a man rapidly going down stream. He called the attention of a man working near by, who got a pair of glasses and, with their aid, plainly saw a man swimming down stream, as if making an effort to gain the head of Goat Island. As they watched him he was carried by on the Canadian side of the Island, and a little later on a couple of strangers reported that as they were crossing the bridge connecting the first Sister Island with Goat Island, a man's body passed under it and was plainly visible.

THURSDAY, AUGUST, 18, 1887.

WHO IS TO VETO?

In a very mischievous article on "Disallowance" the Toronto Mail says: "Manitoba has the same right as the other Provinces or the Dominion itself to charter a road from any one point within her confines to any other." She has the same right as the other Provinces, that is no right at all, to charter a portion of an interprovincial or international road, as such right is reserved by our constitution for the Dominion. And even the right to charter a really local road is subject to disallowance by the Dominion.

In their frantic efforts to strike at the Dominion Administration the Mail, the Globe and other opposition journals, are agitating in the matter to foster a transient disagreement with reckless disregard for the ulterior consequences of their folly. There is a far graver and more permanent question involved than the present traffic of Manitoba. That question is whether a section of this country or the central authority is to have the control in matters of general policy—a question similar to that decided by our neighbors at the cost of a terrible civil war.

By our constitution, besides the special reservation to the Dominion of certain matters of national importance, the central power has been given a general right of disallowance, as in such a manner alone can any general policy for the whole Dominion be maintained. The political opponents of the present administration, including those most bitter opponents, former friends, whose over valuation of themselves has been disappointed, are endeavoring to upset this constitutional rule. They would have the power given to any Province to veto and nullify the general policy of the country. The people of this Dominion by their constitutional representatives, including those of Manitoba, have resolved to give a preference to home over foreign industries. The people of Manitoba are avowedly trying to nullify this policy as far as possible and to favour dealings with foreigners. The people of this Dominion have resolved at great cost to establish means of communication within their own territories from one extremity to the other. The people of Manitoba are striving to establish their communications with foreign ports by foreign roads, and to transfer to these foreigners the benefit of the costly expenditure by the people of Canada on their great through route. They accept the advantages of the general policy of the country, which in fact has created their Province, but they refuse to submit to any temporary inconvenience connected with it.

If this policy, so strongly supported for purposes of obstruction by factious politicians, were to be the rule, Canada would no more be an organized community than was the Saxon Heptarchy. It would be a mere chaos, if, after resolving upon a general policy each section were at liberty to declare that it would not abide by the decision as to some particular point and were to be encouraged by the party out of power at the moment to threaten rebellion if it could not have its own way regardless of the general interests.

If the Dominion of Canada is to flourish it must not adopt the idea exploded among our neighbors that every man has a right to whop his own nigger, nor that a Province should be allowed to give him that right in defiance of the will of the country as a whole.

THE imaginative reporter of the Detroit News has been paying a visit to Peterborough to hunt up Annexationists. Remembering that the News has been repeatedly proved to have slandered the victims whom it has thus interviewed and misreported, those who see the number in question of this serial fiction should in all fairness suspend judgment till the Peterborough men who have come under this infliction have an opportunity of correcting the assertions made regarding them.

A PIRATE in the Behring Sea has been seizing Canadian and United States vessels on the high seas. As this pirate flies the stars and stripes he should be dealt with promptly by the authorities at Washington, who will otherwise find themselves responsible for his crimes.

"For contemplation he, and valor formed,
For softness she and sweet attractive grace."

John Milton in his "Paradise Lost" thus distinguishes woman from man. Diseases fall to her lot that do not to man's, peculiar to her soft and more refined nature. A remedy adapted to the cure of her peculiar diseases is found in Dr R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," for women. Thousands who have used it attest its great worth.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

A Collection Illustrating His Progression Down to Historic Time.

A valuable collection, numbering more than 10,000 objects, illustrating the habits and accomplishments of prehistoric man in Western Europe, was opened to public exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution today. These were gathered during a five years' residence abroad by Mr. Thomas Wilson, ex-United States consul at Nice, and his wife. They have been so arranged as to illustrate the gradual progression of the race from the beginning of the palaeolithic epoch of archaeology (the quarternary of geology) down to and through the bronze age to its merging with the iron, just preceding the dawn of prehistoric time.

The series begins with the chipped stone elements of the creatures who, during perhaps sixty or seventy centuries, roamed over all that portion of the continent then above water and not covered with ice. The jaw-bones of the people lack the fixtures, so to speak, to which in modern humanity the tongue muscles are attached; and this leads to the presumption that they did not possess the power of speech. However that may be, the shape of their skulls indicate that they could have had nothing of interest or importance to say.

The dawn of the glacial period drove them to the caves, where, during a residence of some centuries, they invented clothes. This is proved by the existence in great numbers of stone scrapers used in preparing the hides of their quadrupedal contemporaries. From chipped stone they have advanced to ground or polished stone and thence to implements of bone. Now came the dawn of art, and their finest bone implements were engraved with pictures of the horse, reindeer and bear.

The Vanderbilts.

The Vanderbilt name is no longer heard in Wall street at all, or, if at all, only incidentally. It no longer has any influence whatever on the general course of events in that quarter. This is a marvellous change from the time when that name had power to move Wall street from end to end. The present Vanderbilts have no taste to speak of for speculation. William K. showed a good deal at one time, but a squeezing he got cured him pretty thoroughly, and as he now has all the money he can spend, thanks to his father's will, he does not care to bother about making more, but takes all the pleasure he can find instead. Cornelius, the head of the family, is methodical and quiet. Wall street never sees him. He gives all his time to affairs of the Central railroad, without reference to the stock market, and the religious and philanthropist societies he is connected with.

Frederick is also inclined to business and quiet ways, and the fourth and youngest brother George is more interested in books than anything else. The disappearance of the Vanderbilt name from Wall street is only part, however, of the change that has taken place there. Nearly all the old names are gone too. With the exception of Gould there is not a single strong man in the street to-day. Russell Sage, Cyrus W. Field and Dea. White, who rank next after Gould, would have been mere subalterns ten or fifteen years ago. The days of big leaders seem to be past, and, if they are past, it may be as well. The big fellows had just as little mercy on the miscellaneous crowd as the little ones. The first Vanderbilt died worth a hundred millions, and his son doubled it.—New York Letter.

Too Great a Risk.

American Millionaire—Yes, I am very proud of my yacht and hope you enjoyed the sail.

American Naval Officer—It was delightful. You spend most of the summer yachting, I suppose?

"Yes, I almost live in my boat."

"In order to return the favour, I take pleasure, sir, in inviting you to take a trip with me on the man-of-war which I have the honour to command."

"Thanks, captain, many thanks, but I must decline, I can't swim."—Omaha World.

A FACT FOR THE FARMERS.

The Hamilton Times essays too much when it tries to prove that under unlimited reciprocity with the United States the Canadians would be enabled to get their sugar for about one half the price now paid. The Canadian rate for granulated sugar is 7 cents per pound, which is precisely the retail rate in Buffalo and most other American cities. As a matter of fact the necessaries of life bring no higher price here than in Canada, judging from the market reports and prices current.—Buffalo Courier.

OUR PROPOSED PARTNERS.

The way the law is enforced in the United States is emphasized by the rescue of a notorious demagogue, Senator Riddleberger, from prison, whither he had been sent for flagrant contempt of court. Let us hasten to be annexed to a country in which law is a misnomer and wedlock a matter of convenience.—Toronto World.

NEARER HOME

Blaine is in Ireland to witness evictions, it is now said. There is no necessity for Mr. Blaine to leave his own country for any such purpose. Last week, in New York city, one landlord evicted nine families in as brutal and heartless a manner as ever was witnessed in Ireland. The goods of widows and orphans were thrown out of doors, and the room in which was a sick woman was stripped of everything except the bed she was on, necessitating the calling of the ambulance to take her to the hospital. No, there is no necessity for Mr. Blaine going to Ireland to witness eviction.—Detroit News.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

"Don't you suppose," said a member of the police force, "that a policeman knows a rogue when he sees him?" "No doubt," was the reply; "but the trouble is that he does not seize a rogue when he knows him."

The harvest is well advanced throughout Manitoba and the North-West Territories, nearly half the wheat being already cut. A magnificent crop, averaging at least 25 bushels to the acre, is assured.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

A sensational story published in a North-West journal that Gabriel Dumont is seeking to raise another rebellion is positively denied by a Montana correspondent, who says Dumont is living in Montana very quietly.

The library of the Dominion Parliament, comprising 120,000 volumes, is the largest in Canada, Laval University at Quebec coming second, and a collection at Toronto third, with 100,000 and 46,000 volumes respectively.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the System and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The collections of pottery and bronze of much later period are curious and extensive. Of bronze there are barbed fish hooks, exactly like those of to-day; long pins with globular heads as large as walnuts, the counterparts of the implements used by modern ladies to keep the hat in place and, finally, there are safety pins, used by Etruscan maidens long before the advent of Romulus and Remus, which contained in the germ every principle of that most useful article known to the modern nursery.—*Washington Special in N. THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER I.

I rememoer it all as clearly as if it had happened yesterday afternoon. It is one of those little scenes which, without being specially significant or suggestive, manage somehow or other to imprint themselves upon the memory, and which remain there while so many hundreds of others fade away and vanish, as the years go on. When I closed my eyes for a moment just now the whole thing came back to me—the dark, musty smelling study, with one broad sunbeam stretching right across it from the window; Bracknell, Jim and I standing close together beside the high, empty fireplace; old Lord Staines, looking uncommonly smart and spruce (as he always did in those days), a flower in his button hole and a smile of serene beatitude on his handsome face, and my tutor blinking through his spectacles and addressing himself, after his customary fashion, to no one in particular.

"I shall be sorry to lose these three fellows," says he. "They aren't bad fellows, you know, taking them all round, and I fancy they will succeed as well in the world as they have succeeded at Eton. Yes, just about as well. Bracknell—well, I don't see what more could have been asked of Bracknell than that he should get into the eleven and avoid getting into any serious scrapes. He is good looking, he is good natured, and from time to time I have even observed gleams of—er—intelligence in him. Bracknell will do; he will adorn his station. Well, then, Maynard. Maynard is clever, if not quite so clever as he thinks himself. I hardly expect him to set the Thames on fire, but I hope his mother will never have reason to be ashamed of him, and I have written to her, telling her that I consider him my show pupil. More than I ought to have said, perhaps, but there's no fear of her disbelieving me. As for Leigh" (here my tutor took a few steps forward and patted Jim on the shoulder), "what is to be said about you, Leigh? In classics you are but moderate; in mathematics I understand that you are also moderate; you're not in the eleven; you're not in the eight; I doubt very much whether you would be in the boats at all if you hadn't so many friends. In short, Leigh, you are mediocre. But you're the best fellow of the lot, all the same. And, that being so," added my tutor, looking up with a queer, kindly smile at the young giant who towered nearly a head and shoulders above him, "I should be inclined to prophesy, Leigh, that you will always have plenty of friends and that you will possibly be—er—more or less imposed upon all your life long."

Lord Staines broke out into laughter at this rather cynical prediction. "We'll look after him," said he; "we'll see that you aren't imposed upon, Leigh."

And I dare say he thought himself quite capable of so doing, although his own career might not have recommended him to an impartial person as being the fittest man in the world to undertake that task. He had always taken a good humored and somewhat patronizing interest in Jim, whose father and mother were both dead, whose small property adjoined his more extensive one in Berkshire, and who—above all—was his boy's friend. He thought very well of the lad, and indeed was kind enough to say as much there and then. As for Jim's being "the best of the lot," that of course was only a joke. It is not in the least likely that Lord Staines would have been angry with any one who should have seriously declared Jim to be Bracknell's superior. When one is fortune enough to be the owner of a Derby winner one is not quite so silly as to lose one's temper with a man for proclaiming his own steady useful roadster to be the more valuable animal of the two.

Poor old Lord Staines was a fond and foolish father, no doubt. I have heard him so described with such wearisome frequency that I should very much like to contradict the statement if I could. That being impossible, I will only venture to assert that there were excuses for him. Everything leads me to believe that if I had a son as handsome, as muscular, as recklessly brave and jolly, and devil may care as Bracknell was in those days, I should be proud of him. These attributes may or may not constitute a legitimate cause for parental pride; but I suppose it will hardly be denied that they usually excite it. At the same time, it must be admitted that Lord Staines was a little bit outrageous in his crowing and chuckling, and one can't wonder that some of his friends laughed at him, while others found him rather a bore. Whenever there was a cricket match on he would collect as many cronies as he could induce to accompany him and would drag them down to Eton to watch his boy bowling and slogging. He himself never wearied of this delightful spectacle, and could not understand that it might eventually pall upon others. He kept Bracknell supplied with plenty of pocket money, laughing good humoredly at the rapidity with which it was spent. I don't suppose that he even minded much when certain longish bills were sent in to him by the Windsor and Eton tradesmen, some of whom respectfully intimated that they had not been paid for three years. He, too, had always been open handed, careless and extravagant; probably he thought it only natural that his son and heir should resemble him, and if by any chance he ever considered the effect of two generations of extravagance upon a not very magnificent rent roll, he doubtless said to himself that some day Bracknell would marry a woman with money, and that then it would be all right. Such was the course which he had adopted, and it had answered admirably. That is to say that he had not, at the time of which I am speaking, yet reached the last shilling of his late wife's fortune.

He was, at any rate, evidently free from misgivings on that last day of Bracknell's Eton life; for he was literally brimming over with contentment and goodwill. He shook hands with us warmly when the time came for us to wish him goodby, repeating to us both again and again that although our friend's path in life would no longer be the same as our own (for Bracknell was to join the Fourth Life guards immediately, while Jim and I were to proceed in due course to Oxford), yet we were on no account to imagine that our friendship was at an end.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Of ten persons spoken ill of, the speaker knows nothing of nine.

The only people who keep diaries for any length of time are those who keep them for sale.

"Oh, take me; take me away," sings a newspaper poet. Yes, take him away. Stand not upon the order of your taking, but take him at once.

Every man thinks he is about right himself. An old Quaker said to his wife:—"All the world is queer except me and thee, and thee is a little queer."

Highland drover, trying unsuccessfully to divide a flock of sheep:—"Hock, hock, ta stupid brutes, tere's no wan o' them wull gang two roads at wan time!"

The man at the head of the house can mar the pleasure of the household, but he cannot make it—that must rest with the woman, and that is her greatest privilege.

Teacher:—"Who was Alexander Selkirk?" Tommy:—"He was a civil engineer." Teacher:—"Civil engineer?" Tommy:—"Yes, ma'am; monarch of all he surveyed."

A lady being questioned in court the other day as to why she had changed her religion stated she had done so because, being separated from her husband, she determined to avoid meeting him in the next world.

They tell a queer story about a well known police court justice, whose daughter asked him the other day what he meant to give her for her birthday. He was just dozing, but he grunted out, "Ten dollars or ten days."

A negro preacher in South Georgia county asked his congregation the other day for a short vacation. An old sister objected, giving as a reason "dat de debil nebber takes no holleriay, but he gits in his wuk ev'y minute."

Lady Teacher—"Can any of you boys inform me why icebergs become dissolved when they reach the southern seas?" Precocious youth holds up his hand. L. T.—"Well, my little man, what do you think?" P. Y.—"Because there's nae sawdust on them, mum."

"What has become of your niece, Miss Murphy, Mrs. O'Raherty?" "Och, sure an' she's done well wid herself. She married a lord." "Why, you don't tell me! An English lord?" "No; I don't think he's an English lord. He's a landlord—he kapes a hotel in Tipperary."

The following passage between Bench and Bar occurred in a certain Court the other day at end of a lengthened wrangle. His Lordship:—"Well, Mr. Blank, if you do not know how to conduct yourself as a genteman I am sure I can't teach you." Counsel:—"That is so, my Lord."

A NEW DEFINITION.—(Scene—Glasgow car). 1st Female Passenger:—"I wunner whit't the meanin' o' this terrible word Jubilee?" 2d do.:—"I'll tell ye. Whin a woman's merrit twenty-five years that's her silver waddin', whin she's merrit fifty years that's her golden waddin', an' whin her man dees that's her jubilee!"

A DYNAMITE OUTRAGE.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—Two dynamite cartridges were exploded on the West Clare railway bridge at Ennis to-day. No serious damage was done. Two other cartridges were found on the bridge which failed to explode. The Town hall at Crusheen County Clare, was fired into to-day, but no damage was done.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Clerks.

The dry goods clerks are going to hold another meeting this evening, relative to the early closing movement.

Building.

The Dunsford block of buildings, Water street, is nearing completion. The block being erected by Mr. Snowden, Simcoe street, has reached the third story.

Furniture Sale.

The sale of Mr. Geo. E William's furniture will take place on Friday at one o'clock. It will be a good opportunity of getting nice furniture.

Sports.

A meeting of the sports of Peterborough was to have been held at the Hub Restaurant last night, but owing to other attractions the attendance was not large enough. It was decided to adjourn till to-morrow evening.

Number Ten.

Capt. Grant, of the Ottawa Canton, is in town and has consented to formally institute Peterborough Canton, No. 10, this evening. The Canton will meet in the Peterborough Lodge room at 7 o'clock sharp, when Capt. Grant and Chevaliers Cameron and Menzies, also of the Ottawa Canton, will be present. Every member of No. 10 is requested to be present.

A Handsome Present.

Mr. W. A. Sanderson has given the Fire Brigade Band, of which he was an old-time member, a very handsome present. It is a drum major's uniform. The tunic is of richiscarlet elaborately trimmed with gold lace. There is also a patent leather cross belt, a patent leather waist belt and a handsome busby. The trousers are black with a gold stripe. The uniform was imported from England. It is on exhibition in Mr. A. McNeil's Habilliment Hall.

A Lover of the Game.

Mr. Michael Sheehan, Ashburnham, though upwards of seventy-five years of age, stands by lacrosse with all his heart. In the last ten years he has never missed seeing a game that has been played in Peterborough. Commenting on the recent Toronto vs. Riverside match—and his opinion is surely valuable—he said:—"The Torontos is smart boys; no one can say agin it. But they'll have to bring smarter the next time." Messrs. Edwards and Sheehan always have the front seat in the grand stand.

Camp Store Closed.

Mr. A. Elliott, who has been in charge of the camp store at Stoney Lake for the past month, has returned to town, having closed the store for the season. Messrs. Elliott & Tierney are deserving of the thanks of the A. C. A. campers for having provided so well for them. The store contained a supply of almost everything requisite to make a camp comfortable. Mr. Elliott acted in the capacity of Post Master to the satisfaction of all. There are still quite a number camping at the lake, about two hundred altogether.

Literature Wanted.

The W. C. T. U. will be grateful for contributions of books and papers for distribution among the lumbermen. Last year a few personal appeals were made to which there was a generous response. It has been suggested that others, who are not aware of this line of work in connection with our Union, might be glad to contribute. London Illustrated News, The Graphic, Sunday at Home, Sunday Magazine, British Workman, or any other magazine will be thankfully received. The men have expressed their grateful appreciation. Shut out as they are from all home influence and social intercourse these contributions are a perfect boon.—M. F. SANDERSON, President W. C. T. U.

MR. PELL'S VISIT.

He is Satisfied With the Peterborough Fire Department.

Mr. Pell, Superintendent of Fire Departments for the Underwriters Association, arrived in town on Wednesday evening to inspect the fire appliances which have been recently added to the department.

After supper Mr. Pell, accompanied by Councillor McNeil, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and Mr. H. W. Kent, manager of the Peterborough office of the Bell Telephone Company, drove to No. 1 ward and rang the call box at the corner of Stewart and Dalhousie Streets.

The response was equal to expectation. In three minutes the brigade reached the hydrant at the corner of Stewart and Sherbrooke Streets, and two minutes later a stream of water was playing on a pile of bushes set afire two blocks distant. The engine was stationed at the corner of Stewart and Dalhousie Streets, but no hose was laid from it.

Mr. Pell expressed his satisfaction with this test, and then drove to examine other call boxes.

At 11 o'clock at night Mr. Pell gave the brigade another test. The call box at the corner of Downie and Simcoe streets was rung, and in five minutes the hose waggon had a line of hose out when stopped by Mr. Pell. The hook and ladder waggon arrived half a minute later, and the engine with twenty pounds of steam up brought up the rear seven minutes after the alarm was given. Of course it would not have been necessary to wait for the engine, as this district is supplied with hydrants.

Mr. Pell expressed his entire satisfaction with the result of the tests, and says that the town will be placed in Class B, without delay.

TWO TO ONE.

Eleven Cricketers Defeat a Team of Twenty-Two.

For the last two or three weeks two teams of cricketers, the Buffers and the Duffers, have been striving for the mastery over each other, but yesterday, emboldened by practice, they united and tackled the first eleven. Although defeated they were by no means disgraced, their score of 83 against the bowling of such performers as Stratton, Max. Hamilton and Hugh Ray being very creditable. The eleven batted first and scored 120. Early in the innings a long stand was made by Stirling and E. Stratton, who each got 17 in good style, while, later on, the two cracks, Stratton and Sam Ray, gave the field a trial at leather hunting in their scores of 38 and 21. For the twenty-two(?)the veteran Strickland played a very fine game for his 21, which included no less than six threes; while Dee showed most promising cricket for his 15. M. Hamilton's bowling was very destructive, no fewer than 13 wickets being his share of the spoil. Score:—

Taller Still.

The reputation gained by Edinburgh street as a spot where tall corn grows, is being loyally upheld by Mr. Wm. Coulter. He is not going to allow an Ashburnham clergyman to outstrip Edinburgh street. He now announces that he has a corn stalk in his garden 11 feet 1 inch high (eleven feet one inch). He has the stalk now under cultivation and it shows an inclination to get up as high as the house.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased ove his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

PORT HOPE.

THIGH BROKEN.—A little boy about six years of age, son of Mr. James Perrin, Baldwin street, while playing in the loft fell to the ground and broke his thigh yesterday. The little fellow received prompt attention from a surgeon and is now getting on comfortably.

SHOULDER DISLOCATED.—On Monday evening John Woodley, while breaking a colt belonging to Mr. James Eakins, had the animal strike him with one of its fore feet, dislocating the shoulder. The halter used on the colt was too short to allow him to properly control it, and thus the accident.—Guide.

DROWNED.—A sad drowning accident occurred on Tuesday, morning about ten o'clock, in which Willie, the six year old son of Mr. John McCaffery, lost his life. While he and a number of other small boys were in bathing, in the lake down by Helm's crib, he accidentally fell into the water, which was too deep for him, and the other boys were not able to pull him out. Some of them ran away to get help, but when they returned the poor little fellow was drowned. The family have the sympathy of our citizens in their bereavement.—Times.

GAS.

Excitement About the Find in Otonabee Township.

There was quite a crowd from town visiting the Otonabee gas well on Wednesday evening. When they arrived they found the flame to be just as represented. It was blazing away from an orifice about four inches in diameter, created by the well drill.

While the visitors faces were lit up by the bright flame, which sprang about four feet from the ground, the noise of the gas churning through a head of seventy feet of water could be heard quite distinctly. They came back to town well satisfied with the sight, so rare in this part of the country.

Mr. Pallin, the blacksmith near whose place the well is, was in town to-day getting piping, which he says he is going to use to conduct the gas into his blacksmith shop and his residence. He says he is going to dispense with coal in his forge making use of the gas instead. He also says he is going to run his cooking stove by gas and also have his house lighted by gas—real city fashion, you know. Everyone will say that this is an enterprising blacksmith indeed.

There are a variety of opinions as to the source and quantity of the supply. As usual in such cases, there is no end to speculation. One man was rash enough to say that he believed there was gas in Peterborough, and if a well was dug deep enough the Gas Company would be minus a job. This man is right, with the exception that no digging is required, as a regular attendant at Board of Education meetings, and Town Council meetings can verify.

Be this as it may, the Snowden bus line is going to run rigs down to the well this evening, starting from the hotel so as to let those who are curious enough have an opportunity to see the natural wonder.

Personal.

Mr. Richard Reeves, formerly of Peterborough, now of Ann Arbor, Mich., is in town on a visit. Since leaving here Mr. Reeves has gone into partnership in purchasing a foundry in Ann Arbor, the firm being Barclay & Reeves. The establishment consists of moulding, pattern, blacksmith shops, and a boiler shop, 84x50, is now being built.

Mr. H. B. Weller, Millbrook, is in Toronto being treated for a severe illness.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

Charlie's Hens.

No one has called for the brace of hens captured by P. C. McGinty on Wednesday morning. The brace still hang together on a nail at the police station. They will not hang together much longer this warm weather.

Photographs.

Several photographic views taken by Mr. R. M. Roy, are on exhibition in the window of R. W. Muncaster's jewelry store. Among them is one descriptive of the bicycle race held in the Driving Park on Wednesday, August 10th. The others are photographs of the Duffers and Buffers cricket teams.

A New Serial.

In this issue we commence the publication of a new serial. It is a well written and interesting story, by an able and popular author.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

The Liar Again Contradicted.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 17.—The despatches sent from here recently, regarding the failure of the fisheries and bankruptcy, are false. The Colonist to-day contains a denial over the signature of Sir Robert Thorburn, Premier of the Local Government, in which he says that neither bankruptcy nor destitution exist, and that the Labrador fisheries are much better than last year.

Railways Wanted.

WINNIPEG Aug. 17.—A deputation arrived here, last evening, from Portage la Prairie to interview the Government and urge the construction of a line of railway from here to Portage la Prairie this fall to unite the Red River and the Manitoba & North-Western. Deputations will arrive, to-day, from Minnedosa, Rapid City, Neepawa and Gladstone to urge the same thing on the Government.

RUSSIA'S CIRCULAR.

A Feeler on the Bulgarian Question—Forcing the Hands of the Powers.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The circular which M. de Giers, Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has issued to the Powers on the subject of Prince Ferdinand's assumption of the reins of government of Bulgaria, fully expresses the views of Russia and France, and, judging from its general tone, is put forth as a feeler. After giving the reasons for Russia's attitude, the circular requests the Powers to join the Czar's government in protesting against the validity of Prince Ferdinand's claims and his action in proclaiming himself prince of Bulgaria. There is nothing in the circular of a character denoting Russia's determination to oust the new prince at all hazards, but there is throughout a vein of firmness in the note that is calculated to force the hands of England, Austria and Germany and cause those powers to say definitely whether or not they intend to act strictly in accordance with the Treaty of Berlin and whether in the event of their taking no part, active or passive, in the Bulgarian muddle they will acquiesce in Russia's maintaining her rights under the same treaty. All the acts of the new prince of Bulgaria thus far have been performed with a view of reversing the rule of Prince Alexander and emphasizing the outrage of his expulsion, and the policy of Prince Ferdinand in thus acting was evidently conceived with the idea of securing for himself the adherence of the people of Bulgaria, who loved Alexander, and of obtaining the support of England. As yet it is not known that the Porte has made any reply to the protest of Russia presented by the Russian charge d'affairs, but it is likely that it will be acted upon in a manner measurably favorable to Russia, since the Sultan has ample excuse for withholding his full recognition of Prince Ferdinand in the fact that the Prince neglected to apply for and receive the Porte's consent to his assuming the throne before going to Bulgaria, a formality required by the terms of the Berlin treaty.

ANOTHER RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Three Persons Killed and Many Others Seriously Injured.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The St. Louis, Chicago & Cincinnati express train on the Baltimore & Ohio road, due here at 6.20 a m. to-day, ran upon what is known as the "Y," near the depot at the rate of 40 miles an hour. A general wreck ensued, and all the cars except the sleeper were badly smashed.

The only deaths reported at this hour (10 a.m.) are those of Hamilton Brozins, the engineer of the train, and two passengers. The fireman was badly scalded and fifteen passengers were seriously injured. The signal tower was completely demolished. The telegraph operator fortunately observed the derailment in time to escape by jumping from the window of the structure. His arm was broken, but he was not otherwise injured.

AGAIN REPORTED DEAD.

Stanley Said to Have been Massacred Deserted by His Escort.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A despatch from Zanzibar has been received at the Foreign Office, which says:—Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, has been massacred by the natives, after having been deserted by his escort.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Neither the Foreign Office nor the Emin Bey Relief Committee has received any word regarding the massacre of Henry M. Stanley. The officials at the Foreign Office are surprised at the intelligence in the despatch received by the French Government, and say that if news of Stanley's death had been received at Zanzibar the British agent had failed to send it.

A Shocking Casualty.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 17.—The Newport express train for New York yesterday struck a carriage containing four persons, a man, two ladies and a boy, at Five Mile River. All four were killed.

Fall of a Rock.

QUEBEC, Aug. 17.—A rock of about a ton weight fell from a cliff behind the Quebec warehouse buildings at Point Levis yesterday afternoon, demolishing the offices of the company. Damage about $800. No one injured.

A LARGE DEPOT.

The Canadian Pacific's New Building in Montreal.

People have been very skeptical regarding the location of the west end depot of the Canadian Pacific Railway, many believing that it would finally be established in Victoria Square. All doubts regarding this are now set at rest, as the contracts for the foundations for the edifice on Windsor street have been awarded to M. Davis & Sons, the well known contractors of Ottawa, who have already done a large amount of work for the company on the Ontario and Quebec and other portions of the great highway.

The foundations involve an expenditure of about $60,000, and are to be completed within six weeks. Before that time the contract for the whole building will have been let, and, it is anticipated, will be sufficiently advanced by next May to allow the company to vacate the present offices on Place d'Armes square, as stipulated with the insurance company, which has purchased the premises.

Mr. Shaughnessy, Assistant General Manager, says the company hope to have trains running out of the new depot before a twelvemonth. The right of way within the city has almost been completed, and the new line outside of the limits has been decided upon. The building, it is said, will cost over $800,000. This, added to the cost of acquiring the right of way, will run up the cost of the western entrance into the city at considerably over a million dollars, but as the depot is to be one of the finest on the continent, and as the short line to Toronto is already admitted to be one of the best in America, the C.P.R. authorities consider the money well invested.

The contractors for the depot have secured valuable quarries in the vicinity of Montreal, from which the blue stone will be taken for the building. A new plan of dressing the Montreal stone to be employed will be followed, which it is believed will have a very striking effect.—Montreal Star.

BEHRING SEA SEIZURES.

The Sayward Only Took Seals in the Pacific Ocean.

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—The Department of Fisheries to-day received the official report of the seizure in Behring Sea of the Canadian schooner W. P. Sayward. The account varies somewhat from the account given by the American authorities, the most important difference being that American account says that seals found in the vessel were caught in Behring Sea, while the mate of the Sayward, who makes the affidavit forwarded to the Canadian authorities, says that the seals were all caught in the Pacific Ocean, north of Vancouver Island, and not one was taken after the vessel entered Behring Sea. It appears from the affidavit of the mate that the schooner sailed from Victoria on May 18 on a sealing voyage carrying a crew of 7 men and 16 Indian hunters, that a good deal of fishing was done in the Pacific Ocean, off Cape Scott, at the north end of Vancouver Island, 479 fur seals being taken. On July 2 the vessel entered Behring Sea, but took no seals there as the weather is very foggy. On July 9 the vessel was captured by the United States revenue cutter Rush while about forty miles from the nearest land, and was taken to Ounalaska. From thence the vessel was sent to Sitka, where the officers were held for trial on Aug. 22. They were only allowed to remove their clothing from the vessel. The Indians were left to find their way back as best they could, they being about 700 miles from their villages. On the receipt of this information the Department of Fisheries took immediate steps to bring to the notice of the Imperial authorities the facts above stated.

How Germany Duped Russia.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The Herald's Paris cablegram says: Victor Tissott has published an extract from a letter which, he asserts, the late Czar wrote to his Morganatic wife, the Princess Dolgorouki, after the Berlin congress. In the portion of the letter made public the Czar says:—"The congress has been an immense misfortune to Russia. Germany sold us. The Russian statesmen who had full powers were not equal to their important mission. Bismarck has revenged himself for the support I gave France in 1875 during my stay in Berlin." The letter is regarded here as confirmatory of the revelations recently made by Gen. Lefo.

Mysterious Murder.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Alonzo Stone, a young tinsmith, lives at East Rochester with his wife and one child. About 6.30 o'clock last night Stone found Mrs. Stone dead in the cellar of his house. She was lying at full length with a cloth knotted tightly about her neck, while a cut was found on the temple, evidently inflicted by some sharp instrument. There were evidences of a struggle in the floors above. Stone has been arrested, but he asserted his innocence. Several neighbors say that they saw a strange man in the vicinity of Stone's house.

The Indian War Over.

RAWLINS, Wyoming, Aug. 17.—A despatch from Meeker, dated Monday morning, says: Mr. N. Major has just returned from the Ute camp. After holding a conference with Colorow and other Ute chiefs, Mr. Major requested them to leave the state. They promised to comply with his demand. They asked fifteen days in which to gather stock and allow their wounded to recover. The request was granted and no further trouble is anticipated.

Eviction in Belleville.

On Wednesday afternoon High Constable Johnston, acting under instructions from Col. Jas. Brown, evicted Miss McAdie from property that she had occupied for years. She is over sixty years old. Her household effects were strewn along the fence, where they had been dumped over. The neighbors say that her cries for mercy whilst the work was going on were pitiful. The W. C. A. have interested themselves in her case —Intelligencer.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE IRISH OUTRAGES.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—The attempt to blow up the West Clare railway bridge near Ennis yesterday has created a great sensation. The outrage is attributed, of course, to the American section of Irish dynamiters, and in support of this opinion attention is drawn to the fact that the cartridges that did not explode are of the American type. This is not the most conclusive evidence that could be brought, but it is quite sufficient to satisfy the police and the public that the plot was conceived and executed by Irish-Americans. It is more probable, however, that the outrage was the work of discharged employees or peasants actuated by some real or fancied grievance against the railway.

RUSSIAN IMPORT DUTIES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—It is reported that the Council at its meeting in September will further increase the import duties.

EMIGRATION OF DESTITUTE ALIENS.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—In the House of Commons last night Sir James Ferguson, parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, announced that at the next session he would ask for the appointment of a committee to enquire into the emigration of destitute aliens and consult on the measures adopted by other countries to remedy the evil.

AN ALCOHOL MONOPOLY.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—The Bundsrath has authorized the raising of a loan of 85,000,000 marks to enable the Government to work the alcohol monopoly.

THE BRITISH MINISTRY.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Standard openly advocates a coalition Ministry. It admits that Mr. Gladstone is still followed by the bulk of the Liberals in the country through the anomalous position occupied by the Unionists. The Cabinet will sit tomorrow to decide finally upon the course of business during the remainder of the session.

THE CHOLERA.

ROME, Aug. 17.—King Humbert has sent $6,000 to be used in relieving distress in the cholera infected districts. The King's liberality has greatly stimulated private donations. The latest reports show that the disease is fast decreasing everywhere in Palermo. Yesterday only three new cases were reported. At Naples and Resina there are only isolated cases.

THE LEAGUE MEETING.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—At the regular fortnightly meeting of the National League, yesterday, Mr. Harris M. P., announced that the receipts since the last meeting amounted to £2138, of which £2,000 came from the Parliamentary Aid Society of New York. The Nationalists, he said, were on the eve of success. The victory in Norwich virtually made Mr. Gladstone premier. Speaking of his Home Rule measure he (Harris) hoped it would be an advanced one, if the landlords got one-half of what Mr. Gladstone offered them before they ought to be happy.

THE POPE'S COMMISSIONER.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—Mgr. Persico, the Pope's special commissioner to Ireland, is gradually making his way through the country, visiting the archbishops and bishops en route. He is at present the guest of the Right Rev. Bartholomew Woodlock, Bishop of Ardagh, at Longford. Mgr. Persico, since the presentation of his report to the Vatican, has greatly risen in the esteem of the Irish people and their admiration of him is enthusiastically manifested whenever he appears in public.

THE REASON WHY.

BERLIN, Aug 17.—The North German Gazette's article saying Germany cannot approve Prince Ferdinand's course is supposed to have been inspired by Prince Bismarck as a result of his interview with Count Schouvaloff, the Russian ambassador.

THE GREAT POWERS POSITION.

SOFIA, Aug. 17.—It is stated that Austria, England and Italy have notified the Porte that their agents will remain in Bulgaria and continue relations with the Goverment. Russia insists that the appointment of Artin as Turkish Commissioner to Bulgaria be cancelled.

MR RAIKES AND "REFORMS."

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Mr. Henry Cecil Raikes, the Postmaster-General, appears to be uncompromisingly opposed to the adoption of reforms and improvements in the telegraphic service. Only a few days ago he flatly refused to consider a proposal to put in operation a system of half-rate telegrams to be transmitted during the night, as is done in America, on the ground that he did not think it advisable to try any new experiment, and last night, in reply to a proposal by Mr. Jacob Bright, member for Manchester, to discuss the subject of long distance telephony, he declared that he very much doubted the advantage of a system enabling conversation to be carried on between the great towns of England. The present system of communication, he said, had hitherto sufficed, and he could see no reason why it should not answer for the future.

ALPINE FATALITIES.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Four fatal accidents to Alpine tourists are reported from Zurich, making eighteen deaths in the Alps within a month

A CYCLONE IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A cyclone yesterday ravaged a great part of the south of France. It was severest in the department of Aude, where a number of houses were destroyed and several persons were killed.

EVICTIONS POSTPONED.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—The proposed evictions at Hestertown and Ardagh have been postponed, Mr. Plunkett, the magistrate, having stated that he was unable to furnish a force of police to assist the evictors.

Over Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 17.—On Monday afternoon while C. H. Frark was standing near the residence of Peter A. Porter, he noticed what appeared to him to be the head of a man rapidly going down stream. He called the attention of a man working near by, who got a pair of glasses and, with their aid, plainly saw a man swimming down stream, as if making an effort to gain the head of Goat Island. As they watched him he was carried by on the Canadian side of the Island, and a little later on a couple of strangers reported that as they were crossing the bridge connecting the first Sister Island with Goat Island, a man's body passed under it and was plainly visible.

THE REVIEW BINDERY

Books, Magazines, and all kinds of printed work bound promptly and neatly.

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, AUGUST, 18, 1887.

WHO IS TO VETO?

In a very mischievous article on "Disallowance" the Toronto Mail says: "Manitoba has the same right as the other Provinces or the Dominion itself to charter a road from any one point within her confines to any other." She has the same right as the other Provinces, that is no right at all, to charter a portion of an interprovincial or international road, as such right is reserved by our constitution for the Dominion. And even the right to charter a really local road is subject to disallowance by the Dominion.

In their frantic efforts to strike at the Dominion Administration the Mail, the Globe and other opposition journals, are agitating in the matter to foster a transient disagreement with reckless disregard for the ulterior consequences of their folly. There is a far graver and more permanent question involved than the present traffic of Manitoba. That question is whether a section of this country or the central authority is to have the control in matters of general policy—a question similar to that decided by our neighbors at the cost of a terrible civil war.

By our constitution, besides the special reservation to the Dominion of certain matters of national importance, the central power has been given a general right of disallowance, as in such a manner alone can any general policy for the whole Dominion be maintained. The political opponents of the present administration, including those most bitter opponents, former friends, whose over valuation of themselves has been disappointed, are endeavoring to upset this constitutional rule. They would have the power given to any Province to veto and nullify the general policy of the country. The people of this Dominion by their constitutional representatives, including those of Manitoba, have resolved to give a preference to home over foreign industries. The people of Manitoba are avowedly trying to nullify this policy as far as possible and to favour dealings with foreigners. The people of this Dominion have resolved at great cost to establish means of communication within their own territories from one extremity to the other. The people of Manitoba are striving to establish their communications with foreign ports by foreign roads, and to transfer to these foreigners the benefit of the costly expenditure by the people of Canada on their great through route. They accept the advantages of the general policy of the country, which in fact has created their Province, but they refuse to submit to any temporary inconvenience connected with it.

If this policy, so strongly supported for purposes of obstruction by factious politicians, were to be the rule, Canada would no more be an organized community than was the Saxon Heptarchy. It would be a mere chaos, if, after resolving upon a general policy each section were at liberty to declare that it would not abide by the decision as to some particular point and were to be encouraged by the party out of power at the moment to threaten rebellion if it could not have its own way regardless of the general interests.

If the Dominion of Canada is to flourish it must not adopt the idea exploded among our neighbors that every man has a right to whop his own nigger, nor that a Province should be allowed to give him that right in defiance of the will of the country as a whole.

THE imaginative reporter of the Detroit News has been paying a visit to Peterborough to hunt up Annexationists. Remembering that the News has been repeatedly proved to have slandered the victims whom it has thus interviewed and misreported, those who see the number in question of this serial fiction should in all fairness suspend judgment till the Peterborough men who have come under this infliction have an opportunity of correcting the assertions made regarding them.

A PIRATE in the Behring Sea has been seizing Canadian and United States vessels on the high seas. As this pirate flies the stars and stripes he should be dealt with promptly by the authorities at Washington, who will otherwise find themselves responsible for his crimes.

"For contemplation he, and valor formed,
For softness she and sweet attractive grace."

John Milton in his "Paradise Lost" thus distinguishes woman from man. Diseases fall to her lot that do not to man's, peculiar to her soft and more refined nature. A remedy adapted to the cure of her peculiar diseases is found in Dr R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," for women. Thousands who have used it attest its great worth.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

A Collection Illustrating His Progression Down to Historic Time.

A valuable collection, numbering more than 10,000 objects, illustrating the habits and accomplishments of prehistoric man in Western Europe, was opened to public exhibition at the Smithsonian Institution today. These were gathered during a five years' residence abroad by Mr. Thomas Wilson, ex-United States consul at Nice, and his wife. They have been so arranged as to illustrate the gradual progression of the race from the beginning of the palæolithic epoch of archæology (the quarternary of geology) down to and through the bronze age to its merging with the iron, just preceding the dawn of prehistoric time.

The series begins with the chipped stone elements of the creatures who, during perhaps sixty or seventy centuries, roamed over all that portion of the continent then above water and not covered with ice. The jaw-bones of the people lack the fixtures, so to speak, to which in modern humanity the tongue muscles are attached; and this leads to the presumption that they did not possess the power of speech. However that may be, the shape of their skulls indicate that they could have had nothing of interest or importance to say.

The dawn of the glacial period drove them to the caves, where, during a residence of some centuries, they invented clothes. This is proved by the existence in great numbers of stone scrapers used in preparing the hides of their quadrupedal contemporaries. From chipped stone they have advanced to ground or polished stone and thence to implements of bone. Now came the dawn of art, and their finest bone implements were engraved with pictures of the horse, reindeer and bear.

The Vanderbilts.

The Vanderbilt name is no longer heard in Wall street at all, or if at all, only incidentally. It no longer has any influence whatever on the general course of events in that quarter. This is a marvellous change from the time when that name had power to move Wall street from end to end. The present Vanderbilts have no taste to speak of for speculation. William K. showed a good deal at one time, but a squeezing he got cured him pretty thoroughly, and as he now has all the money he can spend, thanks to his father's will, he does not care to bother about making more, but takes all the pleasure he can find instead. Cornelius, the head of the family, is methodical and quiet. Wall street never sees him. He gives all his time to affairs of the Central railroad, without reference to the stock market, and the religious and philanthropist societies he is connected with.

Frederick is also inclined to business and quiet ways, and the fourth and youngest brother George is more interested in books than anything else. The disappearance of the Vanderbilt name from Wall street is only part, however, of the change that has taken place there. Nearly all the old names are gone too. With the exception of Gould there is not a single strong man in the street to-day. Russell Sage, Cyrus W. Field and Dea. White, who rank next after Gould, would have been mere subalterns ten or fifteen years ago. The days of big leaders seem to be past, and, if they are past, it may be as well. The big fellows had just as little mercy on the miscellaneous crowd as the little ones. The first Vanderbilt died worth a hundred millions, and his son doubled it.—New York Letter.

Too Great a Risk.

American Millionaire—Yes, I am very proud of my yacht and hope you enjoyed the sail.

American Naval Officer—It was delightful. You spend most of the summer yachting, I suppose?

"Yes, I almost live in my boat."

"In order to return the favour, I take pleasure, sir, in inviting you to take a trip with me on the man-of-war which I have the honour to command."

"Thanks, captain, many thanks, but I must decline, I can't swim."—Omaha World.

A FACT FOR THE FARMERS.

The Hamilton Times essays too much when it tries to prove that under unlimited reciprocity with the United States the Canadians would be enabled to get their sugar for about one half the price now paid. The Canadian rate for granulated sugar is 7 cents per pound, which is precisely the retail rate in Buffalo and most other American cities. As a matter of fact the necessaries of life bring no higher price here than in Canada, judging from the market reports and prices current.—Buffalo Courier.

OUR PROPOSED PARTNERS.

The way the law is enforced in the United States is emphasized by the rescue of a notorious demagogue, Senator Riddleberger, from prison, whither he had been sent for flagrant contempt of court. Let us hasten to be annexed to a country in which law is a misnomer and wedlock a matter of convenience.—Toronto World.

NEARER HOME

Blaine is in Ireland to witness evictions, it is now said. There is no necessity for Mr. Blaine to leave his own country for any such purpose. Last week, in New York city, one landlord evicted nine families in as brutal and heartless a manner as ever was witnessed in Ireland. The goods of widows and orphans were thrown out of doors, and the room in which was a sick woman was stripped of everything except the bed she was on, necessitating the calling of the ambulance to take her to the hospital. No, there is no necessity for Mr. Blaine going to Ireland to witness eviction.—Detroit News.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

FROM ALL OVER.

An experienced hatter says one tall man buys more hats than any three short men. Doors and projections and roofs are destructive to fine hats on six-foot men.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

"Don't you suppose," said a member of the police force, "that a policeman knows a rogue when he sees him?" "No doubt," was the reply; "but the trouble is that he does not seize a rogue when he knows him."

The harvest is well advanced throughout Manitoba and the North-West Territories, nearly half the wheat being already cut. A magnificent crop, averaging at least 25 bushels to the acre, is assured.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

A sensational story published in a North-West journal that Gabriel Dumont is seeking to raise another rebellion is positively denied by a Montana correspondent, who says Dumont is living in Montana very quietly.

The library of the Dominion Parliament, comprising 120,000 volumes, is the largest in Canada, Laval University at Quebec coming second, and a collection at Toronto third, with 100,000 and 46,000 volumes respectively.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The collections of pottery and bronze of much later period are curious and extensive. Of bronze there are barbed fish hooks, exactly like those of to-day; long pins with globular heads as large as walnuts, the counterparts of the implements used by modern ladies to keep the hat in place and, finally, there are safety pins, used by Etruscan maidens long before the advent of Romulus and Remus, which contained in the germ every principle of that most useful article known to the modern nursery.—Washington Special in N. Y. Sun.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER I.

I remember it all as clearly as if it had happened yesterday afternoon. It is one of those little scenes which, without being specially significant or suggestive, manage somehow or other to imprint themselves upon the memory, and which remain there while so many hundreds of others fade away and vanish, as the years go on. When I closed my eyes for a moment just now the whole thing came back to me—the dark, musty smelling study, with one broad sunbeam stretching right across it from the window; Bracknell, Jim and I standing close together beside the high, empty fireplace; old Lord Staines, looking uncommonly smart and spruce (as he always did in those days), a flower in his button hole and a smile of serene beatitude on his handsome face, and my tutor blinking through his spectacles and addressing himself, after his customary fashion, to no one in particular.

"I shall be sorry to lose these three fellows," says he. "They aren't bad fellows, you know, taking them all round, and I fancy they will succeed as well in the world as they have succeeded at Eton. Yes, just about as well. Bracknell—well, I don't see what more could have been asked of Bracknell than that he should get into the eleven and avoid getting into any serious scrapes. He is good looking, he is good natured, and from time to time I have even observed gleams of—er—intelligence in him. Bracknell will do; he will adorn his station. Well, then, Maynard. Maynard is clever, if not quite so clever as he thinks himself. I hardly expect him to set the Thames on fire, but I hope his mother will never have reason to be ashamed of him, and I have written to her, telling her that I consider him my show pupil. More than I ought to have said, perhaps, but there's no fear of her disbelieving me. As for Leigh" (here my tutor took a few steps forward and patted Jim on the shoulder), "what is to be said about you, Leigh? In classics you are but moderate; in mathematics I understand that you are also moderate; you're not in the eleven; you're not in the eight; I doubt very much whether you would be in the boats at all if you hadn't so many friends. In short, Leigh, you are mediocre. But you're the best fellow of the lot, all the same. And, that being so," added my tutor, looking up with a queer, kindly smile at the young giant who towered nearly a head and shoulders above him, "I should be inclined to prophesy, Leigh, that you will always have plenty of friends and that you will possibly be—er—more or less imposed upon all your life long."

Lord Staines broke out into laughter at this rather cynical prediction. "We'll look after him," said he; "we'll see that you aren't imposed upon, Leigh."

And I dare say he thought himself quite capable of so doing, although his own career might not have recommended him to an impartial person as being the fittest man in the world to undertake that task. He had always taken a good humored and somewhat patronizing interest in Jim, whose father and mother were both dead, whose small property adjoined his more extensive one in Berkshire, and who—above all—was his boy's friend. He thought very well of the lad, and indeed was kind enough to say as much there and then. As for Jim's being "the best of the lot," that of course was only a joke. It is not in the least likely that Lord Staines would have been angry with any one who should have seriously declared Jim to be Bracknell's superior. When one is fortune enough to be the owner of a Derby winner one is not quite so silly as to lose one's temper with a man for proclaiming his own steady useful roadster to be the more valuable animal of the two.

Poor old Lord Staines was a fond and foolish father, no doubt. I have heard him so described with such wearisome frequency that I should very much like to contradict the statement if I could. That being impossible, I will only venture to assert that there were excuses for him. Everything leads me to believe that if I had a son as handsome, as muscular, as recklessly brave and jolly, and devil may care, as Bracknell was in those days, I should be proud of him. These attributes may or may not constitute a legitimate cause for parental pride; but I suppose it will hardly be denied that they usually excite it. At the same time, it must be admitted that Lord Staines was a little bit outrageous in his crowing and chuckling, and one can't wonder that some of his friends laughed at him, while others found him rather a bore. Whenever there was a cricket match on he would collect as many cronies as he could induce to accompany him, and would drag them down to Eton to watch his boy bowling and slogging. He himself never wearied of this delightful spectacle, and could not understand that it might eventually pall upon others. He kept Bracknell supplied with plenty of pocket money, laughing good humoredly at the rapidity with which it was spent. I don't suppose that he even minded much when certain longish bills were sent in to him by the Windsor and Eton tradesmen, some of whom respectfully intimated that they had not been paid for three years. He, too, had always been open handed, careless and extravagant; probably he thought it only natural that his son and heir should resemble him, and if by any chance he ever considered the effect of two generations of extravagance upon a not very magnificent rent roll, he doubtless said to himself that some day Bracknell would marry a woman with money, and that then it would be all right. Such was the course which he had adopted, and it had answered admirably. That is to say that he had not, at the time of which I am speaking, yet reached the last shilling of his late wife's fortune.

He was, at any rate, evidently free from misgivings on that last day of Bracknell's Eton life; for he was literally brimming over with contentment and goodwill. He shook hands with us warmly when the time came for us to wish him goodby, repeating to us both again and again that although our friend's path in life would no longer be the same as our own (for Bracknell was to join the Fourth Life guards immediately, while Jim and I were to proceed in due course to Oxford), yet we were on no account to imagine that our friendship was at an end.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Of ten persons spoken ill of, the speaker knows nothing of nine.

The only people who keep diaries for any length of time are those who keep them for sale.

"Oh, take me; take me away," sings a newspaper poet. Yes, take him away. Stand not upon the order of your taking, but take him at once.

Every man thinks he is about right himself. An old Quaker said to his wife:—"All the world is queer except me and thee, and thee is a little queer."

Highland drover, trying unsuccessfully to divide a flock of sheep:—"Hock, hock, ta stupid brutes, tere's no wan o' them will gang two roads at wan time!"

The man at the head of the house can mar the pleasure of the household, but he cannot make it—that must rest with the woman, and that is her greatest privilege.

Teacher:—"Who was Alexander Selkirk?" Tommy:—"He was a civil engineer." Teacher:—"Civil engineer?" Tommy:—"Yes, ma'am; monarch of all he surveyed."

A lady being questioned in court the other day as to why she had changed her religion stated she had done so because, being separated from her husband, she determined to avoid meeting him in the next world.

They tell a queer story about a well known police court justice, whose daughter asked him the other day what he meant to give her for her birthday. He was just dozing, but he grunted out, "Ten dollars or ten days."

A negro preacher in South Georgia county asked his congregation the other day for a short vacation. An old sister objected, giving as a reason "dat de debil nebber takes no holleriday, but he gits in his wu'k ev'y minute."

Lady Teacher—"Can any of you boys inform me why icebergs become dissolved when they reach the southern seas?" Precocious youth holds up his hand. L. T.—"Well, my little man, what do you think?" P. Y.—"Because there's nae sawdust on them, mum."

"What has become of your niece, Miss Murphy, Mrs. O'Raherty?" "Och, sure an' she's done well wid herself. She married a lord." "Why, you don't tell me! An English lord?" "No; I don't think he's an English lord. He's a landlord—he kapes a hotel in Tipperary."

The following passage between Bench and Bar occurred in a certain Court the other day at end of a lengthened wrangle. His Lordship:—"Well, Mr. Blank, if you do not know how to conduct yourself as a genteman I am sure I can't teach you." Counsel:—"That is so, my Lord."

A NEW DEFINITION.—(Scene—Glasgow car). 1st Female Passenger:—"I wunner whit't the meanin' o' this terrible word Jubilee?" 2d do.:—"I'll tell ye. Whin a woman's merrit twenty-five years that's her silver waddin', whin she's merrit fifty years that's her golden waddin', an' whin her man dees that's her jubilee!"

A DYNAMITE OUTRAGE.

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—Two dynamite cartridges were exploded on the West Clare railway bridge at Ennis to-day. No serious damage was done. Two other cartridges were found on the bridge which failed to explode. The Town hall at Crusheen County Clare, was fired into to-day, but no damage was done.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Clerks.

The dry goods clerks are going to hold another meeting this evening, relative to the early closing movement.

Building.

The Dunsford block of buildings, Water street, is nearing completion. The block being erected by Mr. Snowden, Simcoe street, has reached the third story.

Furniture Sale.

The sale of Mr. Geo.E.William's furniture will take place on Friday at one o'clock. It will be a good opportunity of getting nice furniture.

Sports.

A meeting of the sports of Peterborough was to have been held at the Hub Restaurant last night, but owing to other attractions the attendance was not large enough. It was decided to adjourn till to-morrow evening.

Number Ten.

Capt. Grant, of the Ottawa Canton, is in town and has consented to formally institute Peterborough Canton, No. 10, this evening. The Canton will meet in the Peterborough Lodge room at 7 o'clock sharp, when Capt. Grant and Chevaliers Cameron and Menzies, also of the Ottawa Canton, will be present. Every member of No. 10 is requested to be present.

A Handsome Present.

Mr. W. A. Sanderson has given the Fire Brigade Band, of which he was an old-time member, a very handsome present. It is a drum major's uniform. The tunic is of rich scarlet elaborately trimmed with gold lace. There is also a patent leather cross belt a patent leather waist belt and a handsome busby. The trousers are black with a gold stripe. The uniform was imported from England. It is on exhibition in Mr. A. McNeil's Habiliment Hall.

A Lover of the Game.

Mr. Michael Sheehan, Ashburnham, though upwards of seventy-five years of age, stands by lacrosse with all his heart. In the last ten years he has never missed seeing a game that has been played in Peterborough. Commenting on the recent Toronto vs. Riverside match—and his opinion is surely valuable—he said:—"The Torontos is smart boys; no one can say agin it. But they'll have to bring smarter the next time." Messrs. Edwards and Sheehan always have the front seat in the grand stand.

Camp Store Closed.

Mr. A. Elliott, who has been in charge of the camp store at Stoney Lake for the past month, has returned to town, having closed the store for the season. Messrs. Elliott & Tierney are deserving of the thanks of the A. C. A. campers for having provided so well for them. The store contained a supply of almost everything requisite to make a camp comfortable. Mr. Elliott acted in the capacity of Post Master to the satisfaction of all. There are still quite a number camping at the lake, about two hundred altogether.

Literature Wanted.

The W. C. T. U. will be grateful for contributions of books and papers for distribution among the lumbermen. Last year a few personal appeals were made to which there was a generous response. It has been suggested that others, who are not aware of this line of work in connection with our Union, might be glad to contribute. London Illustrated News, The Graphic, Sunday at Home, Sunday Magazine, British Workman, or any other magazine will be thankfully received. The men have expressed their grateful appreciation. Shut out as they are from all home influence and social intercourse these contributions are a perfect boon.—M. F. SANDERSON, President W. C. T. U.

MR. PELL'S VISIT.

He is Satisfied With the Peterborough Fire Department.

Mr. Pell, Superintendent of Fire Departments for the Underwriters Association, arrived in town on Wednesday evening to inspect the fire appliances which have been recently added to the department.

After supper Mr. Pell, accompanied by Councillor McNeil, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and Mr. H. W. Kent, manager of the Peterborough office of the Bell Telephone Company, drove to No. 1 ward and rang the call box at the corner of Stewart and Dalhousie Streets.

The response was equal to expectation. In three minutes the brigade reached the hydrant at the corner of Stewart and Sherbrooke Streets, and two minutes later a stream of water was playing on a pile of bushes set afire two blocks distant. The engine was stationed at the corner of Stewart and Dalhousie Streets, but no hose was laid from it.

Mr. Pell expressed his satisfaction with this test, and then drove to examine other call boxes.

At 11 o'clock at night Mr. Pell gave the brigade another test. The call box at the corner of Downie and Simcoe streets was rung, and in five minutes the hose waggon had a line of hose out when stopped by Mr. Pell. The hook and ladder waggon arrived half a minute later, and the engine with twenty pounds of steam up brought up the rear seven minutes after the alarm was given. Of course it would not have been necessary to wait for the engine, as this district is supplied with hydrants.

Mr. Pell expressed his entire satisfaction with the result of the tests, and says that the town will be placed in Class B. without delay.

TWO TO ONE.

Eleven Cricketers Defeat a Team of Twenty-Two.

For the last two or three weeks two teams of cricketers, the Buffers and the Duffers, have been striving for the mastery over each other, but yesterday, emboldened by practice, they united and tackled the first eleven. Although defeated they were by no means disgraced, their score of 83 against the bowling of such performers as Stratton, Max. Hamilton and Hugh Ray being very creditable. The eleven batted first and scored 120. Early in the innings a long stand was made by Stirling and E. Stratton, who each got 17 in good style, while, later on, the two cracks, Stratton and Sam Ray, gave the field a trial at leather hunting in their scores of 38 and 21. For the twenty-two(?)the veteran Strickland played a very fine game for his 21, which included no less than six threes; while Dee showed most promising cricket for his 15. M. Hamilton's bowling was very destructive, no fewer than 13 wickets being his share of the spoil. Score:—

Taller Still.

The reputation gained by Edinburgh street as a spot where tall corn grows, is being loyally upheld by Mr. Wm. Coulter. He is not going to allow an Ashburnham clergyman to outstrip Edinburgh street. He now announces that he has a corn stalk in his garden 11 feet 1 inch high (eleven feet one inch). He has the stalk now under cultivation and it shows an inclination to get up as high as the house.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased ove his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

PORT HOPE.

THIGH BROKEN.—A little boy about six years of age, son of Mr. James Perrin, Baldwin street, while playing in the loft fell to the ground and broke his thigh yesterday. The little fellow received prompt attention from a surgeon and is now getting on comfortably.

SHOULDER DISLOCATED.—On Monday evening John Woodley, while breaking a colt belonging to Mr. James Eakins, had the animal strike him with one of its fore feet, dislocating the shoulder. The halter used on the colt was too short to allow him to properly control it, and thus the accident.—Guide.

DROWNED.—A sad drowning accident occurred on Tuesday morning about ten o'clock, in which Willie, the six year old son of Mr. John McCaffery, lost his life. While he and a number of other small boys were in bathing, in the lake down by Helm's crib, he accidentally fell into the water, which was too deep for him, and the other boys were not able to pull him out. Some of them ran away to get help, but when they returned the poor little fellow was drowned. The family have the sympathy of our citizens in their bereavement.—Times.

GAS.

Excitement About the Find in Otonabee Township.

There was quite a crowd from town visiting the Otonabee gas well on Wednesday evening. When they arrived they found the flame to be just as represented. It was blazing away from an orifice about four inches in diameter, created by the well drill.

While the visitors faces were lit up by the bright flame, which sprang about four feet from the ground, the noise of the gas churning through a head of seventy feet of water could be heard quite distinctly. They came back to town well satisfied with the sight, so rare in this part of the country.

Mr. Pallin, the blacksmith near whose place the well is, was in town to-day getting piping, which he says he is going to use to conduct the gas into his blacksmith shop and his residence. He says he is going to dispense with coal in his forge making use of the gas instead. He also says he is going to run his cooking stove by gas and also have his house lighted by gas—real city fashion, you know. Everyone will say that this is an enterprising blacksmith indeed.

There are a variety of opinions as to the source and quantity of the supply. As usual in such cases, there is no end to speculation. One man was rash enough to say that he believed there was gas in Peterborough, and if a well was dug deep enough the Gas Company would be minus a job. This man is right, with the exception that no digging is required, as a regular attendant at Board of Education meetings, and Town Council meetings can verify.

Be this as it may, the Snowden bus line is going to run rigs down to the well this evening, starting from the hotel so as to let those who are curious enough have an opportunity to see the natural wonder.

Personal.

Mr. Richard Reeves, formerly of Peterborough, now of Ann Arbor, Mich., is in town on a visit. Since leaving here Mr. Reeves has gone into partnership in purchasing a foundry in Ann Arbor, the firm being Barclay & Reeves. The establishment consists of moulding, pattern, blacksmith shops, and a boiler shop, all of which is now being built.

Mr. H. B. Weller, Millbrook, is in Toronto being treated for a severe illness.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from F. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction

Charlie's Hens.

No one has called for the brace of hens captured by P. C. McGinty on Wednesday morning. The brace still hang together on a nail at the police station. They will not hang together much longer this warm weather.

Photographs.

Several photographic views taken by Mr. R. M. Roy, are on exhibition in the window of R. W. Muncaster's jewelry store. Among them is one descriptive of the bicycle race held in the Driving Park on Wednesday, August 10th. The others are photographs of the Duffers and Buffers cricket teams.

A New Serial.

In this issue we commence the publication of a new serial. It is a well written and interesting story, by an able and popular author.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

The Liar Again Contradicted.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 17.—The despatches sent from here recently, regarding the failure of the fisheries and bankruptcy, are false. The Colonist to-day contains a denial over the signature of Sir Robert Thorburn, Premier of the Local Government, in which he says that neither bankruptcy nor destitution exist, and that the Labrador fisheries are much better than last year.

Railways Wanted.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 17.—A deputation arrived here, last evening, from Portage la Prairie to interview the Government and urge the construction of a line of railway from here to Portage la Prairie this fall to unite the Red River and the Manitoba & North-Western. Deputations will arrive, to-day, from Minnedosa, Rapid City, Neepawa and Gladstone to urge the same thing on the Government.

Yachting.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 17.—In the yacht race yesterday the following was the time of the finish:—Volunteer, 9, 39, 30; Puritan, 10, 13, 07; Mayflower, 10, 29, 38; Sachem, 10, 30.

Warlike Shipments.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Very large quantities of ammunition and firearms are being shipped to Honolulu.

ANOTHER RUSSIAN PLOT.

Secret Society Formed to Murder Prince Ferdinand.

RUSTCHUK, Aug. 18.—It is rumored that a Russian secret society has formed a plot to murder Prince Ferdinand.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—A despatch from Varna says the Primate of the Bulgarian Church at Constantinople has published at encyclycial letter declaring Prince Perdinand an usurper.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The Standard warmly supports Prince Ferdinand, and reminds him that the smallest sympton of hesitation or fear will be fatal. If he continues in his present course, says the Standard, he may ignore Russia, and count on the warmest sympathy of the people of England, Austria, Italy and Germany, though the Governments of those countries may be compelled to act circumspectly. The German agent at Sofia has been instructed to continue administrative relations with the Bulgarian Gavernment, but to avoid anything of a nature that might lead Prince Ferdinand to suppose that Germany was holding official relations with him. The French consuls in Bulgaria have been instructed to discontinue even business relations with the Government.

The Cologne Gazette complains of the tone of the North German Gazette, and says that Germany has no call to do Russia's business for her in the East.

ROME, Aug. 18.—The Riforma says the recognition of Prince Ferdinand by some of the Powers is sufficient to make his election valid in accordance with the Berlin treaty.

VIENNA, Aug. 18.—Prince Ferdinand has issued a general order assuming the chief command of the Bulgarian army.

BREAKING DOWN.

What the Government Organ Says of the Unionist Party.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A remarkable article in the Government organ, the Morning Post, to-day says: "It is clear that the present machinery of the Unionist party is breaking down, and repairs are urgently required to obviate an otherwise inevitable catastrophe. However great the individual merits of Lord Salisbury's colleagues in the Lower House, it is recognized in all quarters that the combination they now present is not strong enough to resist the tide of democratic invasion. The Conservative front bench is clearly not in touch with the popular feeling, either within or without the walls of Parliament. This element absent, it is impossible for the Conservative Government to exist. Even if the combination should not be successful as a Government, it will form a basis of united powerful opposition." This, of course, is inspired by Lord Randolph Churchill, who is always on good terms with the Post. The article contains an attack on Mr. Goschen, and a good deal of plain speaking to Lord Salisbury, and a characteristic hint that the Government had better reorganize itself "before the season of provincial eloquence sets in;" all of which are clearly Randolphian ideas.

THE CHATSWORTH HORROR.

Verdict of the Jury—Criminal Negligence of a Section Boss.

CHATSWORTH, Aug. 18.—The coroner's jury in the railroad disaster, after a deliberation of three hours, returned a verdict to the effect that Section Boss Coughlin was guilty of gross criminal negligence in leaving fires burning across the track. It was recommended that he be held to appear before the grand jury. The company are censured for not having the track patrolled all the evening. Coughlin will be arrested.

Eton Waters, of the Peoria Watch Company, who was injured in the recent accident, died this morning. He had a hole in his thigh as big as a man's wrist, together with internal injuries, but he bore up so bravely that the physicians dubbed him "the hero." He did well until last evening, when blood poisoning and a failure of the heart intervened and he sank slowly.

This makes the total number of verified deaths 79. The jury made out seperate verdicts for each of the victims.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

Utes Attack an Escort—Grave Fears For Unprotected Settlements.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 18.—Sheriff Randall came into Meeker on Tuesday night, bringing with him four of Colorow's men for the purpose of holding a pow-wow. The Indians ask that fifteen days be given them in which to reach the reservation in Utah, and this being granted, the Indians asked for an escort through the settlement on their return to Colorow. Two men were sent with them, one being a Mormon interpreter. When outside the town the Indians turned upon the escort with knives and severely wounded them. The whites were also fired upon by a party of Utes in ambush, but neither was hurt. Sheriff Kendall has telegraphed to Governor Adams that no time shall be lost in pushing troops to the front as rapidly as possible as he anticipated an attack upon Meeker and all unprotected settlements and ranches as soon as Colorow's three bands are united.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 18.—A special from Glenwood Springs says:—The White River Ute Indians have sent runners to the Uncompahgre camp, the Blackfoots, Sioux, Crow, and other tribes in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho, for aid Colorow knows that he must fight, and this will be a decisive battle, and that it will end the question for ever.

HOW LONG?

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—How long are manufacturers on the Otonabee to suffer from the mismanagement of the water? It has been gradually falling for the last ten days, and, I understand, is being held back at Buckhorn. I would like to know what is the good of holding it back there until the winter? We can all remember the annoyance we were subject to early last spring by the water that had been held at Buckhorn all fall and winter being run off to make room for the spring freshet, when it was of no use to us. I understand that the flooring is being put in the dam at Burleigh. But why should manufacturers suffer for the sake of contractors, especially as the water could be turned through Perry's creek, thereby giving the manufacturers the water they require, as well as lowering it for the contractors?

Yours truly,
WATER WHEEL.

Used a Butcher Knife.

HAMILTON, Aug. 18.—John Gain, a well-to-do farmer residing near Winona station, some time ago had been drinking more heavily than usual, and a few weeks ago he quit it. The sudden reaction seemed to have brought on depression of spirits, and on Wednesday afternoon he drew a butcher knife across his throat. The knife was not very sharp, and consequently the wound was not as deep as was intended. A physician was summoned, who at once sewed up the gash. Gain had bled considerably—so much so that his life is yet despaired of. He is about 45 years of age, and was always well respected by his neighbors.

Crop Report.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 18.—The light showers of late have improved the hop crop, which promises to be far in advance of last year. Very much of the late-sown oats will not be gathered in Prince Edward ounty. A great many farmers are turning in their cattle to eat up the stranded crop. Unless rain comes soon the potato crop will also be a failure, while the corn crop is past recovery.

Another Railway Accident.

DODGE CITY, Kan., Aug. 18.—The cannon ball passenger train on the North Pacific road yesterday ran into a freight standing on the main line in the yards in this city, derailing and tearing into splinters the caboose and three cars. Freight conductor J. N. Elliott was fatally injured. None of the passengers were hurt.

Verdict of Wilful Murder.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 18.—The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of wilful murder against Thomas Newton, who shot John Ingo on Tuesday. Threats were made on street last night that Newton would be taken from the station and lynched, and shortly after midnight he was transferred to the provincial gaol.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

EXTORTION IN MOROCCO.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Mr. Ton Perdicaris, the American resident of Tangier, who was imprisoned by the United States Consul Matthews in September, 1886, upon a charge of obstructing and resisting American and Moorish officials in their attempt to arrest a Moor for extortion, is in London. Since his release Mr. Perdicaris has rendered valuable assistance in suppressing the practice, at one time widely prevalent in Morocco, of extorting money from natives through the aid of foreign consuls, and the purpose of his visit is to chaperone Mr. Lewis, the American consul, who succeeded Mr. Matthews, at Tangier, and to whom Mr. Perdicaris owes his subsequent immunity from molestation at the hands of the Moorish officials. It was through charges brought by Mr. Perdicaris culminating in his arrest, that Mr. Matthews was superseded. It is said that Mr. Lewis, while here, will confer with Minister Phelps, and ask his advice in regard to certain matters growing out of the Perdicaris case in Morocco, as yet unsettled.

AFGHAN FRONTIER NEGOTIATIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A blue book on the Afghan frontier negotiations has just been issued. It shows that the final settlement is based upon equal and mutual concessions. Afghanistan concedes rather a larger area of territory, but the land is valueless, while the Russian concession will be the source of a small income to Afghanistan.

DISASTROUS THUNDERSTORMS.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Thunderstorms were general yesterday throughout the country. In the London district the storm was of great severity, the thunder peals and the lightning flashing incessantly for two hours. The Metropolitan railway is flooded at Dalwich. Houses were severely shaken and the inmates greatly frightened. Reports are coming in of damage in various parts of the country.

NEW BALOON INVENTION.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Captain Renard, chief of the military balloon service at Chalons-camp, has invented apparatus for steering and propelling balloons, enabling them to resist wind velocity of 10 metres per second. In order to keep the mechanism secret, different parts of the apparatus are made in different places and are put together by M. Renard himself.

THE STORM IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The damage caused by yesterday's storm in England is very serious. In London three persons were killed and a number of churches and houses were struck by lightning. In the country also there was much destruction of property, and many persons are reported killed.

RUN OVER.—On Friday a young son of Mr. Richard Hare, who resides near Grafton, was run over with a waggon loaded with grain. The little lad was severely injured. The right jaw was fractured and the right side of the face badly crushed. Under the skilful treatment of Dr. John R. Clark, Master Hare is convalescing.

FIRE.—About 8 o'clock Saturday night fire was discovered in Mrs. Sam Jones' house on Cottesmore Avenue near the Grand Trunk railway crossing. The building was burned to the ground. It is believed the fire organized in a spark from a passing train. Recently Mrs. Jones went to visit her daughter in the States, and there was no one living in the house at the time the fire broke out. The household furniture was destroyed.—World.

NORWOOD.

OBITUARY.—On Sunday, after a long period of illness, the wife of Mr. John W. Scott, of Asphodel, passed over to the great majority, at the advanced age of 82 years. The deceased was well known and highly respected throughout the township. Her remains were followed to the grave in the Norwood cemetery, on Tuesday, by a long line of mourning friends.

A LARGE FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late Thomas J. Starr took place on Wednesday of last week and was the largest ever seen in this section, there being over 250 persons in the procession. The long line of mourning friends bore testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held by the community in general and the sincere and deep sympathy of those who knew him is tendered the the bereaved relatives. Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

The Daily Review

FRIDAY, AUGUST, 19, 1887.

DESCRIBED BY A FRIEND.

THE Detroit News, which is advocating by the most unscrupulous methods the annexation of Canada, has a sketch of the life of Mr. Erastus Wiman. Among other more reputable qualifications, the News describes Mr. Wiman as having "outwitted the Vanderbilts by buying up all the Staten Island ferry landings," as being "a right bower for Jay Gould," as being "a director of the Western Union Telegraph Company and founder of the Great North-Western Telegraph Company of Canada," and that "his speculations are too numerous to mention." We should be sorry if being a competitor of the Vanderbilts and a right hand man of Jay Gould were a recommendation in Canada. Still less commendable should be his position at the head of those great telegraph monopolies, which were founded in iniquity and are run with the end always in view of crushing competition and mulcting the public to the utmost. As to his too numerous speculations, they are a part of a system looked upon by honest Canadians as gigantic gambling with the cards packed, the dice loaded, to fleece minor gamblers and innocent investors. Mr. Wiman may be a very good man in other respects, but the Detroit News brings into strong relief his identification with the system of monopolies, rings, stock gambling, and fleecing both of honest investors and of the public, which is the greatest curse of the United States. Some of our neighbours may consider all this "smartness," but it is not yet in accordance with Canadian views of morality and honesty.

Mr. Wiman's annexationist campaign with all his usual methods of dead-head telegraphic reports, cut and dried resolutions circulated in type, and newspaper puffs and falsifications, is but another great scheme for the advancement of his stock-jobbing and ring-monopoly manipulations. This Napoleon of Finance is apparently greater even than Ward or Ives, for he finds the United States too small a field for his peculiar tactics, and he aspires to add the Dominion of Canada to the area directly open to his plans for monopolizing millions at the expense of the community.

Those who are impressed by his sophistry and his methods of "rigging the market," should pause and consider the fate of others whom he has deluded to their ruin.

GONE AGROUND.

THERE are some Canadians who unfortunately cannot refrain from belittling Canada, even if they have to indulge in deliberate misrepresentation to effect their unpatriotic object. A vessel owned in the United States went aground in Canadian waters and a demand to pay duty having been repudiated by the purchaser, a seizure by the customs officials followed. At once the outcry is raise and repeated by a number of unpatriotic Canadians, that our country is barbarous to make a foreign vessel pay duty or to seize it because it has happened to go aground within our territorial limits. Thus to slander their own country they carefully conceal the main point that this foreign vessel was sold in Canada. Subordinate officials therefore had no choice but to act upon the law, for otherwise there would be nothing to prevent foreign vessels from escaping payment of duty by being quietly beached in Canada and then sold. It is not for subordinates but for the Department after full consideration to draw the line and to consider special circumstances such as a repurchase by the former owners and a return of the vessel to its own country, which may warrant exemption from the general law. To ask all the civilized world to condemn the people of Canada as being on a par with the old wreckers, and to make such an appeal with a careful concealment of the most important fact, is simply disgraceful.

MR. MOWAT AN IMITATOR.

THE Ottawa Free Press in discussing the probabilities of the November elections in New York State says that:—

"At every election that has taken place in New York since 1881, the Democrats have polled a majority of the popular vote; although for reasons before explained, the Republicans have retained control of the legislature."

The reasons before explained are as follows:—

"The governor, lieutenant-governor and all the state officers who were elected by the popular vote are Democrats, while the Republicans have a majority both in the Senate and Assembly. The Democrats have a majority of the popular vote, but the state has been repeatedly gerrymandered by Republican legislatures, until the strength of the Democracy is massed in New York city and three or four counties."

We had thought that there was some originality in Mr. Mowat's methods, but it appears that he merely imitated the Republicans of New York State and by similar repeated gerrymanderings has obtained a similar result, that with a majority of the popular vote against him he has dishonestly retained control of the legislature.

"Some said, 'John, print it,' others said 'Not so.'
Some said 'It might do good,' others said 'No.'"

If the discoverer of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy had shared the senseless prejudices of a certain class of physicians he would have refused to print the good news, to proclaim to the world the glorious things that an infallible remedy for that most loathsome disease, catarrh, has been discovered. But he advertised liberally and the result has justified him in the course he pursued. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy never fails. All druggists.

JESUS AND THE LAW.

Lesson VIII of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Aug. 21. Text of the Lesson, Matt. v, 17-26. Golden Text, Matt. v, 17.

V. 17. Think Not.—Many in the great crowd present evidently expected that Christ would abrogate portions of the law and introduce revolutionary changes. The knowledge of the disciples was imperfect, and they may have thought that he was speaking in opposition to the teachings of Moses. Now is the time for him to correct these false notions and to declare fully the principles of the new kingdom, I am come—or came. This form of expression is common to our Lord; it implies his pre-existence and suggests his coming for a definite purpose. To destroy.—When applied to material things, this word means to loose, to pull down, to dissolve. It is so applied to the temple (Matt. xxvi, 61), and in II Cor. v, 1, to the dissolution of the body under the figure of a building. Here it means to set aside, as if the law were superseded, as null and void. This was not Christ's purpose. The law and the prophets.—This form of expression takes in all the Scriptures of the Old Testament. The five books of Moses are spoken of as the law; the other Scriptures as the prophets. Sometimes the Psalms were added. All his hearers understood the reference of these terms. Fulfill.—To make full, to complete. Christ came, not to contradict, but to complete the law. Law and gospel, rightly understood, are one. Jesus carried the teachings of Moses to their rightful conclusion; he lifted them to a higher plane—to the inward thought as well as the outward act. He makes hatred murder, and a certain look a crime. He fulfilled the law by keeping it fully, by suffering as our substitute its penalty, and by accomplishing in his own life all its requirements.

V. 18. For verily.—Verily in Greek is amen. This is a Hebrew adjective meaning firm, reliable, faithful, true. Till heaven and earth.—This is a proverbial expression, and is probably equivalent to never. Jot.—The translation of the Greek letter iota. It represents the Hebrew letter yodh, and corresponds to the English i. Tittle.—Strictly speaking, this word means "little horn:" the small point at the edge of some Hebrew letters to distinguish them from others. With us the word tittle means anything very small. So it is here used. As has been often said, the expression is equivalent to the not dotting of an i or the crossing of a t. Fulfilled.—That is, come to pass.

V. 19. This is a solemn and also an encouraging verse for Sunday school teachers. Because God designs the law to stand intact, therefore to break, and especially to teach others to break, one of its least commandments, its jot or tittle just named, is a great sin. Shall be called.—Shall be and also shall be called, i. e., be recognized, be considered as such. There are differences of attainment in the Christian life here and hereafter. Those who follow Christ's precepts partially may be saved; if they build on him as the foundation they will be saved; but it may be as by fire, while the hay and the stubble will be burned. Those who follow his precepts fully shall have an abundant entrance into the kingdom.

V. 20. The connection here is plain. That the men who break the least commandments shall have a lower place is certain; for, unless a man have righteousness in advance of that of the scribes and Pharisees, he shall not enter heaven at all. Righteousness.—This means personal rectitude, right doing. Shall in no case.—By no means, not at all. It is an intensive formula and represents the double negative in Greek, which, according to the idiom, emphasizes the negation.

V. 21. The great Teacher now goes into the exposition of the spirit of the law in opposition to the interpretation given by the Pharisees, with which the people were familiar. There are in all six examples cited. Ye have heard.—Strictly, simply heard. Such statements they had often heard in the public expositions of the law. By them of old time.—This expression is the rendering of two Greek words; more literally, to them of old, or to the ancients. These expounders emphasize the letter of the law; Christ exalts its spirit. Judgment.—This is the lower court which was in every city (Deut. xvi, 18), and had the power of putting to death with the sword; according to Josephus it consisted of seven persons.

V. 22. Here Christ speaks with great authority. I say unto you.—He is an authority unto himself. The author of the law is the best expounder of the law. He sweeps past the outward act to the inward motive. Hatred is murder (I John iii, 15). Now comes the explanation of the three degrees of anger, with their corresponding punishments. With his brother.—The words "without a cause" are omitted in many manuscripts and in the Revised Version. Raca.—This is an Aramaic word. It expresses supreme contempt, is equivalent to a worthless fellow, a good for nothing, an empty head, a blockhead. Council.—This is the Sanhedrin, the highest, the supreme court of the Jews. Fool.—This verse and these epithets have troubled many. The punishment seems greater than the sin would warrant; but we must remember that the sin lies in the spirit which prompts the words. Hell fire.—This word is, literally, the Gehenna of fire. The word Gehenna is made up of two Hebrew words, meaning the "Valley of Hinnom." This was situated south of Jerusalem; in one part of it children were at one time sacrificed to Moloch, into whose fiery arms they were cast. They were then dropped by a mechanical contrivance into the fierce fires in the interior of the horrible image. The place was also called Tophet, a name derived, some say, from Toph, a drum, because drums were vigorously beaten to drown the cries of the suffering children. There is another derivation, however, for the word. Josiah, the last good king of Judah, as we see from II Kings, xxiii, 10, defiled this place by making it the repository of the offal of the city. In later times it became the place where the bodies of notorious criminals were burned. Then it came to represent the place of punishment of the wicked (Isaiah xxx, 33). In the New Testament it is found frequently and used in this sense. Christ emphasizes it as a place of torment. It has been suggested by several commentators that there is a climax in the grades of anger and so in the degrees of punishment: 1, angry thoughts; 2, angry words; 3, condemnatory epithets. So in the punishment this climax is found: 1, by the sword; 2, by stoning; and 3, casting the body into this horrible place; but others consider it doubtful whether we can establish this climax. Christ was truth itself. It will not do to say that these are mere figures. The figure must not misrepresent the truth. If such is the figure, what must the terrible reality be?

V. 23. Reconciliation ought to be sought.—Such anger as has been described in the preceding verse must not be cherished. If thy, etc.—Offerings were generally presented at the temple. The altar was in the court of the priests in front of the holy place. He who acceptably petitions God must be at peace with his brother. If he is engaged in the holiest act of worship and remembers that his brother has aught against him, the act is to be suspended until reconciliation is secured. We cannot impose upon God.

V. 24. Leave, etc.—Great haste is here suggested. The step is to be taken immediately.

V. 25. Agree.—Come to a reconciliation with your opponent who is going to law with you. Adversary here means the party opposed to one in a lawsuit.

V. 26. Farthing.—The Greek here signifies a small Roman coin about two-fifths of a cent. When once the judgment is passed the guilty one shall have no opportunity of reconciliation, but must bear the full measure of his punishment.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. No man has a right to trifle with even the least of God's commands, or even with a jot or tittle of his word. It is ours to obey.

2. Sin is in the thought before it becomes an act. We must guard well our thoughts. As we think in our heart so are we.

3. Love is the fulfilling of the law. Its absence robs our best deeds of all their worth.

4. We best show our love to God by loving our fellow men.—Sunday School World.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"We shall all meet at Staines' court before long. Well, perhaps not next autumn, because I shall be in Scotland until rather late in the year; but some time, you know—some time. And Bracknell will run down to Oxford and look you up. Or why not join us in the north, both of you? Are you fond of stalking? Never tried it? Well, well, everything must have a beginning. Bracknell is as fine a shot for his years as I ever saw. Now, mind, we shall count upon seeing you. Goodby, my dear fellows, goodby."

Then he hurried off to Goodwood, taking Bracknel with him, and, I should think, forgot our existence with very great celerity.

I remember that, after we had seen the last of them, Jim said with a sigh, "What a splendid fellow he is!" and was quite angry with me for pretending to think that he alluded to old Staines. I never shared Jim's enthusiastic admiration for Bracknell; but then I am not of an enthusiastic temperament, and have a quick eye (so, at least, I am assured) for any blemishes that may disfigure the characters of my friends. At all events, I thought I had discovered some blemishes in Bracknell's character, and that selfishness was one of them and fickleness another. My impression certainly was that he would trouble himself very little more about us from the moment that circumstances ceased to throw us together; and I have much pleasure in admitting that therein I did him an injustice. We did not, of coure, take advantage of that somewhat vague invitation to become Lord Staines' guests in the Highlands; but a few months later Bracknell redeemed his father's promise that he should look us up at Oxford, and, falling in with many other old Etonians there, had such a gay and uproarious time of it that he was easily persuaded to repeat his visit at an early date. Indeed, during the following two years, he used to make periodical descents upon Christchurch, where a band of choice spirits was ever ready to welcome him, and where his arrival was invariably the signal for a bear fight upon an unusually extensive scale. On the ensuing day Bracknell would return to London, leaving poor Jim to face the college authorities, who, however, generally let him off easily. I fancy they knew pretty well that he was sure, under all circumstances, to be made the scapegoat; moreover, it really was not in human nature—no, not even in donnish nature—to be hard upon Jim Leigh.

On attaining the age of 21 he was duly placed in possession of his estate, together with personal property which, I believe, made his income up to something over £5,000 a year; so that he was, in all senses of the word, independent. At his request, however, his uncle and aunt, who had resided at Elmhurst throughout his long minority, consented to remain there until he should marry, an event which I had reason to think might not be very remote. But this was a profound secret. Jim had let me into it because from our earliest boyhood he had had no secrets from me, but to not another soul had he spoken of his hopes—least of all to the lady who was the object of them.

I should be very glad to be able to write of Hilda Turner with perfect impartiality, for were that in my power I should probably convey a far better idea of her to the reader, who, if he had met her in the flesh, would doubtless have been fascinated with her, as most people were, and might even have fallen in love with her, as a great many did. But the simple truth is that I never could endure the girl, and so my evidence must be taken for whatever that of a prejudiced witness may be worth. I have, at any rate, no hesitation in allowing that she was extremely pretty, although her beauty was not of a regular order, and that her manners were charming, although they did not happen to charm me. She was one of those very fair people whose complexions are of the clearest white, the bloom upon whose cheeks is one of the most delicate and exquisite pink, and who seldom become wrinkled before they reach extreme old age. But I don't insist upon that point. Hilda had golden hair and blue eyes, and if everybody had teeth like hers the dentists would be driven to find another occupation. To be sure, when you began to criticise there were plenty of faults to be found with her face. Her nose, for instance, was too short, her jaw was too square, and her lips were a trifle too thin. I remember once pointing out these defects to my mother, who shook her head, and said that if I expected perfection I should have some difficulty in finding a wife. Certain it is that I am unmarried still (though not, I think, on account of the cause assigned), but I am very sure that my mother would have chosen that I should remain a bachelor to my dying day rather than that I should fall in love with Hilda Turner.

I suppose that never since the world began did there live quite so poor a judge of character as my dear mother. Partly from having seen very little of the bad side of human nature—for she had been a confirmed invalid, unable to put a foot to the ground, almost from the time of my birth—partly from her unquestioning faith in the wisdom and mercy of an overruling Providence, which causes her to take an optimistic view of everything, her own constant sufferings included, partly, too, from the natural sweetness of her disposition, which renders her, I do believe, incapable of conceiving that any one can be intentionally wicked, she habitually regards others as she wishes them to be, and by no means as they actually are. Yet I recollect that upon one occasion she gave me to understand, with a good deal of circumlocution and hesitation, that she feared Hilda Turner was not an entirely straightforward girl. What her grounds were for formulating this tremendously severe charge I could not induce her to divulge; but I suspect that she had caught the young lady in an unequivocal fib. I could have told her that that was no uncommon occurrence, but I never did tell her such things when I could help it, because the only effect of my doing so was to give her unnecessary pain.

If she had some misgiving about Hilda, she had none at all about Hilda's father, the rector of the parish, of whom she always spoke as "good Mr. Turner." Good Mr. Turner was—not to mince matters—an ass. There was no harm in him. He pottered about the parish, did a little work, preached us a sermon once a week, which had at least the merit of brevity, and was benevolent in a passive sort of way. Hilda ruled him—I won't say with a rod of iron, for no such formidable weapon could possibly have been required for so gentle a creature; but at any rate she ruled him absolutely.

Our neighborhood not being a very thickly inhabited one, the few families who lived within a mile or two of each other were naturally intimate. Hilda and Jim and I had grown up from childhood together as companions, and when the Henleys were at Staines Court we also saw a good deal of Bracknell and his sister. However, after Lady Staines' death the great house was generally empty. Lord Staines was always in London or in Scotland, or at Newmarket, or at some other of the resorts where he spent his money so freely, and it was only at rare intervals that quiet little lady Mildred would come down for a week or so, attended by her governess and accompanied by one of the aunts who looked after her. She was a demure little mouse of a thing, with bright brown eyes, which saw a good deal more than was commonly supposed, and as kind a heart as ever beat; but as she was rather shy, and had a way of keeping her opinions to herself, nobody noticed her much. She and Hilda were by way of being friends, although it is scarcely possible that there can have been any real sympathy between them, and when Hilda was in her nineteenth year, Mildred's aunt, Lady Petworth, very good naturedly invited the rector's daughter to spend a season with her in London, and presented her at court.

"I rejoice," Mr. Turner used to say, in his placid, deliberate way, "that dear Hilda has kept up her friendship with Lady Mildred. I have encouraged it (I dare say he really thought his encouragement might be a factor in the question) both because refined companionship can not but be beneficial to the young, and because I feel that it is desirable that she should see something of—well, of the best society of the day."

Doubtless Hilda also felt the latter result of her intercourse with Lady Mildred to be highly desirable. As for the refined companionship, I dare say she might have made shift to do without that at a pinch.

I can't tell whether it was after Miss Turner's introduction to the "best society of the day" that Jim first discovered how desperately he was in love with her; but it was about that time that—to my sorrow, though not to my surprise—he made me acquainted with the state of his feelings. It was not, however, until more than a year later, when we had both bidden farewell to Oxford, that matters approached a crisis. Up to then Jim's attentions had been of a most modest and tentative order. He had a poor opinion of his personal charms, and preferred the agony of suspense to the risk of rejection. I am afraid I must plead guilty to having encouraged his diffidence. To confess the truth, I thought it was upon the cards that so captivating a young lady as Miss Turner might chance upon somebody in London whose claims to her regard might be greater than poor Jim's. But such did not prove to be the case. Five thousand a year is not a colossal income, yet, if you will take the trouble to run over the list of your acquaintances, you will find that the bachelors who possess as much are in a small minority; and it seems possible that Hilda may have made that calculation.

Formally Instituted.

Canton Peterborough, No. 10, was formally instituted on Thursday evening by Capt. Grant, of Canton Outaouias, Ottawa, assisted by Clerk Cameron and Chevalier Menzies. There was a large turnout at the meeting, which was held in the Peterborough Lodge room. After an hour's instruction as to preliminary proceedings given in a clear and concise way by Capt. Grant, the corps disbanded. Samples of uniforms were examined and it was decided to get the outfit at once. A vote of thanks was tendered to the visitors for the valuable instruction given. The first regular meeting of the new conton will be held in the drill hall, Market block, on Wednesday evening next.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

Sour Grapes.

The Hamilton Times says:—"The best thing Peterborough, Brockville, Montreal, Belleville and the other towns down east can do is to disband their lacrosse clubs, if they can't play without fighting, establish an Eastern Ontario baseball league and begin a struggle for a little flag. The blood may not course so quickly through their veins at the sport we suggest, but there is less likelihood of losing it than in the savage game of lacrosse." It if all very well for places like Hamilton to play baseball only, and it may be natural for them to be jealous of towns like Peterborough that have good cricket, lacrosse, baseball and football clubs, and lawn tennis clubs, too, with canoe clubs and other athletic associations. The Peterborough lacrosse club, the Times ought to know, does not fight on the field, or elsewhere, but plays lacrosse, and does it well. The club does not hire men to play the game for them either, something that Hamilton, with its baseball experience, may not understand.

GOING OVER THE RIVER

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE TO BE MADE ON MILL STREET.

Description of the Lindsay-Seldon Co's New Factory—A Huge Milling Enterprise in Prospect.

The carpenters and other workmen commenced operations this morning on the Dickson Co's. property across the Otonabee, preparatory to the erection of a large factory.

For the past eight months the trade of the Lindsay-Seldon Furniture Company has grown out of all proportion to their capacity to supply it. By dint of putting on the wholesale markets of the country an article at once elegant, substantial and right in price, they have made the name of the firm well known among wholesale dealers from Windsor to Quebec. To keep pace with this constantly enlarging trade they needed more accommodation and the Dickson Co. decided to build a large factory for their use on the opposite side of the river from the one now occupied.

The new building will be situated on the point of land which runs north from the Otonabee Flour Mills. It will be 40 x 80 feet and four stories in height. A flying bridge will connect the third story of the building with the mainland, and over this bridge will come the raw material and go the finished article.

On the bank storerooms of different kinds will be erected, and a dry kiln will be situated to the north of the main building.

The first flat will be used as the roughing out department, the raw materials descending on an elevator from the third story. Carried to the second flat, the materials will pass through the hands of the bench hands, and will then be taken to the fourth flat, where the finishing department will be The finished article will again come down to the third flat to be packed and sent over the tramway to the Grand Trunk spur line for shipment.

The new building will be heated in the winter with one of the new hot blast heating and drying machines. This machine is a novelty. Instead of conducting the hot air through the building in iron pipes, it is blown through by means of rapidly revolving fans.

The mill will afford employment for 75 hands, but no doubt this number will be augmented as additional buildings are erected.

The four storey building to be vacated by the company will, in all likelihood, be utilized as a packing department for the Meldrum, Davidson & Co.'s flour mill. There has been a proposal made to convert the present mill into a 400 barrel mill, instead of a 150 barrel mill, as it is now. A new side track from the Grand Trunk Railway is to be brought in. The bridge leading from the large saw mill is to be taken down, re-built and a track laid over it. There is only a trifling difference between the contracting parties, which no doubt will be soon set aside.

The establishing of this large flour mill is a very important matter to the town, but more so to the farming community of this district. It will tend to make Peterborough a still more important point for wheat, and those who have reaped the advantage of Peterborough's high prices know very well what that means. It is understood that the new mill will be fitted with the new Cochrane roller process.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

New Teacher.

The Committee on Appointments in connection with the Board of Education have decided upon recommending Mr. Jas. A. Fife, Toronto, to the Board for appointment to the vacancy in the Collegiate Institute Staff. Mr. Fife is a honor graduate of Toronto University in Science and mathematics. He has attended the Training Institute and has his professional certificate from that Institute. He has had experience both as a Public School teacher and High School teacher. Mr. Dumble, who is always ready to defend the interests of the ladies, held out for the appointment of a lady teacher to the position, but the majority of the committee did not come to that conclusion.

Society Funeral

The funeral of the late John Irwin was conducted by the local lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen on Thursday afternoon. A large number of the brethren attended, driving in carriages as far as the Cemetery gate, where they alighted and formed in two lines, allowing the hearse to pass between. They then counter marched and formed in a circle around the grave. The Rev. J. C. Wilson performed the ceremony in the absence of the pastor of the Charlotte Stree Methodist Church. Bro. A. Clegg, as Master Workman, and Bro. D. D. Gallelly, as Past Master, conducted the service on behalf of the Order.

Moving a House.

A constant crowd watches the moving of a house in which there are people living, along Charlotte street to-day. The building was taken from its foundation on Thursday and is making progress to its new resting place, on the north side of Charlotte street, about half way between George and Aylmer streets. It is among the oldest buildings now standing in town, having been built about thirty-five years ago.

LOST ALL HE HAD

A Nebraska Man Coming to Peterborough Confidenced out of his Money.

A very transparent confidence game, says the Toronto Mail, was played on an American visitor at the Union station on Thursday, and the victim lost $50, which was all the money he had with him. There were no bogus cheques or securities offered. The money was simply borrowed by a complete stranger and lent by a green countryman. Matthew McMahon arrived on Thursday morning from Peston, Nebraska, and was waiting to catch a train for Peterborough. While he was waiting around the station looking out for an opportunity to talk to somebody, as American visitors generally do, he was spotted by an accomplished crook. A well-dressed man with a very gentlemanly bearing sauntered up near to where McMahon was standing, and after sizing him up stood still for a few minutes. Then the stranger spoke to McMahon on a trivial subject, and in a few minutes they were having a very pleasant conversation. They got on pretty friendly terms. The "crook" said his name was Stewart and that he was a banker from Port Hope. After some further conversation a very good understanding seemed to have been arrived at, and each considered the other a jolly good fellow. Stewart said he would willingly wait over in Toronto a couple of days to show his new friend around the city, and the latter regretted that he was unable to accept the kind offer. Then Stewart remembered that he was under solemn obligation to pay a bill in this city about that hour, and by an unacountable circumstance he was ENTIRELY WITHOUT MONEY.

He had funds in the express office, but it was not yet open. He was on the horns of a dilemma. Then a happy thought struck him. He would be very sorry to inconvenience his new friend, but if he would loan him a few dollars until the express office opened it would be quickly repaid, and would place him under a everlasting obligation. Without saying anything McMahon drew from his pocket all the money he had, $50, and placed it in the hands of Stewart. The latter left to pay the bill and has not been seen or heard of since. After waiting around a couple of hours McMahon went to the detectives and told his tale of woe. The most striking characteristic about "Stewart" was his gentlemanly bearing. He spoke in a low, insinuating tone of voice, and was apparently very reluctant about making a chance acquaintance. He is a tall man and stands very erect. He wears a dark beard trimmed closely. From the description given the detectives are of the opinon that the crook is a stranger in the city.

THE TWO JOHNS.

FRIDAY, Aug. 19.—John Wilson and John Swanson were up before the Court this morning on a charge of larceny, P. C. McGinty avering that they stole the two hens hanging up in No 1 cell. They pleaded not guilty and as there was no evidence against them they were discharged. The pot and the hens belonged to Mr. John Wilson, of the Royal Oak Hotel, but he did not wish to press the case. The Wiman broilers were taken off the nail in No. 1 cell and conveyed to a respectable burying ground

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. THE LAND BILL

Further Progress Made in the House of Commons.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—In the House of Commons last evening Mr. William Henry Smith announced that the Government will abandon the rent charge bill, the technical education bill, Mr. Goschen's revenue collection bill, the Irish constabulary bill, and other minor measures. He indicated the measures that the Government intended to proceed with, which include a land allotment bill.

In the report of the Land Bill, Mr. Balfour said that the Government accepted the House of Lords' amendment relating to town parks. It was the Government's duty to see that justice was done to all classes.

After a hot debate, in which Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Messrs. Goschen, Healy, Dillon and Chamberlain participated, Mr. Balfour's motion to accept the House of Lords' amendment was carried by 286 to 164. On motion of Mr. Balfour, three of the House of Lords' amendments were rejected.

Mr. Gibson, Attorney-General for Ireland, said that the House would confirm Earl Cadogan's amendment, which provides that the revision of rents be based upon the difference in prices in 1887 as compared with prices from 1881 to 1885.

After a spirited debate, in which Mr. Parnell, Mr. T. W. Russel, Mr. Chamberlain and others opposed the bill, the motion was passed under cloture, the vote being 215 to 201.

Mr. Parnell is disposed to meet the Government half way in its efforts to finally dispose of the Land Bill, and is hopeful of securing its passage in a form showing a decided improvement upon the measure tinkered up by the Lords All of the Parnellite members, including Mr. Parnell himself, were in their seats last night, prepared for any emergency and determined that they should not be caught napping.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

How the Rumors of His Death are Said to Have Originated.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—A private letter received from St. Paul de Loanda ascribes the rumors of Mr. Stanley's death to the desire of the natives in certain parts of Africa through which he is travelling to put him out of the way rather than to any certainty that they have accomplished their wish. A portion of the natives are extremely hostile to strangers, and especially detest explorers, who, they claim, are overbearing and cruel, and at the best are merely the forerunners of a more powerful body of white men whose object is the seizure of land and the extermination of the natives. The stories of Stanley's massacre, the letter says, are impossible of belief for a variety of reasons, any one of which is sufficient to divest the reports of reliability.

Summer Cottage Burned.

Mr. J. G. Macklin, Engineer of the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, gives the following particulars of the distruction of his Summer cottage built this spring, on the shores of Lake Simcoe near Couchiching Park, and were he has been living for the last six weeks. On Thursday morning about half past four o'clock it was discovered to be on fire, and the flames had taken such hold, already coming through the roof, that the total destruction of the building was inevitable. The fire was discovered by Mr. T. Haultain, who was there on a visit. The dense smoke awoke him, and he at once aroused Mr. and Mrs. Macklin and Miss Haultain. The fire originated in the pantry where it is supposed that a coal oil lamp had been left alight and had exploded. The inmates had a narrow escape, owing to the extreme denseness of the smoke with its suffocating effect, and to the difficulty of seeing the means of egress. Mr. Macklin saved the papers at which he had been working but hardly anything else could be preserved. The long grass round the house took fire, and burned fiercely, adding to the difficulty of doing anything and even consuming some articles that had been carried out. We are sorry to learn that the house was uninsured; it was valued with the contents at about $1,200. An outhouse, some distance away, in which the servants were sleeping, was saved.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PROCLAIMED.

Announcement of the Proclaiming of the League Under the Crimes Act.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—All speculation as to whether the Irish National League would be proclaimed or not has been set at rest. Lord Salisbury announced in the House of Lords this afternoon that the Government had proclaimed the League.

WORDS OF PRAISE.

The Arrangements Made for the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge Appreciated.

Since the meeting of the Oddfellows' Grand Lodge in Peterborough our exchanges from all parts of the Province, and some outside of this Province, have been devoting space to words of praise and appreciation of the arrangements made in Peterborough and the manner in which they were carried out. The same tone pervades the remarks of all of them—appreciation, pleasure and delight—and the comments on the town and its appearance have been plattering.

It would take too much space, and would perhaps be wearisome, to give all such comments, but we take the following extracts from the Dominion Oddfellow's account of the Grand Lodge meeting, as it may be taken as expressing the opinions of all the visiting Oddfellows:—

"The session of 1887 of the Grand Lodge of Ontario is now one of the events of the past, and those who were fortunate enough to be present at Peterborough during the session will always remember the week as one of the most pleasant ever spent on such an occasion. It would take two or three times the space we can give to it to tell of all the courtesies and hospitalities extended by the Peterborough brethren and sisters; so during the next few issues we will give such of the important events as we can get together until the beautiful story is all told; and if told in aught but simple language, much of it would appear like fiction."

"The streets presented a most charming appearance, arches spanned the main street, and bunting was spread everywhere; while the faces of all you met beamed with pleasure and joyous greeting."

"In the evening (Tuesday) the representatives to the Grand Lodge arrived by every incoming train, and soon all hotels were full—"standing room only" being the cry heard on every side—yet after patient waiting, and a little manipulation here and there by the chairman of the Hotel Committee, Bro. E. E. Henderson, every brother who had by forethought secured his room got it; those who did not, got comfortable quarters, so that, with the rarest exception, everyone was comfortably located. The evening was given over to welcome and cordial greetings. The members of the local committees were ubiquitous, and a complaint of any kind had but to be expressed before it was remedied by some brother who had charge of the department complained of, but complaints were so rare that probably they should not be referred to. We would like to give the names of every member of the vast committee of gentlemen and ladies, but have not got them all. Bros. R. W. Bell, M. D., D. H. Moore, J. R. Stratton, J. A. Macfarlane, R. R. Hamilton, Thomas Workman, A. McNeil, as chairmen of committees, did their work so well that it would be hard to suggest in what way a repetition of their work could be improved, and they were each so ably aided by the members of their several committees that everything passed off without a hitch.

"The arrangements for the Cantons were simply perfect. The wings of the large drill-shed were filled with elegant bedsteads, each provided with the best of clothing, and here the Cantons and bands were quartered, the officers having a separate and private mess, where General J. C. Underwood, who was present, had a separate room, preferring to be with his "boys" to having the parlour and bedroom provided for him at the "Oriental."

"The whole force had their meals in the lower portion of the rink, where three times each day the tables were spread with everything the season produced or the appetite could ask for. These tables and the eating department were presided over in the most complete manner by the following ladies, under the charge of Bro. R. R. Hamilton, Chairman of the Refreshment Committee:—Mrs. S. White, Mrs. R. Nimmo, Mrs. D. H. Moore, Mrs. Wm. Galley, Mrs. A. McFarlane, Mrs. P. McFarlane, Mrs. J. Stanger, Mrs. J. Gilmour, Mrs. J. Stratton, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Mrs. Wm. Maud, Mrs. Helm, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Herrington, Mrs. J. McKee, Mrs. R. The Accident at Myrtle.

MYRTLE, Aug. 19.—The inquest into the cause of the accident near here on the Canadian Pacific Railway on July 18 last, by which Brakeman McIntosh, of Pickering, lost his life, resulted in a disagreement of the jury to-night. Another inquest will be held on Sept. 12.

WHY DAVITT DID NOT ATTEND.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Michael Davitt and the Archbishp of Cashel promised to attend the opening of the piscatorial school at Baltimore, Count Cork, yesterday, but Mr. Davitt, learning that the Queen was to be toasted, absented himself. The Archbishop was present and joined in the toast to the Queen.

FRANCIS JOSEPH'S BIRTHDAY.

VIENNA, Aug. 19.—The Emperor Francis Joseph's birthday was celebrated throughout the Empire yesterday with the usual rejoicings.

FERDINAND'S ADVENTURE.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The course of absolutism pursued by Prince Ferdinand since his arrival in Bulgaria has aroused a majority of the European newspapers to declare that he has undertaken an adventure that has flagrantly violated the treaty of Berlin and outraged public rights. This almost unanimous attitude of the influential press of the continent is of very recent origin, and the fact that many of the papers holding these views are semi-official organs and their articles presumably inspired, augurs ill for the continuance of Prince Ferdinand's career as a ruler. The changed attitude of the German press is due not so much to Russian influence as to a realization of the incontestable justice of the Czar's claims.

THE GOVERNMENT ENDORSED.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The Standard applauds the Government's firmness in the matter of the Land bill, and is surprised at Mr. Chamberlain's attitude. "The only fitting answer to Mr. Parnell's menace," says the Standard, "is that the Government will not fail in its duty to protect life and property in Ireland by the free use of the powers Parliament has conferred upon it."

URGED TO ACT WITH VIGOR.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 19.—The Moscow Gazette urges the Russian Government to act with vigor in regard to Bulgaria. BURNED AT SEA.

The City of Montreal Burned—Thirteen Persons Lose Their Lives.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 19.—The steamship City of Montreal, of the Inman line, from New York, August 6th, for this port, was burned at sea. Her passengers were all saved.

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 19.—The steamship York City arrived here to-day and brought the news of the burning of the City of Montreal. She had on board the crew and passengers of the ill-fated steamer, with the exception of thirteen, who perished. The York city was en route to London from Baltimore.

The City of Montreal sailed from New York on the 6th inst. On account of her inferiority as to speed, compared with other steamers of the line, she was allowed to carry no cabin passengers, and had to confine herself to intermediate and steerage passengers. She was built in 1872, and averaged her trips in a little over ten days. Her length was 419 feet, breadth, 44 feet, depth, 34 feet, and gross tonnage, 4,495 tons. There were no passengers from Montreal on board of her on her last trip.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The destruction of the steamer City of Montreal occurred on the 11th, five days after she left New York. A boat containing six passengers and seven members of the crew is missing. The occupants of this boat are the thirteen persons reported to have perished.

Bank of London Suspends.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 19.—The Bank of London in Canada did not open its doors this morning. It is understood the arrangement for taking over the business between it and the Bank of Toronto was not consummated and the directors last night decided to close the bank. The President, Mr. Henry Taylor, is out of town. Very little loss is anticipated by bill holders.

GAMBLING IN WHEAT.

In an article describing the steps now being taken by Russia to cheapen and expedite the transport of its surplus wheat to other countries, and especially to England, English Engineering says:—

"The trade has been for several years in a state of extreme depression, and experienced a temporary relief during the existence of the Chicago corner. That event led to the purchase of so much Russian wheat for the supply of Western Europe as to cause a temporary inflation of the market, but the cessation of that stimulus appears to have left things in a worse condition than ever before."

This is a striking and practical instance of one of the evils that we have more than once pointed out must result from the gambling in wheat conducted on such a gigantic scale in the United States. By holding back vast quantities of wheat to make a corner at Chicago, an opportunity is given to other countries to supply with every bushel they can spare the demand in Great Britain. There is thus so much less required from this side of the Atlantic, the stock in hand is unnaturally enlarged, and a downward tendency is given to prices not only for the present, but also for the future crop. This is the immediate evil, one of no slight magnitude, especially as there is a frequent repetition in Chicago of this gambling with the staff of life. The baneful effect also extends to Canada, though fortunately only to a partial extent, as is shown by the fact that prices have ruled at least 10 cents a bushel higher on this side of the St. Lawrence.

But, besides this transient depreciation there is another evil result from this unscrupulous gambling that is more serious, because it is more permanent, and effects the farmers of Canada equally with those of the United States. It was the holding back of wheat by Chicago wheat corners that more than anything else led to the enormous development of wheat growing in India and of means of transport for the crop. And now we have Russia confessedly stimulated by the last Chicago corner to make gigantic efforts to increase its wheat exports to Great Britain. Thus we have two formidable competitors encouraged to vie with us in supplying wheat to our best customer after our home market for the most important product of our Canadian farms. Is it strange that under such circumstances the price of wheat is steadily decreasing? Is it gratifying to think that, in order to enrich gamblers, Canadian farmers should have to compete with Russians, who were so lately serfs, and the inhabitants of India, who can live on a few cents a day?

Yet there are some who advise Canada to connect itself as intimately as possible with the country in which this iniquitous system of gambling in wheat prevails, and to jeopardize our home market, the maintenance and increase of which is the best hope of Canadian farmers.

HUDSON'S BAY.

Lieut. Gordon's report of his last cruise in Hudson's Bay is attracting considerable attention. In reference to his description, already mentioned by us, of the improvident manner in which New England whalers are ruining the the fishing in those waters, the Montreal Herald remarks that this is done "without a word of objection from the Canadian Government," and then it proceeds to assail the Macdonald Administration. The Herald would have no great difficulty in obtaining access to the Hon. Peter Mitchell, who was for a time Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and was a member of Parliament while his present political friends were in office, so as to learn from this well-informed gentleman, what steps were taken by himself or by the Reform Administration to control the New England whalers who then as now frequented the Bay. The truth is this is not a matter for partisan recrimination. A young country cannot do everything at once, but now that the importance of this matter has been shown all should unite in furthering proper restrictions, and an enforcement of the law both as to poaching and smuggling. We had already called attention to this necessity even before the fuller light thrown upon it by Lieut. Gordon's last report. We have also invited and we again invite attention to the great importance, in the event of any fishery arrangement, that due regulations should be made and enforced to preserve the fisheries from destruction through the use of improvident methods either by our own fishermen or by more reckless foreigners.

Running the round of those Canadian journals that are always eager to belittle their country, is a paragraph falsely accusing the Administration of importing from Belgium the iron work for the new public buildings at Ottawa. The Administration had no more control over the purchase than these unpatriotic editors themselves, for it was a matter entirely in the hands of the contractors. We are informed that the contractor had recourse to Belgium because the Canadian manufacturers were not then prepared to supply the iron frame work within the required time.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

JULY MORTALITY.

Returns From the Twenty-Six Canadian Cities and Towns.

In the twenty-six principal cities and towns of Canada which make monthly returns of deaths to the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa there were in July 2,060. The mortality in July was 33 per cent. higher than in June; or at the rate of 36 per 1,000 of population per annum. The record of deaths for May and June was 1,323 and 1,552, respectively.

In Montreal the mortality was slightly lower in July than in June; whereas in Toronto it was more than double—157 death in June and 327 in July—an increase of over 100 per cent. In Quebec the mortality increased about 80 per cent.; in Hamilton, 75 per cent.; in Ottawa, over 31 per cent.; and in London, 26 per cent.; while in nearly all the other cities and towns there was a large increase.

Diarrhœal diseases caused in the twenty-six cities and towns the appalling total of 668 deaths; or a mortality, from these diseases alone, at the rate of nearly 12 per 1,000 of population per annum—nearly one-third of the total rate from all causes, and more than double the high rate in June.

Not one of the larger cities can reflect on the others. In all almost alike was there a large increase in the mortality from diarrhœas.

The intense and continued heat will of course be blamed for the high mortality; and the heat was doubtless the chief exciting cause; but with absolute cleanliness—pure air and pure water—and proper food there would be no such death-rate or anything near it.

Nor can the blot upon the sanitary condition and system in the cities of Canada be removed by asserting that the mortuary returns are not perfect, as some have asserted. If there are imperfections in the returns from any of the places they are chiefly imperfections of omission. Comparatively very few of these 2,060 deaths were of those who went, or were taken, into the cities to die. More persons, probably, with the view of saving their life when perhaps near death, were taken to the country and buried there.

As was observed in the Journal last month, should there take place among the domestic animals such a fearful proportionate destruction of life, there would probably be created thereby a good deal of excitement, and the cause or causes would be investigated and prompt measures would be employed to prevent its recurrence.—Canada Health Journal.

CANALS.

The question of the relative value of canals and railways in the transportation of freight has lately been the subject of inquiry. A convention was held at Rochester a short time ago to consider the question of deepening and improving the New York canals. It was shown at that convention that the saving to the consumers at a distance from the water ways by cheap transportation would amply repay all the money necessary to make the improvements. The commercial supremacy of the State of New York was demonstrated to be due to its geographical position on natural water ways and its canal system. The grain and merchandise shipped over these canals, notwithstanding the network of railways, is something enormous and shows that they must always remain an important factor in the transportation of exports and the distribution of imports. The Government of the Dominion shows its wisdom in the construction and improvement of our own canals. An engineer has been sent survey the route of the proposed Sault canal. This link has become a necessity, as the increasing business of the North-west cannot find an outlet by the American canal, which is employed to its utmost capacity. In view of the constantly increasing production of Manitoba and our own Northwest, neither the C.P.R. nor the lake route will be sufficient to convey the grain of that region to the east as cheaply as the interests of the producers and consumers demand. The completion of the Trent Valley canal will become an absolute necessity ere long. It is to be regretted that the sum promised ($300,000) was not put in the estimates at the last session of Parliament, and it would be well if those interested in this important work all along the line would prepare themselves to so impress the Government with the importance of this canal that a sufficient sum will be granted at the next session to push it on to the Georgian Bay.—Barrie Advance.

WARSAW.

Presentation.—On Thursday evening a number of members of St. Paul's Church choir and congregation visited the residence of Mr. Thos. Choat and presented him with a handsome gold headed cane and a prir of slippers, together with an address. Miss McFee read the address in an impressive manner, and Miss Lackie made the presentation. Mr. Choat was to much surprised and moved by the unexpected expression of regard to reply at any length. The company spent a very pleasant evening at Mr. Choat's residence and retired early to their homes. Mr. Choat recently resigned the choir-mastership of St. Paul's Church.

Uncle Sam's Ready Money

The gold held by the Treasury in its vaults at Washington weigh 519 tons. If packed into ordinary carts, one ton to each cart, it would make a procession two miles long, allowing twenty feet of space for the movement of each horse and cart. The silver in the same vaults weigh 7,396 tons. Measuring it in carts, as in the case of the gold, it would require the services of 7,396 horses and carts to transport it and would make a procession, over twenty-one miles in length.—*N.Y. THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

And so, one fine hot month of July, when Cranfield rectory, embosomed among its spreading trees, looked the very spot for enacting a pastoral idyl; when the great level lawns at Staines Court were gay with flowers, which there was nobody but the gardeners to admire, and when our own humble domain was, as my mother, who took immense pride in it, declared, "quite a show," it came to pass that two young people were constantly to be seen riding or walking together among the lanes and woods, of whom it might be said that they formed a very handsome couple. Not that our big-boned, broad-shouldered Jim, with his hooked nose, his quiet gray eyes and that large mouth of his, which, upon the smallest provocation, would widen itself into a smile extending from ear to ear, was strictly speaking a handsome man, but perhaps he was near enough being so to justify the above good-natured description, which was uttered by many persons, the Rev. Simeon Turner included. The Rev. Simeon was not ambitious. A son-in-law with 5,000 a year, a high moral character, and a malleable disposition was good enough for him.

I was then about to be called to the bar, and was busy reading law, a study which I thought at the time, and think still, to be among the most repulsive that a moderately intelligent human being can bring his mind to bear upon. One afternoon, while I was sitting with somebody's "Common Law Procedure," and I forget whose "Precedents of Pleadings" open before me, Jim lounged into my den, and, seating himself sideways upon the table, remarked that he was the happiest fellow in Christendom, or something to that effect.

When you know that your friend is absolutely bent upon making a fool of himself, the very stupidest thing in the world is to tell him so. I endeavored to look delighted, and said, "Has she accepted you, then?"

"Well, no," he answered; "she hasn't exactly accepted me, for the reason that I haven't asked her; but I think it will be all right. Harry, old chap, I don't know what I have done to deserve such luck!"

Nor did I. I am quite sure that he had never done anything to deserve it; but the thing had come upon him, nevertheless; and, after all, one sees many prisoners who hug their chains contentedly. "And why," I inquired, "haven't you proposed to her?"

Jim laughed. "I'm such a duffer!" he replied. "It takes me a long time to get under way, and when I am coming to the point she always manages somehow or other to put me off. Well, it doesn't much matter; there's no hurry, you know."

"None whatever," I agreed, thinking to myself that, so long as the fatal words remained unspoken, there was always just the ghost of a hope left for him.

And then he threw himself into my arm chair, lighted a cigar and began to rhapsodize after a fashion which it would be as tedious to write about as to read.

CHAPTER II.

It was at this somewhat critical juncture that Lord Staines took it into his head to come down to Staines Court, with the avowed intention of remaining there for a considerable time. His arrival, which had been preceded by that of his French cook, his house steward, his groom of the chambers, and heaven only knows how many other domestic functionaries (for his style of living had always been far in excess of that warranted by his income), caused quite a little stir in the vicinity, and set everybody conjecturing as to its causes. What these were was revealed to us the next morning by Lady Mildred, who lost no time in walking over to see my mother.

"Papa has been very unlucky this year," she said, in her gentle, matter of course way. "First of all, his horse lost the Derby by a head, as you know"——

"My dear," interrupted my mother, "I am afraid I know nothing about the Derby, except that it is a race which takes place every spring."

"No, you wouldn't. But papa knows a great deal about it, and even I know something. Premier must have won if he had not been interfered with. It was nobody's fault, but it was poor papa's misfortune; and since then he has been unlucky at Ascot also. So there is to be no yachting this summer, and we are going to remain here quietly and ask hardly anybody to stay with us, and Bracknell is coming down in a few days, so that will be quite like old times again. But I am afraid he will find it too dull to stay long."

Bracknell at the age of 23 was probably very much what my tutor had anticipated that he would be. He was one of the handsomest young men about London; he was immensely in request with that class who have come to be known in these latter days as "smart people;" his affairs de cœur had been numerous and a trifle ostentatious; he was owner, or part owner, of several horses which had achieved a certain celebrity, and he was pretty deeply in debt. I should be puzzled to say what good qualities he possessed beyond that of pluck, but I do not in the least wonder at his great popularity. Jim, who persisted in regarding him as a bright particular star, was overjoyed on hearing that he proposed to honor our quiet neighborhood with his presence for a time, and it struck me that Hilda's eyes glistened when this cheering intelligence was conveyed to her.

BOBCAYGEON.

OUTRAGE.—On Sunday morning Mr. Cain of Cain Bros., was surprised, on going to his stable to find that during the night, some evil person had entered the building and clipped the hair from his horse's tail and neck, leaving the tail stump, a ridiculous object, like a burnt stick. The harness was also damaged by cutting. Mr. D. Cain has been an active supporter of the Scott Act, and this fact is supposed to have been the cause of the outrage. A suitable reward should be offered for the apprehension of the evil doers.—Independent

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

A special cablegram to the Mail says Sir Charles Tupper on Wednesday published a memorandum in London showing that in the adjustment of the iron duties a large discrimination was made in favour of British as against foreign iron manufacturers.

Mr. Fitzgerald, liquidator in Canada of the Briton Medical Life Association, informs Canadian policyholders that premiums should be paid to the head office in England, but that, though not legally authorized to do so, he is willing to receive them until the policyholders decide on their course of action.

Captain Sheppard, commanding the U.S. revenue steamer Rush, has reported to the Secretary of the Treasury on the seizure in Behring's Sea of three British and one American vessel, for violation of the seal fishery laws. All the vessels were sent to Sitka for prosecution.

Missionary Meeting.

The Rev. Mr. Davis, a young man who goes out to India next month as a missionary, will speak at the young men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. room to-night, at 8 o'clock. All young men are invited to attend this, which we are sure will be an interesting meeting.

A Well-Earned Memento.

Midland Station Burned.

On Friday afternoon at 3.15 the station house, baggage room and office of the G. T. R. at Midland was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Macklin left at 3.10, and there was then no sign of fire. At Victoria Harbour, six miles away, he received a telegram that the Midland station was in flames, and later at Orillia he learned that it was entirely consumed. It was a substantial new building only erected last year.

Rice Lake.

Parties wanting a pleasure sail cannot do better than take the steamer Golden Eye, which leaves the C P.R. wharf at 7.30 a. m., and get landed at Jubilee Point, where there are tables for dining on, a spring of water, and the best of fishing. Those wishing to take a sail on the lake, can continue on to Idyl Wild. Meals are provided on the boat, or at Idyl Wild, for 25 cents. This beautiful trip can be enjoyed for 75 cents return tickets. Looking for a Site.

The Lindsay Post says:—"An effort is being made to if possible induce the Rathbun company of Deseronto to make Lindsay their headquarters for this district. The company are looking for a site on which to build a large wood-working shop and factory and possibly a saw mill. Reeve Smyth for the town council and in absence of Mayor Walters has had some correspondence with the company and has submitted such inducements towards influencing the location of the factory here as are afforded by the local by-law in granting exemptions from taxation. It is probable that at the ensuing meeting of the council for September the matter may come up in tangible shape."

Rifle Practice.

The riflemen who go to Toronto on Monday to participate in the Ontario Rifle Association matches, with some others, had another practice at the butts on Friday afternoon, when the best shooting of the season was done. There was a strong wind blowing at the time. The following scores were made:—

PETERBOROUGH'S VOICE

Liberals and Conservatives Against Commercial Union

RUINOUS TO VITAL INTERESTS

FARMERS AND MANUFACTURERS WOULD GET A STAGGERING BLOW.

Patriotic Sentiments From Leading Men—Canada Able to Take Care of Herself Without Asking Favors of Anybody.

The Detroit News representative, who visited Peterborough a short time ago for the purpose of obtaining the views of leading citizens on the subject of Commercial Union between Canada and the United States, has not confined himself to the truth when misrepresentations would better suit his purpose. For instance he says that Mr. Peter Hamilton said that annexation "would not be particularly distasteful to him." The fact is that Mr. Hamilton said nothing of the kind. He is dead against Commercial Union, one of his principal reasons for opposing the movement being that he sees annexation a little further on if Commercial Union be adopted. "The Detroit News man," Mr. Hamilton said to a REVIEW reporter "came to me to ascertain my views on Commercial Union." It's all a humbug,' I said, when asked about it. 'But said the leading members of your party—he said. I don't care a rap about leading members of my party. This Commercial Union is a lot of political clan trap got up by the Globe and other paper,s.' Continuing Mr. Hamilton said:—"We don't want Commercial Union. We are able to paddle our own canoe, without asking favors from anybody. I would rather live on two meals a day than go begging to a foreign nation. I am for Canada first, Canada last, and Canada all the time. Whatever is best for Canada I will support, but Commercial Union, I think, would be very bad."

Mr. W. H. Wrighton is another whose views have been subjected to contortion by the Detroit News reporter. Mr. Wrighton is credited with saying that he was in favor of Commercial Union, when the fact is that Mr. Wrighton did not say it. He says that if Commercial Union were brought forward as an issue to-morrow he would not vote for it, because it is such a many sided question and beset with so many difficulties that he has not been able to get a clear conception of its results. What Mr. Wrighton said was that he was in favor of better trade intercourse with the United States.

Mr. Wm. HAMILTON on being interviewed said:—"I'm against Commercial Union. I don't see that it would do any good. The great cry is that it would benefit the farmers. Well, the farmers might get a better price for a little barley and hay, but the great bulk of their produce would be sold for less money."

"How would it affect your own business Mr. Hamilton?"

"Well, it would reduce this business all over the country to a jobbing trade unless the manufactures went in for making just one article, as they do on the other side. The large establishments manufacturing specialties would have an advantage which we could not stand against unless we went into direct competition with them. Of course if I thought it would benefit the country as a whole I would be as willing to be sacrificed as anybody, but I don't think it would be a good thing. I take no stock in Commercial Union" said he.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox says that he was called on but saw the reporter only a minute or so while passing from one room to another. "He would prefer" be says "to let the matter drop and have nothing more said about it."

Mr. MELDRUM, of Meldrum, Davidson & Co., millers, is very strongly opposed to the movement. In regard to the farmers he said that if Commercial Union was in operation to-day they would get from five to six cents per bushel less for their wheat. He went on: "I'll tell you, so far as we are concerned it would bring the price down to Chicago level, which is now 68¾ cents. The price of wheat is rated on an export basis, and Chicago has about the same rate as we have."

"In regard to milling, how would competition with the Minneapolis mills affect you?"

"It would simply kill us" said Mr. Meldrum decidedly "and it would not only kill us but it would kill the spring wheat industry and Manitoba wheat also. We could grind neither Spring wheat nor Manitoba wheat. The Lower Province trade would be taken completely away from us. As it is we have all we can do to compete against the Minneapolis mills in that market with their paying duties. The only advantage arising from Commercial Union that I can see, and I have paid a good deal of attention to it, would be the opening of the Boston market for fall wheat flour. This would be a small compensation for other losses."

Mr. G. W. MATTHEWS, of Mathews & Co.'s pork packing establishment, says it is quite plain to anyone that if the duty is taken off they will have to cut down prices that much, and consequently farmers would get just that much less for their pork. "It will not pay them to raise pork at that price," he went on, "prices are low enough as they are. The consequence would be that it would not pay us to stop here. If we had to go into direct competition with Chicago pork we would have to move out to the Western States."

Mr. A. W. BRODIE being called on, said in reference to Commercial Union: "We are all right as we are; we don't want any Commercial Union."

"People say that you woollen manufacturers are piling up fortunes under the high tariff," ventured the reporter.

"It's a mistake," said Mr. Brodie, "the home competition is keen enough now to prevent anyone except sharp business men being successful in the trade, and this competion is getting keener all the time. The prices are not even with the tariff, as many suppose, but far below it. Prices are even below what they were before the high tariff was put on. Before the National Policy came into force we were getting 35 cents for an article which we are now glad to sell at 25 cents. Even in the last year prices have taken a great fall. Last year we sold goods at 23 cents which to-day we can only get 16 for."

"How about competition from the United States under Commercial Union?"

"If we had Commercial Union I am convinced that the Canadian manufacturers would soon be shut out. Not, mind you, that we would be unable to compete against them in a legitimate trade. I think we can. But if we had Commercial Union the immense concerns employing thousands of hands would use Canada as a slaughter market. Instead of holding their great auction sales in New York, they would send their surplus stuff over to Canada and shut us out."

Mr. STEVENSON is absent from town but that he is grossly represented is certain. In reply to the circular asking members of the Toronto Board of Trade, whether they were for or against Commercial Union, he sent the answer that he was opposed to it.

Mr. CLUXTON is also out of town and was when the imaginative Detroit reporter was on the war path.

Mr. ULLYOTT was called upon, but was not at his office. The Detroit News sets him down as an annexationist, but, seeing that it has misrepresented other people, Mr. Ullyott is as likely as not to be misrepresented also.

Races and Tug-of-War in the Ashburnham Grounds.

The Amateur Athletic Association held the second of their series of evening sports in their grounds, Ashburnham, on Friday evening. There were quite a number present, and the band was in attendance.

Dr. Burnham, Mr. J. Morris and Mr. A. St. A. Smith took charge of the sports.

There were three entries for the 100 yard race, which was won by A. Moore.

The boot race was the next event. A crowd of boys entered. They were started and ran to a pile of boots, picked out their own, put them on and ran back. Master W. Brundrette was declared the winner.

The quarter mile race was well contested between three. A. Moore won, closely pressed by J. Begley.

The sack race caused great laughter, especially as the contents of a sack occasionally tumbled over while the race was in progress. D. Davidson won.

The three legged race was won by Moore and Thomas, who came in with a slight lead.

The feature of the evening was the tug-of-war between the P. A. A. A. and the Fire Brigade. The first pull was long and steady, but the Brigade boys gradually pulled the others over. The other two pulls were short and hurried; one won by the Association team and one by the Brigade.

Inland Revenue.

The Toronto World's Ottawa correspondence contains the following:—"An order-in-council has been passed abolishing the Inland Revenue Division of Cobourg, and declaring that for excise purposes the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Durham and Northumberland shall be constituted the Inland Revenue District of Peterborough, it being deemed advisable to amalgamate the present divisions of Cobourg and Peterborough in consequence of the large decrease in the excise business in the Cobourg Division, such decrease being mainly attributable to the coming into force of the Scott Act in the Counties of Durham and Northumberland, which comprised the division."

THE LAND BILL.

Further Progress Made in the House of Commons.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—In the House of Commons last evening Mr. William Henry Smith announced that the Government will abandon the rent charge bill, the technical education bill, Mr. Goschen's revenue collection bill, the Irish constabulary bill, and other minor measures. He indicated the measures that the Government intended to proceed with, which include a land allotment bill.

In the report of the Land Bill, Mr. Balfour said that the Government accepted the House of Lords' amendment relating to town parks. It was the Government's duty to see that justice was done to all classes.

After a hot debate, in which Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Messrs. Goschen, Healy, Dillon and Chamberlain participated, Mr. Balfour's motion to accept the House of Lords' amendment was carried by 286 to 164. On motion of Mr. Balfour, three of the House of Lords' amendments were rejected.

Mr. Gibson, Attorney-General for Ireland, said that the House would confirm Earl Cadogan's amendment, which provides that the revision of rents be based upon the difference in prices in 1887 as compared with prices from 1881 to 1885.

After a spirited debate, in which Mr. Parnell, Mr. T. W. Russel, Mr. Chamberlain and others opposed the bill, the motion was passed under cloture, the vote being 215 to 201.

Mr. Parnell is disposed to meet the Government half way in its efforts to finally dispose of the Land Bill, and is hopeful of securing its passage in a form showing a decided improvement upon the measure tinkered up by the Lords All of the Parnellite members, including Mr. Parnell himself, were in their seats last night, prepared for any emergency and determined that they should not be caught napping.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

How the Rumors of His Death are Said to Have Originated.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—A private letter received from St. Paul de Loanda ascribes the rumors of Mr. Stanley's death to the desire of the natives in certain parts of Africa through which he is travelling to put him out of the way rather than to any certainty that they have accomplished their wish. A portion of the natives are extremely hostile to strangers, and especially detest explorers, who, they claim, are overbearing and cruel, and at the best are merely the forerunners of a more powerful body of white men whose object is the seizure of land and the extermination of the natives. The stories of Stanley's massacre, the letter says, are impossible of belief for a variety of reasons, any one of which is sufficient to divest the reports of reliability.

Summer Cottage Burned.

Mr. J. G. Macklin, Engineer of the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, gives the following particulars of the distruction of his summer cottage built this spring, on the shores of Lake Simcoe near Couchiching Park, and were he has been living for the last six weeks. On Thursday morning about half past four o'clock it was discovered to be on fire, and the flames had taken such hold, already coming through the roof, that the total destruction of the building was inevitable. The fire was discovered by Mr. T. Haultain, who was there on a visit. The dense smoke awoke him, and he at once aroused Mr. and Mrs. Macklin and Miss Haultain. The fire originated in the pantry where it is supposed that a coal oil lamp had been left alight and had exploded. The inmates had a narrow escape, owing to the extreme denseness of the smoke with its suffocating effect, and to the difficulty of seeing the means of egress. Mr. Macklin saved the papers at which he had been working but hardly anything else could be preserved. The long grass round the house took fire and burned fiercely, adding to the difficulty of doing anything and even consuming some articles that had been carried out. We are sorry to learn that the house was uninsured; it was valued with the contents at about $1,200. An outhouse, some distance away, in which the servants were sleeping, was saved.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PROCLAIMED.

Announcement of the Proclaiming of the League Under the Crimes Act.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—All speculation as to whether the Irish National League would be proclaimed or not has been set at rest. Lord Salisbury announced in the House of Lords this afternoon that the Government had proclaimed the League.

WORDS OF PRAISE.

The Arrangements Made for the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge Appreciated.

Since the meeting of the Oddfellows' Grand Lodge in Peterborough our exchanges from all parts of the Province, and some outside of this Province, have been devoting space to words of praise and appreciation of the arrangements made in Peterborough and the manner in which they were carried out. The same tone pervades the remarks of all of them—appreciation, pleasure and delight—and the comments on the town and its appearance have been plattering.

It would take too much space, and would perhaps be wearisome, to give all such comments, but we take the following extracts from the Dominion Oddfellow's account of the Grand Lodge meeting, as it may be taken as expressing the opinions of all the visiting Oddfellows:—

"The session of 1887 of the Grand Lodge of Ontario is now one of the events of the past, and those who were fortunate enough to be present at Peterborough during the session will always remember the week as one of the most pleasant ever spent on such an occasion. It would take two or three times the space we can give to it to tell of all the courtesies and hospitalities extended by the Peterborough brethren and sisters; so during the next few issues we will give such of the important events as we can get together until the beautiful story is all told; and if told in aught but simple language, much of it would appear like fiction."

"The streets presented a most charming appearance, arches spanned the main street, and bunting was spread everywhere; while the faces of all you met beamed with pleasure and joyous greeting."

"In the evening (Tuesday) the representatives to the Grand Lodge arrived by every incoming train, and soon all hotels were full—"standing room only" being the cry heard on every side—yet after patient waiting, and a little manipulation here and there by the chairman of the Hotel Committee, Bro. E. E. Henderson, every brother who had by forethought secured his room got it; those who did not, got comfortable quarters, so that, with the rarest exception, everyone was comfortably located. The evening was given over to welcome and cordial greetings. The members of the local committees were ubiquitous, and a complaint of any kind had but to be expressed before it was remedied by some brother who had charge of the department complained of, but complaints were so rare that probably they should not be referred to. We would like to give the names of every member of the vast committee of gentlemen and ladies, but have not got them all. Bros. R. W. Bell, M. D., D. H. Moore, J. R. Stratton, J. A. Macfarlane, R. R. Hamilton, Thomas Workman, A. McNeil, as chairmen of committees, did their work so well that it would be hard to suggest in what way a repetition of their work could be improved, and they were each so ably aided by the members of their several committees that everything passed off without a hitch.

"The arrangements for the Cantons were simply perfect. The wings of the large drill shed were filled with elegant bedsteads, each provided with the best of clothing, and here the Cantons and bands were quartered, the officers having a separate and private mess, where General J. C. Underword, who was present, had a separate room, preferring to be with his "boys" to having the parlour and bedroom provided for him at the "Oriental."

"The whole force had their meals in the lower portion of the rink, where three times each day the tables were spread with everything the season produced or the appetite could ask for. These tables and the eating department were presided over in the most complete manner by the following ladies, under the charge of Bro. R. R. Hamilton, Chairman of the Refreshment Committee:—Mrs. S. White, Mrs. R. Nimmo, Mrs. D. H. Moore, Mrs. Wm. Gailey, Mrs. A. McFarlane, Mrs. P. McFarlane, Mrs. J. Stanger, Mrs. J. Gilmour, Mrs. J. Stratton, Mrs. J. K. Stratton, Mrs. Wm. Maud, Mrs. Heim, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Herrington, Mrs. J. McKee, Mrs. R. Hamilton, Miss Tully, Miss Walton, Misses Webber, Miss Gallie, Miss White, Miss Mellville, Miss Reynolds, Miss Galletely, Miss Evans, Miss McMillan, Miss Errett, Miss McLeod, Miss Brown, Miss Weir, Miss Irwin, Miss Sears, Miss Norton. Too much praise cannot be given to these ladies for the trouble, time and expense they expended in entertaining their guests, the Uniformed Branch of the Order, Bro. T. Workman was chairman of this entire department."

FERDINAND'S ADVENTURE.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The course of absolutism pursued by Prince Ferdinand since his arrival in Bulgaria has aroused a majority of the European newspapers to declare that he has undertaken an adventure that has flagrantly violated the treaty of Berlin and outraged public rights. This almost unanimous attitude of the influential press of the continent is of very recent origin, and the fact that many of the papers holding these views are semi-official organs and their articles presumably inspired, augurs ill for the continuance of Prince Ferdinand's career as a ruler. The changed attitude of the German press is due not so much to Russian influence as to a realization of the incontestable justice of the Czar's claims.

THE GOVERNMENT ENDORSED.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The Standard applauds the Government's firmness in the matter of the Land bill, and is surprised at Mr. Chamberlain's attitude. "The only fitting answer to Mr. Parnell's menace," says the Standard, "is that the Government will not fail in its duty to protect life and property in Ireland by the free use of the powers Parliament has conferred upon it."

BURNED AT SEA.

The City of Montreal Burned—Thirteen Persons Lose Their Lives.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 19.—The steamship City of Montreal, of the Inman line, from New York, August 6th, for this port, was burned at sea Her passengers were all saved.

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 19.—The steamship York City arrived here to-day and brought the news of the burning of the City of Montreal. She had on board the crew and passengers of the ill-fated steamer, with the exception of thirteen, who perished. The York city was en route to London from Baltimore.

The City of Montreal sailed from New York on the 6th inst. On account of her inferiority as to speed, compared with other steamers of the line, she was allowed to carry no cabin passengers, and had to confine herself to intermediate and steerage passengers. She was built in 1872, and averaged her trips in a little over ten days. Her length was 419 feet, breadth, 44 feet, depth, 34 feet, and gross tonnage, 4,495 tons. There were no passengers from Montreal on board of her on her last trip.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The destruction of the steamer City of Montreal occurred on the 11th, five days after she left New York. A boat containing six passengers and seven members of the crew is missing. The occupants of this boat are the thirteen persons reported to have perished.

The President, Mr. Henry Taylor, is out of town. Very little loss is anticipated by bill holders.

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, AUGUST, 20, 1887.

GAMBLING IN WHEAT.

In an article describing the steps now being taken by Russia to cheapen and expedite the transport of its surplus wheat to other countries, and especially to England, English Engineering says:—

"The trade has been for several years in a state of extreme depression, and experienced a temporary relief during the existence of the Chicago corner. That event led to the purchase of so much Russian wheat for the supply of Western Europe as to cause a temporary inflation of the market, but the cessation of that stimulus appears to have left things in a worse condition than ever before."

This is a striking and practical instance of one of the evils that we have more than once pointed out must result from the gambling in wheat conducted on such a gigantic scale in the United States. By holding back vast quantities of wheat to make a corner at Chicago, an opportunity is given to other countries to supply with every bushel they can spare the demand in Great Britain. There is thus so much less required from this side of the Atlantic, the stock in hand is unnaturally enlarged, and a downward tendency is given to prices not only for the present, but also for the future crop. This is the immediate evil, one of no slight magnitude, especially as there is a frequent repetition in Chicago of this gambling with the staff of life. The baneful effect also extends to Canada, though fortunately only to a partial extent, as is shown by the fact that prices have ruled at least 10 cents a bushel higher on this side of the St. Lawrence.

But besides this transient depreciation there is another evil result from this unscrupulous gambling that is more serious, because it is more permanent, and effects the farmers of Canada equally with those of the United States. It was the holding back of wheat by Chicago wheat corners that more than anything else led to the enormous development of wheat growing in India and of means of transport for the crop. And now we have Russia confessedly stimulated by the last Chicago corner to make gigantic efforts to increase its wheat exports to Great Britain. Thus we have two formidable competitors encouraged to vie with us in supplying wheat to our best customer after our home market for the most important product of our Canadian farms. Is it strange that under such circumstances the price of wheat is steadily decreasing? Is it gratifying to think that, in order to enrich gamblers, Canadian farmers should have to compete with Russians, who were so lately serfs, and the inhabitants of India, who can live on a few cents a day?

Yet there are some who advise Canada to connect itself as intimately as possible with the country in which this iniquitous system of gambling in wheat prevails, and to jeopardize our home market, the maintenance and increase of which is the best hope of Canadian farmers.

HUDSON'S BAY.

LIEUT. GORDON'S report of his last cruise in Hudson's Bay is attracting considerable attention. In reference to his description, already mentioned by us, of the improvident manner in which New England whalers are ruining the the fishing in those waters, the Montreal Herald remarks that this is done "without a word of objection from the Canadian Government," and then it proceeds to assail the Macdonald Administration. The Herald would have no great difficulty in obtaining access to the Hon. Peter Mitchell, who was for a time Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and was a member of Parliament while his present political friends were in office, so as to learn from this well-informed gentleman, what steps were taken by himself or by the Reform Administration to control the New England whalers who then as now frequented the Bay. The truth is this is not a matter for partisan recrimination. A young country cannot do everything at once, but now that the importance of this matter has been shown all should unite in furthering proper restrictions, and an enforcement of the law both as to poaching and smuggling. We had already called attention to this necessity even before the fuller light thrown upon it by Lieut. Gordon's last report. We have also invited and we again invite attention to the great importance, in the event of any fishery arrangement, that due regulations should be made and enforced to preserve the fisheries from destruction through the use of improvident methods either by our own fishermen or by more reckless foreigners.

RUNNING the round of those Canadian journals that are always eager to belittle their country, is a paragraph falsely accusing the Administration of importing from Belgium the iron work for the new public buildings at Ottawa. The Administration had no more control over the purchase than these unpatriotic editors themselves, for it was a matter entirely in the hands of the contractors. We are informed that the contractor had recourse to Belgium because the Canadian manufacturers were not then prepared to supply the iron frame work within the required time.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

JULY MORTALITY.

Returns From the Twenty-Six Canadian Cities and Towns.

In the twenty-six principal cities and towns of Canada which make monthly returns of deaths to the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa there were in July 2,060. The mortality in July was 33 per cent. higher than in June; or at the rate of 36 per 1,000 of population per annum. The record of deaths for May and June was 1,323 and 1,552, respectively.

In Montreal the mortality was slightly lower in July than in June; whereas in Toronto it was more than double—157 death in June and 327 in July—an increase of over 100 per cent. In Quebec the mortality increased about 80 per cent.; in Hamilton, 75 per cent.; in Ottawa, over 31 per cent.; and in London, 26 per cent.; while in nearly all the other cities and towns there was a large increase.

Diarrhœal diseases caused in the twenty-six cities and towns the appalling total of 668 deaths; or a mortality, from these diseases alone, at the rate of nearly 12 per 1,000 of population per annum—nearly one-third of the total rate from all causes, and more than double the high rate in June.

Not one of the larger cities can reflect on the others. In all almost alike was there a large increase in the mortality from diarrhœas.

The intense and continued heat will of course be blamed for the high mortality; and the heat was doubtless the chief exciting cause; but with absolute cleanliness—pure air and pure water—and proper food there would be no such death-rate or anything near it.

Nor can the blot upon the sanitary condition and system in the cities of Canada be removed by asserting that the mortuary returns are not perfect, as some have asserted. If there are imperfections in the returns, from any of the places they are chiefly imperfections of omission. Comparatively very few of these 2,060 deaths were of those who went, or were taken, into the cities to die. More persons, probably, with the view of saving their life when perhaps near death, were taken to the country and buried there.

As was observed in the Journal last month, should there take place among the domestic animals such a fearful proportionate destruction of life, there would probably be created thereby a good deal of excitement, and the cause or causes would be investigated and prompt measures would be employed to prevent its recurrence.—Canada Health Journal.

CANALS.

The question of the relative value of canals and railways in the transportation of freight has lately been the subject of inquiry. A convention was held at Rochester a short time ago to consider the question of deepening and improving the New York canals. It was shown at that convention that the saving to the consumers at a distance from the water ways by cheap transportation would amply repay all the money necessary to make the improvements. The commercial supremacy of the State of New York was demonstrated to be due to its geographical position on natural water ways and its cana system. The grain and merchandise shipped over these canals, notwithstanding the network of railways, is something enormous and shows that they must always remain an important factor in the transportation of exports and the distribution of imports. The Government of the Dominion shows its wisdom in the construction and improvement of our own canals. An engineer has been sent survey the route of the proposed Sault canal. This link has become a necessity, as the increasing business of the North-west cannot find an outlet by the American canal, which is employed to its utmost capacity. In view of the constantly increasing production of Manitoba and our own Northwest, neither the C.P.R. nor the lake route will be sufficient to convey the grain of that region to the east as cheaply as the interests of the producers and consumers demand. The completion of the Trent Valley canal will become an absolute necessity ere long. It is to be regretted that the sum promised ($300,000) was not put in the estimates at the last session of Parliament, and it would be well if those interested in this important work all along the line would prepare themselves to so impress the Government with the importance of this canal that a sufficient sum will be granted at the next session to push it on to the Georgian Bay.—Barrie Advance.

WARSAW.

PRESENTATION.—On Thursday evening a number of members of St. Paul's Church choir and congregation visited the residence of Mr. Thos. Choat and presented him with a handsome gold headed cane and a pair of slippers, together with an address. Miss McFee read the address in an impressive manner, and Miss Lackie made the presentation. Mr. Choat was to much surprised and moved by the unexpected expression of regard to reply at any length. The company spent a very pleasant evening at Mr. Choat's residence and retired early to their homes. Mr. Choat recently resigned the choir-mastership of St. Paul's Church.

LEG BROKEN.—On Tuesday last a little boy six years of age, son of Mr. J. J. Parker, who lives in Emily, a few miles north of Omemee, had one of his legs broken. The little fellow was playing around a trough where the horses were being watered, and it is supposed he was knocked down and stamped upon by one of the horses, with the above result.—Herald.

Uncle Sam's Ready Money

The gold held by the Treasury in its vaults at Washington weigh 519 tons. If packed into ordinary carts, one ton to each cart, it would make a procession two miles long, allowing twenty feet of space for the movement of each horse and cart. The silver in the same vaults weigh 7,396 tons. Measuring it in carts, as in the case of the gold, it would require the services of 7,396 horses and carts to transport it and would make a procession over twenty-one miles in length.—*N.Y. If the discoverer of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy had shared the senseless prejudices of a certain class of physicians he would have refused to print the good news, to proclaim to the world the glorious tidings that an infallible remedy for that most loathsome disease, catarrh, had been discovered. But he advertised liberally and the result has justified him in the course he pursued. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy never fails. All druggists.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

And so, one and not month or [illegible] when Cranfield rectory, embosomed among its spreading trees, looked the very spot for enacting a pastoral idyl; when the great level lawns at Staines Court were gay with flowers, which there was nobody but the gardeners to admire, and when our own humble domain was, as my mother, who took immense pride in it, declared, "quite a show," it came to pass that two young people were constantly to be seen riding or walking together among the lanes and woods, of whom it might be said that they formed a very handsome couple. Not that our big-boned, broad-shouldered Jim, with his hooked nose, his quiet gray eyes and that large mouth of his, which, upon the smallest provocation, would widen itself into a smile extending from ear to ear, was strictly speaking a handsome man, but perhaps he was near enough being so to justify the above good-natured description, which was uttered by many persons, the Rev. Simeon Turner included. The Rev. Simeon was not ambitious. A son-in-law with 5,000 a year, a high moral character, and a malleable disposition was good enough for him.

I was then about to be called to the bar, and was busy reading law, a study which I thought at the time, and think still, to be among the most repulsive that a moderately intelligent human being can bring his mind to bear upon. One afternoon, while I was sitting with somebody's "Common Law Procedure," and I forget whose "Precedents of Pleadings" open before me, Jim lounged into my den, and, seating himself sideways upon the table, remarked that he was the happiest fellow in Christendom, or something to that effect.

When you know that your friend is absolutely bent upon making a fool of himself, the very stupidest thing in the world is to tell him so. I endeavored to look delighted, and said, "Has she accepted you, then?"

"Well, no," he answered; "she hasn't exactly accepted me, for the reason that I haven't asked her; but I think it will be all right. Harry, old chap, I don't know what I have done to deserve such luck!"

Nor, did I. I am quite sure that he had never done anything to deserve it; but the thing had come upon him, nevertheless; and, after all, one sees many prisoners who hug their chains contentedly. "And why," I inquired, "haven't you proposed to her?"

Jim laughed. "I'm such a duffer!" he replied. "It takes me a long time to get under way, and when I am coming to the point she always manages somehow or other to put me off. Well, it doesn't much matter; there's no hurry, you know."

"None whatever," I agreed, thinking to myself that, so long as the fatal words remained unspoken, there was always just the ghost of a hope left for him.

And then he threw himself into my arm chair, lighted a cigar and began to rhapsodize after a fashion which it would be as tedious to write about as to read.

CHAPTER II.

It was at this somewhat critical juncture that Lord Staines took it into his head to come down to Staines Court, with the avowed intention of remaining there for a considerable time. His arrival, which had been preceded by that of his French cook, his house steward, his groom of the chambers, and heaven only knows how many other domestic functionaries (for his style of living had always been far in excess of that warranted by his income), caused quite a little stir in the vicinity, and set everybody conjecturing as to its causes. What these were was revealed to us the next morning by Lady Mildred, who lost no time in walking over to see my mother.

"Papa has been very unlucky this year," she said, in her gentle, matter of course way. "First of all, his horse lost the Derby by a head, as you know"——

"My dear," interrupted my mother, "I am afraid I know nothing about the Derby, except that it is a race which takes place every spring."

"No, you wouldn't. But papa knows a great deal about it, and even I know something. Premier must have won if he had not been interfered with. It was nobody's fault, but it was poor papa's misfortune; and since then he has been unlucky at Ascot also. So there is to be no yachting this summer, and we are going to remain here quietly and ask hardly anybody to stay with us, and Bracknell is coming down in a few days, so that it will be quite like old times again. But I am afraid he will find it too dull to stay long."

Bracknell at the age of 23 was probably very much what my tutor had anticipated that he would be. He was one of the handsomest young men about London; he was immensely in request with that class who have come to be known in these latter days as "smart people;" his affairs de cœur had been numerous and a trifle ostentatious; he was owner, or part owner, of several horses which had achieved a certain celebrity, and he was pretty deeply in debt. I should be puzzled to say what good qualities he possessed beyond that of pluck, but I do not in the least wonder at his great popularity. Jim, who persisted in regarding him as a bright particular star, was overjoyed on hearing that he proposed to honor our quiet neighborhood with his presence for a time, and it struck me that Hilda's eyes glistened when this cheering intelligence was conveyed to her.

BOBCAYGEON.

OUTRAGE.—On Sunday morning Mr. Cain of Cain Bros., was surprised, on going to his stable to find that during the night, some evil person had entered the building and clipped the hair from his horse's tail and neck, leaving the tail stump, a ridiculous object, like a burnt stick. The harness was also damaged by cutting. Mr. D. Cain has been an active supporter of the Scott Act, and this fact is supposed to have been the cause of the outrage. A suitable reward should be offered for the apprehension of the evil doers.—Independent

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be get rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Missionary Meeting.

The Rev. Mr. Davis, a young man who goes out to India next month as a missionary, will speak at the young men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. room to-night, at 8 o'clock. All young men are invited to attend this, which we are sure will be an interesting meeting.

A Well-Earned Memento.

At Montreal on Monday evening Mr. A. Dawes presented Messrs. C. S. Shaw and A. W. Shearwood, the winners of the challenge cup at the Lake St. Louis Canoe Club regatta on Saturday, with a handsome gold scarf pin each, as a memento of their hard though successful paddle.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

Midland Station Burned.

On Friday afternoon at 3.15 the station house, baggage room and office of the G. T. R. at Midland was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Macklin left at 3.10, and there was then no sign of fire. At Victoria Harbour, six miles away, he received a telegram that the Midland station was in flames, and later at Orillia he learned that it was entirely consumed. It was a substantial new building only erected last year.

Rice Lake.

Parties wanting a pleasure sail cannot do better than take the steamer Golden Eye, which leaves the C.P.R. wharf at 7.30 a. m., and get landed at Jubilee Point, where there are tables for dining on, a spring of water, and the best of fishing. Those wishing to take a sail on the lake, can continue on to Idyl Wild. Meals are provided on the boat, or at Idyl Wild, for 25 cents. This beautiful trip can be enjoyed for 75 cents return tickets. Special arrangements for parties of 20 (twenty). d25

3. S. Britton, Lindsay C. C.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

Looking for a Site.

The Lindsay Post says:—"An effort is being made to if possible induce the Rathbun company of Deseronto to make Lindsay their headquarters for this district. The company are looking for a site on which to build a large wood-working shop and factory and possibly a saw mill. Reeve Smyth for the town council and in absence of Mayor Walters has had some correspondence with the company and has submitted such inducements towards influencing the location of the factory here as are afforded by the local by-law in granting exemptions from taxation. It is probable that at the ensuing meeting of the council for September the matter may come up in tangible shape."

Rifle Practice.

The riflemen who go to Toronto on Monday to participate in the Ontario Rifle Association matches, with some others, had another practice at the butts on Friday afternoon, when the best shooting of the season was done. There was a strong wind blowing at the time. The following scores were made:—

	200	400	500	600	Total
Pte W A Bell	21	29	27	16	93
Lieut W H Hill	25	29	17	17	88

D Belleghem	19	18	20	8	65
J Campbell		20	25	7	52

Messrs. Geo. Fitzgerald and F. Hall, two of the riflemen who go to Toronto, were not present. Messrs. D. Cameron, J. Campbell and J. Pentland did not shoot at the two hundred yard range.

PETERBOROUGH'S VOICE

Liberals and Conservatives Against Commercial Union

RUINOUS TO VITAL INTERESTS

FARMERS AND MANUFACTURERS WOULD GET A STAGGERING BLOW.

Patriotic Sentiments From Leading Men—Canada Able to Take Care of Herself Without Asking Favors of Anybody.

The Detroit News representative, who visited Peterborough a short time ago for the purpose of obtaining the views of leading citizens on the subject of Commercial Union between Canada and the United States, has not confined himself to the truth when misrepresentations would better suit his purpose. For instance he says that Mr. Peter Hamilton said that annexation "would not be particularly distasteful to him." The fact is that Mr. Hamilton said nothing of the kind. He is dead against Commercial Union, one of his principal reasons for opposing the movement being that he sees annexation a little further on if Commercial Union be adopted. "The Detroit News man," Mr. Hamilton said to a REVIEW reporter "came to me to ascertain my views on Commercial Union." It's all a humbug,' I said, when asked about it. 'But said the leading members of your party—he said. I don't care a rap about leading members of my party. This Commercial Union is a lot of political clap trap got up by the Globe and other paper,s.' Continuing Mr. Hamilton said:—"We don't want Commercial Union. We are able to paddle our own canoe, without asking favors from anybody. I would rather live on two meals a day than go begging to a foreign nation. I am for Canada first, Canada last, and Canada all the time. Whatever is best for Canada I will support, but Commercial Union, I think, would be very bad."

Mr. W. H. Wrighton is another whose views have been subjected to contortion by the Detroit News reporter. Mr. Wrighton is credited with saying that he was in favor of Commercial Union, when the fact is that Mr. Wrighton did not say it. He says that if Commercial Union were brought forward as an issue to-morrow he would not vote for it, because it is such a many sided question and beset with so many difficulties that he has not been able to get a clear conception of its results. What Mr. Wrighton said was that he was in favor of better trade intercourse with the United States.

Mr. Wm. HAMILTON on being interviewed said:—"I'm against Commercial Union. I don't see that it would do any good. The great cry is that it would benefit the farmers. Well, the farmers might get a better price for a little barley and hay, but the great bulk of their produce would be sold for less money."

"How would it affect your own business Mr. Hamilton?"

"Well, it would reduce this business all over the country to a jobbing trade unless the manufactures went in for making just one article, as they do on the other side. The large establishments manufacturing specialties would have an advantage which we could not stand against unless we went into direct competition with them. Of course if I thought it would benefit the country as a whole I would be as willing to be sacrificed as anybody, but I don't think it would be a good thing. I take no stock in Commercial Union" said he.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox says that he was called on but saw the reporter only a minute or so while passing from one room to another. "He would prefer" he says "to let the matter drop and have nothing more said about it."

Mr. MELDRUM, of Meldrum, Davidson & Co., millers, is very strongly opposed to the movement. In regard to the farmers he said that if Commercial Union was in operation to-day they would get from five to six cents per bushel less for their wheat. He went on: "I'll tell you, so far as we are concerned it would bring the price down to Chicago level, which is now 68¾ cents. The price of wheat is rated on an export basis, and Chicago has about the same rate as we have."

"In regard to milling, how would competition with the Minneapolis mills affect you?"

"It would simply kill us" said Mr. Meldrum decidedly "and it would not only kill us but it would kill the spring wheat industry and Manitoba wheat also We could grind neither Spring wheat nor Manitoba wheat. The Lower Province trade would be taken completely away from us. As it is we have all we can do to compete against the Minnapolis mills in that market with their paying duties. The only advantage arising from Commercial Union that I can see, and I have paid a good deal of attention to it, would be the opening of the Boston market for fall wheat flour. This would be a small compensation for other losses."

Mr. G. W. MATTHEWS, of Mathews & Co.'s pork packing establishment, says it is quite plain to anyone that if the duty is taken off they will have to cut down prices that much, and consequently farmers would get just that much less for their pork. "It will not pay them to raise pork at that price," he went on, "prices are low enough as they are. The consequence would be that it would not pay us to stop here. If we had to go into direct competition with Chicago pork we would have to move out to the Western States."

Mr. A. W. BRODIE being called on, said in reference to Commercial Union: "We are all right as we are; we don't want any Commercial Union."

"People say that you woollen manufacturers are piling up fortunes under the high tariff," ventured the reporter.

"It's a mistake," said Mr. Brodie, "the home competition is keen enough now to prevent anyone except sharp business men being successful in the trade, and this competion is getting keener all the time. The prices are not even with the tariff, as many suppose, but far below it. Prices are even below what they were before the high tariff was put on. Before the National Policy came into force we were getting 35 cents for an article which we are now glad to sell at 25 cents. Even in the last year prices have taken a great fall. Last year we sold goods at 23 cents which to-day we can only get 16 for."

"How about competition from the United States under Commercial Union?"

"If we had Commercial Union I am convinced that the Canadian manufacturers would soon be shut out. Not, mind you, that we would be unable to compete against them in a legitimate trade. I think we can. But if we had Commercial Union the immense concerns employing thousands of hands would use Canada as a slaughter market. Instead of holding their great auction sales in New York, they would send their surplus stuff over to Canada and shut us out."

Mr. STEVENSON is absent from town but that he is grossly represented is certain. In reply to the circular asking members of the Toronto Board of Trade, whether they were for or against Commercial Union, he sent the answer that he was opposed to it.

Mr. CLUXTON is also out of town and was when the imaginative Detroit reporter was on the war path.

Mr. ULLYOTT was called upon, but was not at his office. The Detroit News sets him down as an annexationist, but, seeing that it has misrepresented other people, Mr. Ullyott is as likely as not to be misrepresented also.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

Inland Revenue.

The Toronto World's Ottawa correspondence contains the following:—"An order-in-council has been passed abolishing the Inland Revenue Division of Cobourg, and declaring that for excise purposes the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Durham and Northumberland shall be constituted the Inland Revenue District of Peterborough, it being deemed advisable to amalgamate the present divisions of Cobourg and Peterborough in consequence of the large decrease in the excise business in the Cobourg Division, such decrease being mainly attributable to the coming into force of the Scott Act in the Counties of Durham and Northumberland, which comprised the division."

P. A. A. A. SPORTS.

Races and Tug-of-War in the Ashburnham Grounds.

The Amateur Athletic Association held the second of their series of evening sports in their grounds, Ashburnham, on Friday evening. There were quite a number present, and the band was in attendance.

Dr. Burnham, Mr. J. Morris and Mr. A. St. A. Smith took charge of the sports.

There were three entries for the 100 yard race, which was won by A. Moore.

The boot race was the next event. A crowd of boys entered. They were started and ran to a pile of boots, picked out their own, put them on and ran back. Master W. Brundrette was declared the winner.

The quarter mile race was well contested between three. A. Moore won, closely pressed by J. Begley.

The sack race caused great laughter, especially as the contents of a sack occasionally tumbled over while the race was in progress. D. Davidson won.

The three legged race was won by Moore and Thomas, who came in with a slight lead.

The feature of the evening was the tug-of-war between the P. A. A. A. and the Fire Brigade. The first pull was long and steady, but the Brigade boys gradually pulled the others over. The other two pulls were short and hurried; one won by the Association team and one by the Brigade.

THE LEAGUE'S SUPPRESSION.

What the Irish Leaders say of the Action of the Government.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The effect of the proclamation of the National League will be to make the association illegal and to bring it under operation of the Crimes Act. By that act persons belonging to any association, declared to be illegal, can be brought before a magistrate, tried without a jury and imprisoned for any period not exceeding six months.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—In an interview, Mr. Wm. O'Brien, M. P., editor of United Ireland, said: "The proclamation of the National League as it stands at present will not impede the work of the League, and I regard it as a better indication of the hopeless position of the Government than even the Parliamentary election at Northwich. It is significant that the League is not proclaimed under the sections of the Coercion Act relating to crime or association with crime, and the Government have placed themselves by the action they have taken in this position. If they do nothing further they will be laughed at, while, if they pursue an aggressive policy they will antagonize public opinion in Great Britain. Whatever they may do they are powerless, because the League means the Irish people."

Mr. Thomas Sexton, M. P., said:—"The League is proclaimed under clauses which the Government would not allow to be discussed when the bill was under consideration in the House of Commons, and their action will have the effect of clarifying the political atmosphere. Lord Hartington will probably throw his lot with the Conservatives and Mr. Chamberlain may return to the Liberal party. The Government will be answerable for destroying the League's power of restraint over the people if it should be suppressed. Ireland will receive the proclamation with contempt, followed by a feeling of hope for the future."

Mr. Timothy Harrington, M.P., Secretary of the National League, said: "The action of the Government is an idle display. If they go further our men will still continue to work."

John Dillon, M.P., said: "The proclamation will not move the League a hair's breadth."

Mr. Gladstone will on Thursday move an address denouncing the proclamation.

The Daily News says: "The proclamation of the League will have little effect except that they will not call themselves members of the League. The same men will meet for discussion and to advise their neighbors. Whatever is healthy and good in the League will be able to work on as before. We hope, and firmly believe, that the natural and just discontent in Ireland will not seek relief in secret conspiracy."

The Post fully approves the proclamation of the League.

The Times defends the Government's action. It deplores the secession of Mr. Russell from the union party, and expresses the hope that at Birmingham to-night, Mr. Chamberlain will deny that he has seceded.

The Standard says:—"It is necessary that the Irish be made to know who is master, the league or the law. The fight has hitherto been fought on equal terms. It is now time for this to end, and the combatants to resume their proper places as criminals on the one hand and officers of justice on the other." The Standard expresses the belief that Lord Hartington and his followers will support the Government's action in proclaiming the League.

DUBLIN, Aug. 20.—All of the important documents of the National League have been removed from the League's headquarters here to a place of safety.

In the House of Commons, last night, Mr. Balfour said that until the Viceroy issued an order regarding a particular district, the proclamation of the National League would have no force.

Strike Declared Off.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—The carpenters' strike was declared formally off this morning. The strikers met in the temperance hall and after discussing the action of the federated trades last night passed a resolution to the above effect, the men to endeavor to get a minimun wage of 25 cents per hour and nine hours per day. The management of the strike has been bungled, the executive committee having made some grave errors which alienated the sympathy of the other trades. The strike has lasted just ten weeks and affected 500 men.

CROPS IN ONTARIO.

Drought and Extreme Heat Render the Yield Light.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—The Ontario Bureau of Industries has issued a digest of reports made on the 12th inst. by nearly 600 correspondents on the year's crops and harvest, and the yield of the principal crops computed from their estimates. Fall wheat has suffered from a succession of reverses extending all through the growing season. Where threshing has been reported the yield runs generally from ten to eighteen bushels per acre, the average being about sixteen bushels, or five bushels less than the average of the past five years. Generally the yield will probably not exceed two-thirds of an average crop, the estimate being 14,435,505 bushels, against 20,635,843 for the average. Spring wheat is almost a total failure in Western Ontario, and only a few districts in the east report even a fair crop. The estimated yield is 4,500,000 less than the average of the five years, 1882-6. Owing to the prolonged heat and drought barley was ready for cutting almost as soon as fall wheat. This early maturing had its effect on the berry, which is reported as rather small and likely to prove two or three pounds light in the bushel. The estimated total yield is 17,436,322 bushels, being 2,136,000 bushels less than the average of the five years, 1882-6.

Although the breadth in crop is 50,000 acres more, the estimated yield of oats is only 30 bushels per acre, whereas the average yield of the past five years was 37 bushels. The total estimate is 8,000,000 less than the yield of last year and 5,000,000 less than the average. The estimated yield of the rye crop does not reach one-half the average of the past five years. The estimated yield of the pea crop is nearly the same as the average of the five years, 1882-6 and 3,000,000 bushels less than last year. Indian corn will be a short crop, and fodder corn is also very light. As a rule, the yield of potatoes will be small. Early rains may yet make an average crop of turnips, mangled wurtzels and carrots, but otherwise these roots must be a decided failure. It appears probable that owing to the increased acreage the hay crop will be little below the average. The clover seed crop will prove as nearly as possible a total failure and much as this year's seeding will amount to nothing.

SPEECH BY CHAMBERLAIN.

Regrets the League Proclamation—An Independent Government Supporter.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain made a speech at Birmingham to-night. He dilated upon the waste of the greater part of the session by the obstruction to the Crimes Bill and said:

"This legislation has been, in my judgment, grossly misrepresented. I regret that such a bill is necessary for any part of the kingdom, but the act was, in my judgment, intended to protect our Irish fellow-subjects. I do not believe it has given a moment's apprehension to any loyal subject or Irishman who does not desire outrage or is not willing to see it. (Applause.) Our experience, so far as it has gone justifies the Government policy, which we supported. I admit that crime and outrage are less than for many years past. But why is this? It is because those who stimulated disorder and anarchy and winked at outrage have discovered that the law is stronger, and that future law breakers must pay the penalty of their misdeeds. I regret that the Government have proclaimed the League. I will not blame the Government severely, but think they were mistaken, though I and others who acted with me are precluded from condemning the proclamation in strong language. (Cheers.) When the Government asked for these powers we agreed to give them, and now if they consider it absolutely necessary to use them that doubtless is the last resource, but it is for their discretion, not ours. As a matter of principle, I think it right for the Government to have these powers in order to hold them in reserve, but, as a matter of policy, I regret that the Government has thought it necessary to use them at the present time."

Mr. Chamberlain continued: "The Government is responsible, not we. If they think it imperative to use the powers conferred upon them by the Crimes Act, I do not blame them, I admit that they were justified in disregarding our advice and taking the course which they deemed it their duty to take, but I claim also for myself and my colleagues that we shall continue to occupy the attitude we have hitherto adopted — independent friends of the Government. When we differ, as now, we shall express our differences in the usual way—by our votes in the House of Commons. I do not know whether or not you heard the report that I had resigned my connection with the dissident party. (Laughter.) The statement is entirely unauthorized and absolutely without a shadow of foundation. (Cheers.) It is true that I differ from the Government on this one point, but I am prepared to support their general policy so far as, in my judgment, in tends to maintain the union. I have seen no reason why any dissident should desert his party or his leader, the Marquis of Hartington, who up to the present time has led us with conspicuous ability and loyalty."

Not a Sham Battle.

ENFIELD, Ill., Aug. 20.—This morning, at the reunion of the 87th Illinois veterans, during the sham battle, a cannon was prematurely discharged, blowing off James Crockett's right arm. An instant later another cannon discharged prematurely, and stretched five bleeding victims on the ground. Gabe Sullenger had both arms blown off and will probably die. The others are badly injured but will survive.

Manitoba's Wheat Harvest.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 20.—It is estimated that by to-night three-fourths of the wheat will be harvested. The balance is so well ripened that only a severe frost could hurt it. Threshing will begin in some parts next week. The yield is phenomenal all over the province.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Mr. Parnell in an interview last evening said the action of the Government in proclaiming the National League was a gratuitous insult to the Irish, considering the present condition of Ireland. Mr. Parnell postponed his departure for Dublin to attend the debate in the House of Commons.

At Klin the sun was also obscured, but an aged professor named Mendelcieff made a balloon ascension so as to get above the clouds and take an observation. THE BANK OF LONDON.

Its Suspension Still the Sensation in Commercial Cities.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 20.—The suspension of the Bank of London is still the sensation in commercial circles. About a month ago quite a "run" was made on the bank, public confidence being restored by the statement that the Bank of Montreal had come to its assistance. The arrangement for taking over the business between it and the Bank of Toronto was not consummated. On Tuesday morning last Vice-president Leys and one of the Bank of London directors left for Toronto to complete the transfer. When Toronto was reached, the President, Henry Taylor, could not be found. He was waited for, but did not turn up, and accordingly the bank suspended. It created a sensation throughout the city here. Quite a number of its bills are in circulation. Taylor and his family are at Alexandria Bay, it is said, and will not return. He was well known as a keen financier. All kinds of rumours are afloat concerning his action. It is stated that he owes the Bank of Toronto a large sum. About the time of the American war he opened a broker's office here and dabbled in American silver, making money quickly. He finally became a prominent stockholder in many monetary concerns here, and many of these will now be crippled. It is asserted he took $20,000 with him. The Bennett Furnishing company, of which he was president, assigned yesterday.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—The stoppage of the Bank of London was a surprise here, as it was thought arrangements had been completed by the Bank of Toronto to take it over. It is now thought that the investigations showed it to be a financial wreck.

Books, Magazines, and all kinds of printed work bound promptly and neatly.

The Daily Review

MONDAY, AUGUST, 22, 1887.

IS IT ANNEXATION?

THE more timid advocates of Commercial Union protest that it is not synonymous with Annexation.

Well, the two things are not absolutely identical, but the acceptance of the one is equivalent to the acceptance of the other, which must necessarily follow. Let us look into the facts.

It is taken necessarily for granted that duties are to be maintained against British goods, for that is the very essence of the movement. Is it likely that our fellow-subjects, who grudgingly concede to us the right to tax their manufactures to the same extent as those brought from other countries, would carry their complaisance so far as to consent to a discrimination against them in favor of foreigners—to a plan devised to shut out all British goods as far as possible while replacing them with free importations from a foreign country? Could the people of Great Britain be expected to say anything but that we had better ally ourselves politically with our chosen commercial allies, rather than with the people we are treating as aliens?

But even if the Mother Country submitted to such discriminating hostility there would still remain the question of our customs duties on foreign goods other than those from the United States. In view of the exaction of these duties the Imperial authorities would either have to veto our legislation or to annul its whole system of commercial treaties with other nations. Honest regard for obligations would require this, for the British Empire has bound herself, by "the most favored nation" clauses, to admit the goods of various foreign countries into all its dominions on terms no less favorable than those accorded to any other foreign nation. All these treaties would have to be rescinded, unless indeed the Mother Country, rather than face such widespread, troublesome and even dangerous complications, should say to Canada "go in peace to your new friends?"

Some careless thinkers or disingenuous schemers say: "Well, there would remain for us Independence." Can anyone who really considers the matter suppose that our independence would be maintained for twelve months under such circumstances. We would be at the side of a nation immensely more powerful and populous, and not very scrupulous in using its power, with our great natural ally alienated and indifferent, if not hostile. We would have given to the United States the framing of our customs tariff and of our excise, with an inevitable right to interfere as to our means of communication and other closely connected questions. We would have given to them the means of determining our revenue, unless we resorted to direct taxation. We would be their junior partner in regard to all the more important concerns of nations. By physical force, by moral coercion, or by persuasion and the natural drift under such circumstances, our independence must inevitably be sacrificed.

We may add that every United States journal that we have seen, with the exception of those which ridicule the whole agitation, declares more or less plainly that we can have no Commercial Union without political annexation.

It is well that those who are being deluded by smooth words and falsified figures should look in the face the truth that they are being asked to cut themselves adrift from the rest of the British Empire and to unite themselves to the United States.

PUBLIC FORESTS.

THE peremptory refusal of the Mercier Administration to reconsider the increased rental demanded from limit owners, indicates a persistence in a ruinous policy which was hardly to have been expected in a Province whose leading men, notably Mr. Joly, held sounder views respecting the forest wealth of the country, than were prevalent in other parts of the Dominion.

By the very great increase in the yearly rental a resistless pressure is put upon the lumbermen to strip portions of their limits as rapidly as possible, sacrificing even the smallest saleable timber, and giving up the devastated area to save further payments. No more effectual step could have been taken for hastening the not distant day when the forest will be a dream of the past. Any modification of the laws and regulations concerning timbered lands should have been made with the view of furthering conomy of this great resource, the conservancy of the forests, and the nursing of young timber till fit for the axe. A scientific system of forestry, such as exists in every civilized community but our own and the United States, is apparently not to be hoped for, but at least the evil of our wasteful policy need not be intensified by accelerating the rate of distruction.

Mr. Mercier and his colleagues appear to be actuated by two motives, both of them far from praiseworthy. They would punish the lumbermen for their political sin of belonging, as most of them do, to the Conservative party. They would fill the treasury for the time to have funds to distribute to their followers, careless that by so doing they are drying up the source for the future, since they well know that they cannot long maintain the usurped authority which they seized by their agitation for immunity for Riel's crimes.

Meanwhile the forests will be devastated.

THE G. T. R. AND THE NORTH-WEST.

The Line Creeping Towards Winnipeg—A Rival for the C. P. R.

It is rumored in railway circles that the Grand Trunk Railway will form a connection next year with the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic R. R. By this the G. T. R. will obtain an entrance to Duluth and Winnipeg over the projected Red River Valley railway, which, as alleged by its promoters, will be running during the autumn. The Duluth and Manitoba line will afford the connecting link. The Grand Trunk, by forming an alliance with the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Northern Pacific, and the new Manitoba line, will have placed itself in the position of competing with its great rival, the Canadian Pacific Railway. A gentleman conversant with railway matters expresses the opinion that before a year the Grand Trunk will be in Winnipeg. The C. P. R. at present connects with Duluth through the system of communication managed by Messrs. Hill. It is thought probable the C. P. R. may find it convenient to obtain a special line of communication with Duluth, which is increasing rapidly in importance as a port.—Montreal Star.

A GREAT DISCOVERY

A Charleston Priest Re-discovers the Art of Making Greek Fire.

A Tuscola, Ill., despatch says: The young Catholic priest and scientist, of Charleston, Ill., recently created a lieutenant in the French army for valuable discoveries in the art of making and using a powerful explosive for war purposes, claims to have made a more valuable discovery, or rather a re-discovery. He says that he has, by continued test and experiments, fathomed the art of making Greek fire, which was lost in the dark ages, about 1250, when gunpowder came into use, and he thinks his invention quite an achievement of science. The compound consists of naphtha and two other ingredients, and its power of destruction is something marvellous. It will so corrode iron as to dissolve it, while water, instead of extinguishing it, will only increase its power. The inventor will soon give the press an article on the subject of his great discovery.

Unfair Proceedings.

The notions of the Commercial Union gentry are pretty well exposed by the skill of their advocates in shunning controversy. At Winnipeg, the other day, Prof. Goldwin Smith spoke in favor of the proposition, but a gentleman who desired to speak in opposition was denied a hearing. At the meeting of the Wentworth farmers' union, Mr. Valancey Fuller and Mr. Shaw kept jumping up and used up so much time that some who desired to speak on the other side grew weary and went away. The like tactics were resorted on at other meetings. A dozen men favorable to Commercial Union are drummed up and they pass the cut-and-dried resolutions; then announcement is made that "the farmers" of such and such a county have pronounced in favor of Commercial Union. A Detroit reporter calls on a man of some prominence and asks him a question or two, then writes a wholly fanciful sketch of a conversation which never took place, attributing opinions to the Canadian which he never expressed and which he does not hold. At least three out of the four gentlemen whose alleged opinions have been reported in the Detroit Evening News have been misreported. The Commercial Union papers report the false statement, but refuse to print the Canadian's denial. The Toronto Mail printed a long letter from Mr. Shaw attacking Mr. Frederick Nicholls, but it refused to print Mr. Nicholls' reply. It is pretty evident that a cause is in a bad way whose champions shun open controversy and resort to expedients to get a one-sided hearing.—Hamilton Spectator.

An Extraordinary Wave.

An English paper describes a wave of extraordinary dimensions encountered by the Cunarder Umbria in her trip across the Atlantic at the end of july. So high was the wave that the officer on the bridge, forty feet above the sea-line, was unable to see over it, and when it struck the vessel it extinguished the white light on the foremast, sixty feet above the level of the water. An eye-witness decribes the wave as looking "like a blackmass of water with with white waves on the top." It seemed to those on the vessel to tower above her as a solid pier towers above "a small boat alongside." When the wave struck the Umbria she shivered from stem to stern, and "the combing of the wave" fell with the weight of tons of water on the decks, making havoc of all a ound, splintering the wood into fragments, and twisting the iron stanchions. A weaker vessel would probably have been swamped, and the incident may explain the loss of ships at sea of which no tidings are ever received.—Ex.

A DISSOLUTION URGED.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette vigorously attacks the Government for adopting Lord Cadogan's amendment to the Land Bill relating to town parks. The Gazette urges the Liberals to revolt against the Government's Irish policy in the Commons; to obstruct the passage of supply measures, and thus force a dissolution.

E. J. HARTLEY

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

We all—that is, the Turners, Jim and myself—were invited to dine at Staines Court on the evening of his arrival; and I declare that we had not been seated at the table for five minutes before it was perfectly clear to me that Miss Hilda intended to make him her captive. What put this beyond a doubt was the obstinacy with which she declined to have anything to say to him. Lord Staines, who took her into dinner, was obviously depressed and preoccupied when we sat down; but Hilda put forth all her very considerable powers of pleasing, and by the time that the fish was removed she had contrived to put her neighbor in the best of good spirits. No man was more truly appreciative of feminine beauty and wit than Lord Staines. Meanwhile Bracknell, who had old Turner on his right hand, speedily realized that he had a very charming person on his left; and it was not a little amusing to see the look of blank astonishment which overspread his features when, after repeated attempts to attract Hilda's notice, it dawned upon him that she really preferred his father's conversation to his own. I suppose that never before in his life had he known a charming person display such extraordinary taste. In vain he brought his ingenuous arts to bear upon her and forced her to look round while he shot languishing glances full into her eyes. The glances failed to arouse any response; she gave him politely and plainly to understand that his interruptions were unwelcome, answered him with a few monosyllables or a faint smile, and immediately turned away to resume her remarks to Lord Staines, who was evidently much tickled by the discomfiture of his heir apparent.

Jim all this time was very pleasantly engaged in talking over by-gone days with Lady Mildred, only every now and again his eyes wandered to Hilda and rested upon her with a ridiculous look of pride and affection. Doubtless he was thinking how good it was of her to take so much trouble to amuse the old gentleman at the head of the table. As for the Rev. Simeon and myself, we ate our dinner, which was an excellent one, and nobody took the smallest notice of us.

Later in the evening, when we assembled in the drawing room, Lord Staines became grave and silent once more, black Care having, I presume, recalled herself to his memory. Very soon he murmured some excuse and slipped away—perhaps to try and establish a balance between revenue and expenditure in his study. Lady Mildred had some photographs to show to Jim, who may or may not have been as interested in them as he professed to be; Mr. Turner, for lack of a more worthy listener, was fain to favor me with his views upon the subject of secular education; and while he was expounding these at some length, I saw exactly what I had expected to see. Bracknell seated himself upon a sofa beside Hilda, who put up her fan and received him with a side glance which was half supercilious, half encouraging. He began to address her in a low tone of remonstrance. Presumably he was begging to be informed why she had treated him with such marked coolness, for presently I heard her reply, laughing slightly, "I wouldn't press that point if I were you, Lord Bracknell. If you do, perhaps I may ask for your versions of certain stories that I heard about you in London."

"What stories?" he returned, eagerly. "Depend upon it, there wasn't a word of truth in them. Surely you don't believe all you are told?" And so forth, and so forth.

The remainder of the colloquy was carried on in such subdued accents that the eloquence of the Rev. Simeon, who was standing very close to me and emphasizing his periods by repeated taps upon my shirt front with his forefinger, drowned it. But, indeed, I was not curious to hear more. How many times, I wonder, has that self same dialogue been conducted in identical terms since the world began, and how many times will it be repeated before the human race becomes extinct? Generally, I think, about five to ten minutes elapse before the point is reached when the lady invites unreserved confession as the preliminary to possible absolution; and then the man tells her—well, I suppose he sometimes tells her the truth, though I should imagine that that is a rare case. What Bracknell said to Hilda, after they had moved away slowly toward the open French window, through which they presently vanished, I have no idea, nor can it be of the smallest consequence. What I do know is that they were absent for the best part of an hour, and that long before the expiration of that time Jim had grown fidgety, Lady Mildred was looking anxious, Mr. Turner had fallen sound asleep, and this humble chronicler was well nigh worn out with desperate efforts to sustain a conversation which flickered and died the moment it was left alone.

At length Lord Staines returned. He had been making hay with his hair, from which I concluded that he had failed to discover any arithmetical process by which the greater can be substracted from the less, and unless I greatly misjudged him, his inward ejaculation on seeing us was, "What! not gone yet?" But he was far too polite to utter any words to that effect, and he discoursed amiably until Bracknell and Hilda reappeared, which they did without the least symptom of embarrassment on either side. Then old Turner woke up suddenly, rubbed his hands, and said that they had had a delightful evening, but that they really mustn't keep the carriage waiting any longer; whereupon we all wished one another good night with alacrity, and the party broke up.

Jim's dog cart was at the door, and he had promised to give me a lift home; but as I was putting on my overcoat in the hall he followed me and said: "Do you mind waiting a quarter of an hour, Harry? I should like to smoke a cigar with Bracknell before we go."

Of course I replied that I didn't mind at all, and accordingly we adjourned to the smoking room, whither Lord Staines did not accompany us. I don't think I have ever met any one quite so straightforward as Jim. It never occurred to him to approach any subject by a little introductory beating about the bush, as almost all of us do. If he had anything to say to you, you might be quite certain that he would say every word of it, and lose no time about doing so either. His cigar was hardly alight before he had explained matters to Bracknell in the most unequivocal language.

"Look here, Bracknell, old chap," said he, "I don't want you to flirt with Hilda Turner. We are all friends here, so I don't mind telling you that I mean to ask her to be my wife, though I'd rather you didn't speak about it to any one else just yet."

Something in this announcement seemed to tickle Bracknell amazingly; for his mirth was so immoderate and so prolonged that Jim felt constrained at last to add: "It isn't a joke."

"Oh, yes it is, my dear boy," returned the other, still laughing; "it's a first rate joke, if you could only see it. Be advised by me, Jim, and drop that young woman like a hot potato. She's not the wife for you."

"That's as may be," rejoined Jim, quietly; "but at all events she is not the wife for you."

"I should rather think she wasn't. The wife for me is a lady with £50,000 of her own. Of course it would be desirable that she should have more, but £50,000 is the irreducible minimum; the governor has just been telling me so. By the way, do you think the fair Hilda is going to accept you?"

Jim, with a becoming blush, admitted that he was sanguine.

"Well, she may. Five thousand a year is not to be sneezed at in these hard times, and I suppose you're worth all that; aren't you?"

Jim got up and leaned with his back against the mantelpiece. "Do you know, Bracknell," said he, "I don't like that way of talking. I am sure you have no intention of hurting my feelings; but, you see, it isn't pleasant to me to hear Hilda spoken of"—

"As if she resembled other women? All right, Jim; I'll spare your feelings for the future, and I don't think I'll marry Miss Turner, thank you. I suppose I may sometimes speak to her though?"

"Of course you may," replied Jim, quite gravely. "If you tell me that you won't flirt with her, that's all I want. Only, don't you see what I mean? If you began to pay attention to Hilda, or to any other woman, what possible chance could I have? It stands to reason that I should have none. I'm neither good looking nor —nor anything. Why, I wouldn't even venture to pit myself against Harry Maynard!"

And with this homage to his friend's irresistible attraction and incidental acknowledgment of my own, Jim resumed his seat.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

No. 10.

The drill instructions for Canton Peterborough, No. 10, the ritual and other equipment, has arrived. The first meeting will be held on Wednesday night.

Thursday Afternoon Excursion.

Steamer Golden Eye will run her Thursday excursion to Jubilee Point, leaving the wharf at 1 p.m., returning at 9 p.m. Return tickets, 50 cents; to Fauvher's 25 cents. CAPT. MCDONALD. 2d44

Block N, Ashburnham,

divided into lots, is to be sold by auction on 6th Sept. There is a good deal of interest in this sale, as Ashburnham property has been largely locked up and out of reach of people of moderate means. Give the lands for sale at fair prices and Ashburnham will certainly grow. 2d44

A Big Day.

Saturday was a big day at Idyl Wild. The employees of the Crossen Car Works held their outing there on that day and between 600 and 700 people went to the island. All sorts of games were represented on the programme of sports, and an exceedingly enjoyable day was spent.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

A Leagal Question.

Mr. "Jim" English, engineer of the Silsby, was very much agitated this forenoon when he heard that the house being moved along Charlotte street was moving down his shade trees. He went and inspected the destruction for himself and then interviewed his lawyer. There was only two ways, he found, of coming at the house-owners. He could not have them up for malicious injury to property, because there was no malice shown. But he could either take out an injunction and stop them or sue them for damages. He says he's going to sue.

Fire Alarm.

On Saturday afternoon a fire alarm was sounded for No. 4 Ward. The hose and hook and ladder waggons left the station and proceeded to No. 4 Ward, but no fire was visible. For the time the firemen thought someone had been playing a trick on them by bringing them out on a fool's errand. It was found, however, that there had really been a fire in No. 2 Ward, and the person ringing the alarm at the box on the corner of Downie and Simcoe streets had rung the wrong signal. People should be very careful about this. The directions are plainly set forth on the box and should be strictly adhered to. The fire occurred in a shed near Mr. T. E. Boddy's residence. It was easily extinguished.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

At Port Perry.

The Port Perry Observer says:—"The whole community will learn with pleasure that the extensive and highly respected firm of Thomas Dolan & Co., of Peterborough, have leased Mrs. Allison's fine brick store on Queen street, where they will go extensively into the Dry Goods business. From the standing of the firm, being direct importers they will prove a great acquisition to the business of our thriving town. Our respected townsman Mr. F. McRae is to occupy a prominent position in the store. As a salesman Mr. McRae is deservedly popular. The new store will be open for inspection on September 1st. Much success to the enterprise." Messrs. Dolan & Co. will, of course, continue their business here as usual.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

J. STEVENSON'S DENIAL

HE CONTRADICTS THE DETROIT NEWS' REPORT OF HIS VIEWS

On the Subject of Commercial Union—The Opinions of Other Leading Citizens—How it Would Effect Merchants.

As intimated in the REVIEW of Saturday Mr. Jas. Stevenson was grossly misrepresented by the Detroit News regarding the expression of his opinion on Commercial Union. Mr. Stevenson says that the representative came to his office and at the time he thought the visitor was one of the Oddfellows. Said the representative:—"You are Mr. Stevenson, are you not?"

"Yes," I replied.

"Are you in favor of Commercial Union?"

"I am in favour of any union that will do the country good."

"But" said he "are you in favor of Commercial Union?"

"There's no use talking about it," I said, "we have an offer for reciprocity waiting for the States to accept, and if they don't accept that they won't give us Commercial Union."

This is about all that took place, Mr. Stevenson says. He distinctly asserts that he did not say he was in favor of Commercial Union. He voted against Commercial Union on the Toronto Board of Trade and has no reason to change his opinion since that time.

Mr. BROOKS, Manager of the Lock Company's Works, being interviewed said: "I am decidedly against Commercial Union. We can't compete with the States. The freight rates are against us and the large firms over there would take a large portion of our trade from us. It would without doubt damage us very seriously. The great cry," continued Mr. Brooks, "is that Commercial Union would make Canada prosperous. Why doesn't trading with the rest of the States make Maine, and New Hampshire and Vermont prosperous? Vermont hasn't increased a thousand in population in the last ten years. Ontario is far more prosperous to-day than any of these States."

Mr. R. FAIR, as an importer of English and French dress goods, says it is clear that if our tariff be raised to that of the United States the consumer will have to pay more for his goods. Mr. Fair is opposed to Commercial Union, however, on other grounds. "I cannot see," he says, "but that it will do the merchants a great deal of harm. There is a possibility of its being of direct damage. A large jobbing house might establish itself in Peterborough, which is the centre of a rich district. But it is the indirect harm that merchants need be alarmed at. The town of Peterborough robbed of half its factories would certainly go down, and the farmers would lose the excellent home market for their perishable produce which they now enjoy at Peterborough. This means to us merchants a loss of trade both from farmers and manufacturers."

Mr. J. H. LONG, Chairman of the Peterborough branch of the Imperial Federation League, on being interviewed said:—

I am opposed to Commercial Union. Apart from the fact that under it Canada would be made "a slaughter market" for American goods until our manufacturers had been killed off—after which prices would go up to their former level, there are many objections to the scheme. We should have a higher tariff against the outside world than we now have. Our foreign trade, our ocean shipping, and our through railway traffic on the great East and West lines, must therefore decline. This has been exemplified in the United States, where a high tariff has greatly injured American shipping and trade with foreign lands. We should be at the mercy of the Americans in the regulation of our customs and excise, and, as we should be greatly in the minority, our commercial independence would be sacrificed. That is, we should revert to a position similar to that which we occupied when Great Britain controlled our trade regulations. The only way in which we could make our influence felt at all would be by having representatives at Washington, otherwise there would be "taxation without representation," to resist which the Americans fought in 1776. This would be virtual Annexation. At any rate, our interests would all tend toward Washington, and not toward London or Ottawa. Commercial Union would be most unfair and ungenerous towards Great Britain and the other ports of the Empire, and would undoubtedly bring about Annexation. How could it be otherwise. Great Britain would be obliged to change all her treaties with foreign powers, by reason of the "favored nation clause." Our traders in foreign ports, moreover, would appeal to American consuls to enforce our, i. e., American, customs laws against the world (including Great Britain). They could not do this and remain British subjects. There are dozens of other objections. But the assumptions upon which Commercial Union is based are utterly fallacious. Our people are not worse off than Americans; in the main they are better off. The Americans do want Annexation; nine out of ten believe that Canada ought of right to be under the Stars and Stripes. The Americans would not treat us fairly. From the Revolution down to the present they have tried to take advantage of us. What about the Retaliatory Bill, the Behring Sea seizures, the Fisheries Question—all matters of to-day? The farmers would not be benefitted. On the average they would not get higher prices. For the sake of consistency, moreover, they ought not to say anything about selling barley, after having voted for prohibition. Lastly, the American trade with Canada is not so large as is British trade. distrust the men at the head of the movement. Mr. Butterworth and Mr. Hitt are Americans; Mr. Valancey Fuller wants to sell his Jersey cattle; Mr. Wiman is a monopolist and speculator. As for Mr. Goldwin Smith, he is an avowed annexationist, and, in my opinion, an untruthful and disbonorable man. An honorable man acknowledges his errors and does not persistently attack the memory of dead men, as did Goldwin Smith the memory of the late Hon. George Brown and Lord Beaconsfield. Moreover, in three cases out of five, Mr. Smith is mistaken, and in the other two he changes his mind. Let us get reciprocity in natural products if we can; and I think we can if we wait and act the manly part. If otherwise we want a change, let us have free trade with all the world, or—what is far better—an Inter-imperial Customs Union, whereby, while retaining our local tariffs, we shall obtain a market far larger and more expansive than that of the United States.

Mr. MCFARLANE WILSON, of China Hall, is in favor of Commercial Union. He gave his views to the REVIEW reporter as follows:—"I am in favor of Commercial Union. I think it would benefit the whole country. It would certainly benefit the consumers of the goods sold by me. Take the lines of fruit jars and lamp glasses: there are three firms in this country that make them. They join together and keep prices at just such a place as to prevent us using anything but Canadian goods. This is what I call plundering the people. If there were Commercial Union the prices would go down before the American competition."

"Would not the high tariff which would be put on make the German goods you import more costly?"

"It would, no doubt, but the percentage of German goods we use is not nearly so large as that which we would use of American goods provided the tarif were taken off."

CRICKET.

Peterborough and Lakefield—The Home Team Wins.

A cricket match between the Peterborough and Lakefield clubs was played on Saturday on the P. A. A. A. grounds and resulted in a victory for the home team by an innings and 57 runs. For Peterborough Rutherford, Ray and Hatton played well for their scores, Rutherford topping 100. For Lakefield Brown, Strickland, Cooper and Martin displayed good form, the last named, who is a very young player, giving great promise of future excellence, both with the bat and ball. E. Stratton and H. Ray were the most successful bowlers for Peterborough, Cooper and Martin taking the lead for Lakefield. The following is the score:—

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The eclipse of the sun yesterday was observed for a few minutes at sunrise at Dartmoor and Torquay. The sky was obscured by clouds at Paris and Vienna. At the latter place thousands were waiting to make observations. Prof. Vogel, of the Belgian expedition, stationed at Jurjewitze, on the Volga, telegraphs that the sky was overcast, but that the solar protuberances and chromosphere were observed, although the corona was invisible. The Russian observers were more successful, their various stations obtaining numerous drawings and photographs of the corona.

CHAMBERLAIN'S ATTITUDE.

Discussion of the Government's Action to be Postponed.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The Daily News, commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's speech, says: "Mr. Chamberlain must choose whether to be a Liberal or a Coercionist. We rejoice to see him moving in the right direction."

The Post says: "It appears that the point of separation between Mr. Chamberlain and the Government is academical, and not at all of the practical nature which usually determines his action. His speech, however, disposes, once for all, of the ridiculous supposition that he would secede from the Unionist party."

The Times says: "Mr. Chamberlain simply urges that the policy of the Government will do the League good rather than harm. He separated from the Government on a small question of expediency, not from opposition or a vital difference of principle. Therefore, only by a highly artificial process of reasoning and a total forgetfulness of his political perspective can he vote against the Government."

The Standard says the Gladstonians will be disappointed to know that Mr. Chamberlain's voice gives forth as clear as ever his re-affirmation of fidelity to the Unionist cause.

It is rumored that, at the request of the Parnellites the Government will consent to postpone the discussion of its action in proclaiming the League. A delegation of members of the English Home Rule Union will soon visit Ireland and give expression to the good will of the English Liberals toward the Irish. A public reception will be given to the delegates in Dublin on September 14, at which the Lord Mayor will preside.

The following is the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland's proclamation against the Irish National League:—

SPECIAL PROCLAMATION.

Whereas we are satisfied that there exists in Ireland an association known by the name of the Irish National League, and that the said association in parts of Ireland promotes and excites to acts of violence and intimidation, and interferes with the administration of the law, now we, the Lord Lieutenant, General Governor of Ireland, by and with the advice of the Privy Council, by virtue of section 6 of the Criminal Law and Procedure, Ireland Act, 1887, and of every power and authority in this behalf, do by this, our special proclamation, declare from the date hereof the said association known as the Irish National League to be dangerous.

This proclamation shall be promulgated by the same being published in the Dublin Gazette and by a printed copy thereof being posted at every police station and barracks, and every place in which divisional police courts or petty sessions are held respectively in Ireland.

Given at the Council Chamber, Dublin Castle, this 19th day of August, 1887.

God save the Queen.

LONDONDERRY.

SEMI-STARVATION.

Failure of the Cod Fishery on the North-West Coast of Newfoundland.

QUEBEC, Aug. 22.—The Canonicle correspondent at Shigawki county, Bonaventure, says he is in receipt of news from the north-west coast of Newfoundland with regard to the cod fishery there, which has always been good, but the present year is an exception to this rule, as the fishery is a total failure so far, and even at the present time many families are in a state of more than semi starvation. To make matters still worse the seal fishery in the spring also proved a failure. There is one small island on the coast upon which reside eight or ten families. In former years it was by no means uncommon for the families to have at this time of the year as many as two hundred quintals of fish apiece. Now they have not half that quantity amongst them all. No one who observes the state of affairs in Newfoundland, as they at present exist, with even a careless eye, but can be convinced of their extreme gravity.

Interesting Ceremony.

LONDON, Ont., Aug 22.—Bishop Walsh on Saturday laid the corner stone of an addition, or rather of what will be the main building of the Academy of the Sacred Heart. The structure is to be four stories high, 134 x 91 feet in area, and will cost $30 000. The bishop was assisted by Fathers Tiernan, Walsh, Dunphy and Kennedy

MASSACRED BY INDIANS.

Terrible Fate of a Missing Vessel's Crew —The Vessel Fired.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 22.—Intelligence regarding the missing schooner Sea Bird has been received. It appears from the confession of an Indian that Captain Moore and his crew were massacred by the Indians of Seymour Narrows. The ship was close to the shore, when the Indians put out in their canoes and bound the crew hand and foot. They drank all the whiskey on board, and in their drunken frenzy first tortured and then massacred their victims. The sufferings of the captain, who resisted the Indians, is described as terrible. After carrying off everything of value they fired the schooner to hide evidence.

A FURIOUS HURRICANE.

Destructive Storm Along the North Carolina Coast.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 22.—The sea coast telegraph line was repaired yesterday, and information has been obtained showing that the storm which prevailed along the North Carolina coast on Saturday was one of the most destructive that has visited that section for years. At Kitty Hawk the gale blew away the apparatus for measuring the velocity of the wind at the signal station, and the observer reports that the fury of the storm was almost indescribable. He estimates the velocity of the wind at about 125 miles an hour, and states that the damage to shipping in that vicinity must be unusually heavy. The telegraph line out of Kitty Hawk was entirely wrecked. The poles were torn out of the earth, broken to much wood and blown away.

FEARFUL SUNDAY RIOT.

Free Fight Between Three Hundred Drunken Miners.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 22.—A fearful riot took place yesterday at Glen Lyon, five miles from Nanticoke, in which more than 300 miners were engaged. The place is occupied solely by the breakers of the Susquehanna Coal Company. The combatants were composed of men of all nationalities. It seems that it has been the custom of several Hungarian and Polish merchants of Nanticoke to send peddlers to Glen Lyon to supply certain boarding house keepers. The Susquehanna coal company always selects Saturday for pay day. However, for the first time, they paid their men at Glen Lyon and Morgantown on Sunday, which day has always been chosen by the merchants to make their collections.

Rev. Mr. Taggart, of Glen Lyon, has frequently preached against what he called such a desecration of the Sabbath, and he finally determined to put a stop to it if possible. Yesterday he organized a posse of his church members for that purpose. The men got wind of it and made up their minds to resist any overtures of the kind. The collectors made their appearance as usual, and the natural excitement of the moment was augmented by a universal indulgence in beer and whiskey. As the day advanced the churchmen became alarmed at the situation and kept themselves in hiding. The feeling of antagonism was so intense, however, that it finally culminated in a free fight between men of opposite nationalities, mad with drink. It was not long before hundreds of men were furiously engaged in a battle, with sticks, stones and clubs for weapons. The riot lasted for half an hour, and many men were struck down on all sides. Dozens were carried away upon improvised stretchers with cracked and bleeding heads to their homes. The riot ceased only when its participants were too few to carry it on, the wounded requiring the attention of many who did not return after they had left the field. To-day it is reported that more than sixty of the rioters were seriously hurt, many of them fatally. The town is in a fever of wild excitement.

The Bank Suspension at London.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 22.—In connection with the excitement incident to the suspension of the London Bank, there were somewhat of a run on the other monetary institutions on Saturday, but all claims were promptly met and paid, and as the day wore on a quieter feeling prevailed. It is learned that the books and papers of the Ontario Loan and Investment Society were seized on Saturday night by two detectives, presumably at the instance of some of the directors, who, it is reported, held a somewhat stormy meeting during the day. President Taylor, of the Bank of London, had lately been elected manager of the Society.

Business Troubles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—It is stated that Mitchell Vanse & Co., manufacturers of gas fixtures, are in financial difficulties and that a receiver may be applied for. Dennis C Wilcox, President of the Company, shot and killed himself a year ago. Wilcox was at one time worth $2,500,000, but lost everything he had in unfortunate speculations and involved the Company. The capital is $1,200,000; and it is said the assets are ample to cover liabilities.

Behring's Sea Seizures.

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—The Fisheries Department has got information of the seizure of more Canadian sealing vessels in the North Pacific Ocean by a United States cruiser. It is learned that the commanders of United States cruisers on the Alaska service have received orders to seize all sealing vessels found in Behring's Sea unless the property of the Alaska Fur Company.

Toronto's Striking Carpenters.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—Most of the striking carpenters went back to work this morning, their old employers having taken them on. It is expected that all will find employment by to-morrow.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

WHY HE RESIGNED.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Mr. T. W. Russell, M. P., who left the Liberal-Unionists because of the proclamation of the National League, has written a letter to explain his resignation. He says:—"I have done my best to persuade my party and the Government from proclaiming the League, but have failed. The Government, in my opinion, have spent their last bullet, and have handed over Ulster to Parnell. I confess that my heart burned with indignation to see my friends sacrificing the Union and sacrificing loyal tenants to a handful of unreasonable landlords deserving nobody's consideration."

JUBILEE REPRESENTATION.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—A jubilee representation of "Don Giovanni" was given at Salzburg yesterday, Herr Richter conducting. The audience was a most brilliant one, including the musical lights of Germany and Austria.

DE CASSAGNAC.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Deputy Laure has summoned M. Paul de Cassagnac before the Courts. M. Laure charges that his character was defamed by De Cassagnac in connection with the Boulanger coup d'eta story.

RUSSIANS EXPELLED.

BERLIN, August 22.—The Government have expelled two Russian families who resided in the environs of the city.

THE CHINESE FLEET.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—There are now lying at Spithead five new ironclads designed for the Chinese fleet, which Admiral Lang will next week start with for Hong Kong. Two swift, protected cruisers, built on the Clyde, have each a displacement of 2,300 tons, and a speed of nearly nineteen knots. Two larger ones, built at Stettin, are armored cruisers with a speed under sixteen knots. The other one is a torpedo boat, built at Yarrow. It has achieved the marvellous speed of twenty-eight miles in an hour, and it is said to be the fastest of its size afloat. Of the two English vessels it is believed that they are the finest in port, build and equipment in the world. Full Chinese crews have been lying at Newcastle for two months. They are much admired by English naval authorities as sober, alert and clever.

LIPSKI WAS A MURDERER.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The murderer, Lipski, who is to be hanged to-morrow, has made a full confession. His story shows that robbery was not the principal motive for the crime.

A GREAT SHIP CANAL.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The King of the Belgians has finally secured the capital and satisfactory plans for the construction of a ship canal connecting Bruges with the ocean. Its chief value will be to make a big Belgian port for the iron and coal district to the south and for the industries of Flanders. The work is to be promptly begun, and before long the delightful old Bruges of tourists will be as much a thing of the past as antique Antwerp.

THE BISHOP OF JERUSALEM.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The agreement by which for 40 years England and Prussia have united in maintaining a Protestant Bishop at Jerusalem is now definitely dissolved, and the English and Lutheran colonies in that locality will hereafter be separately organized. The English Bishop, Blyth, writes a letter to the press begging for money to carry on the work, a curious feature of which is the statement that during the past few years the number of Jews in Palestine has increased from 15,000 to 45,000. The Bishop adds that they are very friendly to him and his church.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Unless the observers stationed in remote parts of Asia have had exceptional luck the, the scientific world will have had its labor for its pains in the matter of Friday's eclipse. Here and there across the two continents partial glimpses of the sun were obtained through the clouds, so far as reported, no photographs or facts were secured which will contribute new knowledge. Both in Germany and on the English coast cliffs amateurs without instruments had an admirable view of the whole phenomenon, but wherever professional astronomers were stationed there were heavy banks of fog clouds.

A RUSSIAN CIRCULAR.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 22.—It is officially announced that the Government have sent a circular to the powers declaring that they are unable to recognize the validity of Prince Ferdinand's election to the throne of Bulgaria. According to the circular, Prince Ferdinand acquainted the Czar with the fact of his election and requested permission to visit St. Petersburg in order to learn the Czar's wish before going to Bulgaria. The Czar replied that the Prince's election would not be recognized by Russia and that the Prince could by no pretext justify his journey to Bulgaria. The circular, in conclusion, expresses the hope that the Bulgarian people will coincide with the Russian views and not permit a flagrant violation of the Berlin treaty.

THE PEOPLE PLEASED.

MOSCOW, Aug. 22.—The Gazette says the Russian circular to the powers regarding Prince Ferdinand has given great satisfaction throughout Russia. It believes Prince Ferdinand's retirement now to be inevitable, and says that if he does not leave Bulgaria Russia will renounce her obligations under the Berlin treaty, which "she has always regarded as a bitter deception after a glorious war."

THE LEAGUE PROCLAMATION.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The division on the proclamation of the League has been fixed for Friday next, before which time the Government will make a further explanation, with a view of retaining the support of Mr. Chamberlain.

DROWNED IN THE THAMES.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—An accident happened during a regatta on the Thames below London Bridge yesterday. About thirty-five spectators clambered up on a hay laden barge. The ropes holding the tarpaulin cover gave way and all except one were thrown into the water. About seventeen were drowned. The water was only three feet deep, but there was eight feet of mud underneath.

RAILWAY JURISDICTION.

NEARLY a column of space is expended by the Ottawa Free Press in a labored attempt to show us to have been in the wrong in discussing who should veto. This torrent of words is quite beside the question, for our contemporary either carelessly or artfully ignores the point at issue. Our enquiry was, when the views of the Dominion and of a Province differed as to some general policy, whether the views of the country or of the Province should prevail. Our Constitution says the Dominion shall in such case have the control by means of the veto power. Opposition journals seem to hold (at least while Conservatives are in power) that the views of the Province should prevail over those of the Dominion as a whole, even if it is at the cost of a rebellion, which they urge. The Free Press avoids meeting us on this ground.

In its meanderings around the question the Free Press makes one or two assertions which deserve notice It says:—"It is not ontended now that the Legislature of Manitoba has not the right to grant railway charters." Subject to any future judicial interpretation of our Constitutton we do contend that by the B. N. A. Act a Province has not the right to legislate concerning railways, &c., "connecting the province with any other or others of the provinces, or extending beyond the limits of the province." What other interpretation can be placed upon these words of the Act, than that they forbid the building of a line to the boundary, there to meet with a continuation. It would be absurd surplusage to prohibit chartering a line outside the limits, and we can see no third possible meaning. Can the Free Press?

Our contemporary relies upon Sir John's declaration that Manitoba could not be checked. Certainly the Dominion Parliament, as he stated, could not check Manitoba legislation, for our constitution gives it no such power, and to attempt it as a Dominion Act would be an impertinence. It is to the Governor-General-in-Council that our constitution gives this power, the check being the responsibility of the Council, that is of the Administration, to the people of the whole Dominion for the manner in which the power is exercised.

The main question remains. Have the Provinces a right to nullify by means of special legislation, a policy accepted by the whole Dominion and to oppose disallowance by threats of rebellion. If this were the true reading of our constitution, to call Canada a "Dominion" would a gross absurdity, for it would have no power to adopt any policy with which its most insignificant portion was not quite content.

PETERBOROUGH VINDICATED.

THE representative of the Detroit News, who was lately in Peterborough on the base errand of misrepresenting the views of our people in regard to annexation, has been proved to be an unscrupulous slanderer. Finding that our representative in the House of Commons and other gentlemen of standing in the town would not aid him in earning his dirty bread by expressing disloyalty to their own flag and a yearning for the Stars and Stripes, he took his revenge upon them by putting words into their mouths the very reverse of those they had used, and thus by deliberate falsehood endeavouring to hold them up to public contempt. Then this traducer proceeds to vilify wholesale our good town, pronounce it to have a leaning towards annexation, though in truth he did not succeed in meeting with one annexationist in it, and very few sufficiently deluded to believe in Commercial Union.

We have given the gentlemen thus especially assailed an opportunity of repudiating these slanders, and they do so emphatically. They have been grossly misrepresented by this dishonest interviewer. Other gentlemen of standing in our community have been invited to express their views, and they completely disprove the statement that Peterborough is anxious to make itself tributary to a foreign country and to assume a hostile attitude towards the Empire of which we are proud to form part.

SOME of the Canadian French Opposition journals seem to be doing all in their power to foment sectional feelings in the Dominion. La Justice says:—

"When the French Canadians want to do so, they will be numerous enough to take the balance of power at Ottawa, and destroy such Administrations as that now in existence, for example Let them understand their weapon and know their true strength, and all will go well."

We do not believe that the majority of the French Canadians have any such dishonest inclination to act as dictators to the rest of the Dominion. But such threats, even though unauthorised, cannot but have a prejudicial effect.

STILL the Opposition organs are expressing their anxious desire for the speedy death of Sir John Macdonald. The Winnipeg Free Press says:—

"The chances are that by that time Sir John will have 'passed in his checks.' His actions on the other side of the hither verge are of little or no consequence."

What a great party it must be which, in default of a policy, can only hope for success through the death of the Conservative leader. And what manly, amiable beings they must be who thus frankly manifest their ghoulish propensities.

BLACK SEA WHEAT.

Experiments Made with It at Kinalmeaky Farm, Headingly, Man.

Mr. Field-Johnson, manager of the Kinalmeaky Farm, Headingly, sends the following account of his experiments with several specimens of the Russian Black Sea wheat:—

In consequence of the tardiness of Red Fyfe wheat in maturing at the most critical stage of its existence, the Land Corporation of Canada (Limited) determined to introduce into Manitoba varieties of Russian, or perhaps more properly speaking, Black Sea wheats. The very finest samples that could be procured were sent to me here in the spring of 1884, and I regret to say that the freight from England exceeded the original cost of the wheat exclusive of duty. The experiments of 1884 were carried out under the most adverse circumstances, in consequence of the drought. Three testing plots were laid out and as nearly alike in every particular of soil and cultivation as it was possible to make them. The varieties sown were "Red Fyfe" from the Brandon district, "Blue Stem" from Minnesota, and "Kubauka" from the Black Sea. The germination was equal, but when the blade was well above ground the "Kubauka" forged ahead in a most perceptible manner and continued to do so until the end, being well ripe when the other two varieties were quite green. The Saxonka variety produced the heaviest field on the farm last year and is about equal in maturing with "Kubauka," but has a very distinct character—the former having a very long ear and the latter being somewhat short but very thick indeed, with a large berry. Saxonka is not unlike, in some respects, to the Red Lammas wheat in England, being very deep in color with exceptional strength. "Kubauka" is of a beautiful amber color, berry very long with full body, and when well grown and harvested is probably the finest looking red wheat in the world. It is a thorough roller process wheat, in consequence of its extreme hardiness. The value of "Kubauka" on Mark Lane to-day is 38 shillings per Imperial quarter of 496 pounds, that of Saxonka 37s., Canadian wheats 34s. to 35s., Duluth 34s. to 35s., Australian 35s. to 36s., Peterbury and Samara 31s. to 33s.

This year we are growing no wheat except Saxonka and Kubauka varieties, and that sown on April 28th was ready for the sickle on 1st August, and as last year's crop matured in almost identically the same period of time, it is now an ascertained fact which there is no gainsaying that these two wheats require only three months from seeding to shearing when grown in Manitoba. Experience has taught many of us to our sorrow that Red Fyfe under fair ordinary circumstances usually requires 120 days to bring it to maturity. Seventeen years' experience of Russian wheat teaches me that the two varieties I have selected are those par excellence for general milling purposes for export to England.

I notice that the travelling correspondent of the Nor'west Farmer describes the Russian wheats sown from samples sent by Professor Saunders as being much affected with "black head" and "smut," especially at Sir D. Smith's at Silver Heights. I have not yet seen a single "black head" in any of ours, and as to smut, I have no hesitation in saying that it is the fault of the farmer when wheat is so affected, as the preventive is so simple, viz.: one-half pound blue vitriol to a gallon of water to every four bushels of grain. This has been a never-failing specific for thirty years to my knowledge. The cost, exclusive of labor, is just one cent per bushel, as the vitriol can be bought for nine cents per pound.—Winnipeg Free Press.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

Three Lives Sacrificed Through a Rejected Offer of Marriage.

A Little Rock, Ark., despatch says:—A terrible tragedy was enacted in the Chickasaw nation on Friday, in which three persons were fatally wounded. Two families named Harrison and Graham were travelling through the territory to Texas. Harrison and Graham became involved in a quarrel about Harrison's daughter, whom young Graham wanted to marry, but the lady's father declined to allow the marriage. The young man threatened to shoot Harrison, and the latter's son, believing his father's life was in danger, shot Graham inflicting a mortal wound. A young brother of the wounded man, seeing his brother fall, shot young Harrison through the arm, when the elder Harrison, who had armed himself, reappeared and was also shot by Graham. Members of the families who were absent from the camp hearing the firing came up and prevented further bloodshed.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

E. J. HARTLEY

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Bracknell was a little flattered, I think, and perhaps also (though I am not quite so sure about that) a little touched. "Go on and prosper," said he. "Marriage is the greatest mistake in the world; but if you will marry, you will. Let me know when the event comes off, and I'll be your best man."

t is not always easy to tell how far the sense of duty and honor possessed by men like Bracknell may be relied upon. Doubtless there are certain offenses against their fellow men which they would under no circumstances commit; but as for the rest, I should imagine that it was very much a question of temptation. Truth compels me to admit that the temptations with which Hilda assailed the heir of Staines Court during the next few weeks were of a nature to try the stoutest powers of resistance. I don't say that her tactics were novel; but I do say that anything more clever than her employment of them I never saw. Of course "the young people," as we were generically termed by our elders, were continually together. There were rides, there were picnics, there was lawn tennis—in short, all the ordinary amusements of country house life in the summer time; and to watch Hilda and Bracknell together on those occasions would have been most entertaining if it had not been a little distressing. She stirred his curiosity; she roused in him a spirit of emulation; she flattered his vanity one day only to wound it the next. Sometimes she ignored him as obstinately as she had done the first evening; and every now and again when Jim's back was turned, she would favor him with a look which I am quite sure must have sent a thrill through his whole person, though he had the credit of being accustomed to such looks. All this time she was charming in her demeanor to poor old Jim, with whom, however, she now avoided taking solitary walks; and the upshot of it was that, before a fortnight had passed, she had two sighing lovers at her feet instead of one. That may not have been a very wonderful exploit to accomplish, nevertheless it was accomplished with very great skill.

How matters must end was obvious enough; yet when the catastrophe (for I suppose it must be called a catastrophe) came I confess I was slightly startled. It was Mr. Turner who apprised me of it. Strolling out in the direction of Staines Court one hot morning, I came upon him just as he was hurrying through the gates, and he at once pulled up, took off his hat and began to mop his forehead. Evidently he was a prey to conflicting emotions, and, indeed, his first words were a confession that such was the case.

"My dear Harry," said he, "I am upset—completely upset. Tell me now—for you have an old head upon young shoulders—did it ever strike you that there was anything between my daughter and Lord Bracknell?"

I replied that that idea had suggested itself to me.

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Mr. Turner. "Dear me! Well, I assure you that I never was more taken aback in my life than when Lord Bracknell came to me last night to tell me that he had proposed to Hilda and had been accepted. Ah, I see that you are astonished. The fact is that I had formed other—ahem!—anticipations. Possibly you may have shared those anticipations?"

I signified assent, and he went on: "To tell you the truth, Harry, I should have been better pleased if things had fallen out otherwise. Even now I am not sure—— However, we shall see. I have just received a note from Lord Staines, requesting me to call upon him immediately, and I greatly fear that he will not be favorable to the engagement. You are very observant, I know; have you noticed any signs of his being disposed to—er—welcome dear Hilda as his daughter-in-law?"

I was quite unable to say that I had, and I really felt very sorry for the poor man, who seemed, through no fault of his own, to have got between the upper and the nether millstones. Nothing was more certain than that he was about to get into serious trouble with the patron of his living, and it might be safely predicted that, when he returned home, he would get into trouble not less serious with the controller of the household and his actions. I quite understood why he begged me not to mention this to anybody, and also who was meant by that emphatic "anybody," for a squire in the hand is worth two.wiscounts in the bush. I willingly gave him the required assurance, and he hastened away toward the house, fanning himself with his pocket handkerchief as he went.

CHAPTER III.

Lord Staines was a weak man, and, like most weak men, was exceedingly peremptory when roused to anger. It was certainly not poor Mr. Turner's fault that Bracknell had been brought within an ace of making an egregious ass of himself; for, as everybody knew, Mr. Turner had no more control over his daughter than he had over the empress of China. Still, those who are invested with nominal authority should expect to be held responsible when disasters occur, and a sad pity it is that this excellent rule is not more frequently made to apply to certain high functionaries whom one might name. Lord Staines, having got hold of Hilda's ostensible superior, led the unhappy man into his study and then and there gave him a tremendous wigging. I made a point of calling upon the Rev. Simeon in the course of the afternoon, and found him quite shattered. Never in his life before, he said piteously, had such language been used to him, and although it was his duty as a Christian to forgive Lord Staines' words, he feared that it would be long before he would be able to forget him.

As for Bracknell, he was packed off by the first train with a flea in his ear, and, I dare say, a check in his pocket. He wrote a letter to Hilda, in which, I understand, he represented himself to be broken hearted, but powerless. His father wouldn't hear of the engagement, and, since he was entirely dependent upon his father, there was no more to be said. Upon reflection, I feel quite sure that he must have received a check. Lord Staines possessed a fine old fashioned temper, but he worshiped his son, whose will was a great deal stronger than his own, and if Bracknell had really been determined upon marrying the cook, I doubt not but that he would have snapped his finger in his father's face and married her. Such may not probably have been also the opinion of the fair Hilda, whose wrath at finding herself thus coolly left in the lurch was, as I gathered from her father, very great.

Her disappointment might have been easier to bear, and the whole affair might have blown over quietly, if only Lord Staines had had the sense to hold his tongue about it. But I suppose he was flushed with victory and couldn't hold his tongue. First he told Lady Mildred, which was perhaps unavoidable; later in the day, by which time he had fully recovered his good humor, he marched down to see my mother and boasted a little of the facility with which he had nipped this folly and nonsense in the bud.

"Rely upon it, my dear, Mrs. Maynard," said he, "there is nothing like promptitude and decision in these cases. People tell me that I have over indulged Bracknell, and possibly I have; but I believe he understands pretty well that there are certain limits which he had better not transgress. I can't afford to have a pauper daughter-in-law, and there's an end of it."

My mother said it was all very worldly and shocking, and that if Lord Staines had nothing worse than lack of fortune to urge against Hilda, he ought to be ashamed of himself. However, he was not ashamed of himself, and I take it that he must have gone about freely extolling the virtue of promptitude and decision, for in a few days the whole neighborhood was in possession of the facts, together with such emendations and additions as individual taste had grafted on to them in the process of transmission. Among the first to be informed of what had occurred was Jim, who rode over to our house in a great state of heat to ask me whether I had heard what he was pleased to call "an infernal lying report." When I was obliged to tell him that the report alluded to, however infernal it might be, was substantially correct, I really thought for a moment he was going to hit me between the eyes. But he renounced that intention, if he had ever entertained it, and only dropped into a chair, with a look of pain and reproach on his face which hurt me almost as much as if I had deserved it.

"And you knew that Bracknell was humbugging me all this time?" he exclaimed.

I had not said so, but the fact was undeniable. I fancy that, upon the first blush of the thing, he was more grieved by Bracknell's treachery than by Hilda's inconstancy, and I could not get him to pay much attention to the excuse which I made both for the culprit and for myself; though I venture to think that these were neither intrinsically poor nor badly put. But when, in the plentitude of my generosity, I began to make excuses for Hilda too, he stopped me at once——

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Propaganda of Falsehood.

The Toronto World says:—"A host of prominent Peterborough people give through the REVIEW the lie to the Detroit News' misrepresentations of their views upon commercial annexation. 'Peterborough's voice,' says the REVIEW, 'is against it.' There, as elsewhere, the Ananias of the News interviewed men who were out of town during his visit. The Detroit organ must be fond of throwing away money when it spends it upon such a scamp as it has sent, though it must be admitted that he is not much worse than some Canadian members of the propaganda of falsehood."

Was it Boodler McGarigle?

The Stratford Herald says:—"Jno. McGarigle, Chicago," is a name that now adorns the Albion hotel register, and quid nuncs have something to talk about and are kicking themselves because they did not see the man before he took his departure. Mr. McGarigle arrived by an 8 o'clock train last night in company with Mr. J. C. Mercer a dry goods man of Peterborough, and both put up at the Albion. The pair tapped a bottle of wine at the bar, Mr. McGarigle at the time displaying a roll of bills of a size sufficient to stagger an ordinary individual. The man had a light moustache and burnsides seen in the widely-circulated portraits of the boodler, and there are many who think that it was the real Wm. J. McGarigle who has honored the city with another visit. McGarigle paid his bill this morning and avowed his intention of going to Goderich by the 9 a.m. train, and returning this evening."

POLICE COURT.

INSULTING AND ABUSIVE.

TUESDAY, Aug. 23.—Andrew Dobbin, of North Monaghan, was charged by Miss A. J. Thompson with having used grossly insulting and abusive language toward her.

Mr. STRATTON, appearing for the defendant, pleaded guilty. He stated that Mr. Dobbin was willing to make an apology for what he had said.

The MAGISTRATE said that this young man had been before the Court on more than one occasion charged with offensive conduct of one kind and another. If the apology was accepted he would consider it in dealing out the punishment, but that even though the apology were made he would impose a fine. He intended that if this young man did not mend his ways it would be the duty of the Court to assist him to do so. The remarks made to this woman were of a kind that none but a bad man would utter. His being drunk was no excuse. He was glad, however, that Mr. Dobbin was manly enough to retract the statements he made.

Mr. STRATTON replied that even before the action was brought Mr. Dobbin had sought to apologise for his conduct, and had instructed him to say that he had no cause to make the statements he made.

The MAGISTRATE imposed a fine of $5.

THE GENERAL.

General Lee made his debut in the Court this morning. As he entered he smiled upon the Magistrate and remarked "that it was a fine morning."

His WORSHIP—George, you are charged with having been drunk and disorderly. It's all right I suppose?

The GENERAL—Ah, I suppose so. But it's the first time I've ever been in Court in the Town of Peterborough.

His WORSHIP—Well, George, I'm going to let you off this time. I hope I won't see you here again. I don't like to see old citizens like you up here.

The GENERAL bowed his acknowledgement and assured His Worship that he would pursue a straight course in the future.

THE GAS WELL.

Stones and Water Forced Up—A Stronger Flow of Gas.

Mr. Leary, the well borer, came to town yesterday and reports that gas is flowing stronger than ever from the well in Otonabee. On Saturday the shaft was sunk six feet further, making the total depth eighty-six feet. The well was then sand-pumped, and the result was a powerful rush of water carrying with it innumerable small stones and smelling strongly of petroleum. The water came with a roar, and the stones flew about in a lively manner, startling those present and for a time making them feel decidedly uncomfortable.

After the sand-pumping, and after the flow of water had subsided, the gas was emitted in a stronger volume. When lighted it blazed up to a height of about ten feet. It burned so strongly that Mr. Pallin, the owner, feared that damage would be done, and it was with considerable difficulty extinguished. Being again relighted, it burned as brightly as at first and the flame was of a larger volume—in fact, about five times as large as it was previously. When the water rushed out the smell of petroleum was so strong that it could be detected some distance from the well. Mr. Pallin does not think that his good fortune should go for nothing, and, while waiting for a larger share of the good he hopes it will bring him, he has built a house over the well and collects a fee from those who enter.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD's new boot and shoe store.

Personal.

Adjutant Bolton has returned to town after an extended trip through the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Capt. Pople, formerly stationed here in charge of the Peterborough branch of the Salvation Army, is in town on a visit.

Down the River.

On Monday the Riverside Lacrosse Club held their annual outing, going down the river to Idyl Wild. Dancing was indulged in going down, at the resort, and coming back, to the music of an excellent orchestra. The excursion and picnic was a success, as is everything the Riversides take hold of.

Going to Lindsay.

The Riverside Lacrosse Club have made arrangements to go to Lindsay on August 31st to play the home team. The clubs will play for a handsome silver cup, which has been ordered from Mr. W. A. Sanderson, town.

Government in Canada.

A very practical appreciation has been shown of Mr. D. A. O'Sullivan's able work on "Government in Canada," by the fact that a new edition has to be issued to supply the demand.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

The New Babcocks.

Two bran new Babcock extinguishers have arrived at the Fire Department from Montreal.

Band.

The Fire Brigade Band will give an open air concert in the Gardens this evening.

Advertising

Mr. F. Scott is getting out a number of advertising charts to be hung in the railway stations, post office, and other public places in town. They will be printed on black steel paper in three colors of bronze, and will be set in neat interchangeable type. They will be encased in handsome gilt frames and covered with glass. The cards will be set in such a manner as to give a good display to each. Mr. Scott will make his calls in a day or two.

Young Men's Meeting.

A meeting of the Young Men's Liberal Conservative Association will be held on the evening of Tuesday, August 30th, in the club room over Mr. Stethem's store. One object of the meeting is to arrange for a representation at the Toronto convention. All Conservative young men are invited to be present on Tuesday evening.

Cheese Board.

The regular fortnightly session of the Peterborough Cheese Board is being held this afternoon. If the factory men contract this afternoon, as they probably will, for the rest of this season's make, this will be the last session of the Board for this year.

Excursion.

An excursion from Gore's Landing arrived in town at two o'clock, per steamer Beaver. There were quite a number of people on board.

The Paradis Case.

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—At Aylmer this morning the two cases against Father Paradis for forgery and defacing trade marks on logs were postponed until Friday next, when it is expected that Hon. Jas. McShane will be in attendance and produce the check, the endorsation of which Father Paradis is charged with having forged.

Mr. Mercier's Convention.

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—Premier Mercier has received a letter from Hon. Oliver Mowat stating that he will leave for home shortly, and expects to be at Quebec about the 10th of September. The Inter-Provincial Congress, it has been definitely arranged, will be held in Quebec from the 12th to the 13th of September.

Another Great Project.

CAIRO, Ill., Aug. 22.—A vast assemblage of spectators witnessed the successful launching on Saturday of the first of the massive caissons, weighing three hundred tons, to be sunk in the Ohio River at this city, in connection with the erection of the Illinois Central railroad bridge. The structure will cost nearly $4,000,000.

Death of Alex. McArthur.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—Mr. Alex. McArthur, who undertook to find the north pole, but returned to Winnipeg after going as far as the Norquay house, died here suddenly yesterday, aged 45. He was connected with many commercial enterprises.

Horses From Europe.

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—The Lake Superior brought 149 horses and 25 ponies on her last trip. They are intended for ranches in the States and Northwest.

Young Incendiaries.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Chas. A Moore, aged 16, and Geo. K. O'Keefe, aged 13, have been arrested for and have confessed to setting fire to Young's spar yard in East Boston last Friday.

Row at a Church Supper.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 22.—Wm. Taylor murdered Tony Charles yesterday by nearly decapitating him with a razor. The row occurred at a negro church supper.

ALL THE ADVANTAGES.

Commercial Union is not advocated by the Farmers' Advocate, which, in the July number, censures the Government for subsidizing farmers' institutes, which are working up the project. An article written for the Dominion Farmers' Council by John Waters, Esq., M. P. P., considers the existing relations with the United States, a reciprocity treaty, and Commercial Union, and believes that the last is of very doubtful expediency, and that reasonable reciprocity would give all the advantages we have a right to expect.—Orillia Packet.

Curiosity.

Mr. Popinjay—"Woman's curiosity amuses me."

Mrs. Popinjay—"Aha—by the way, what's the stain on your hand?"

Mr. Popinjay—"Paint. I was coming by Robson's fence, and just touched my finger to see if it was dry."

He Was Lonesome There.

"Yes," said a Minneapolis man, "poor Jim's dead. He was the squarest, most honest man I ever knew."

"What was his ailment?"

"I don't exactly know. He hasn't been well ever since he lived in St. Paul. I reckon he just pined away and died of sheer lonesomeness."

He Was Not French.

An American mother traveling in France offered a half fare ticket for her son, who lacked several months of the full fare age. The collector looked suspiciously at the child and at her. "Your son, is he under 7, madame?" "He is, monsieur." "Your son is very large for his age, madame." "He is, monsieur." "Your son is altogether too large for his age, madame," snapped the man, exasperated by the American's coolness. "Oui, monsieur, that may be," retorted the mother calmly, "he is not French, you see."—The Argonaut.

Prepared to Catch Him.

"What have you got in all those trunks?" asked one fashionable girl of another at the station the other day as her friend was going off to Narragansett. "Oh, bait," was the ready answer.—Boston Globe.

DR GEO. W. HALL, St. Louis, says: "I took it for indigestion and found it of decided advantage."

A SIDNEY SENSATION.

A Desperado Attempts Wholesale Robbery.

The people of Sidney along the line of the second concession, were thrown into a state of wild excitement on Monday morning by a stranger who demanded money at the point of the revolver. He had a rig from O'Brien's livery, and drove from house to house, threatening to shoot the women if the did not give over what valuables there were in the house. In every case the men were at work in the harvest field and the women were at the mercy of the stranger who took the advantage to frighten them. Mr. James Farley, deputy reeve of the township, was absent from his house when the highwayman entered and flourishing a revolver demanded money from Mrs. Farley. The stranger also visited George Cox's, W. Kelly's, John Young's, Singleton's and John Wilson's. Wilson's was the last place he called at. Here he threatened to fire at Mrs. Wilson and the women were greatly alarmed. He took one of Wilson's coats, and grabbed a vest containing a watch and some money, but Mrs. Wilson snatched them and ran to alarm her husband in the field. The stranger made off then in the rig, but was hotly pursued by Wilson and other neighbors with shot guns, who followed him for four miles. Seeing he was likely to be run down, the stranger, after passing over a hill, jumped out of the rig and escaped into the woods, where he is still in hiding.

The rig was brought to the city and the police notified of the affair. Mr. O'Brien said the man gave his name as Connelly, and said he was an engineer on the Grand Trunk. His appearance certainly bore out the statement, as his face and clothes were soiled with oil and tar, and he looked as though he had just quit work. He is a tall, muscular looking fellow with a full beard.—Belleville Ontario.

THE LEAGUE.

How the Proclamation is Said to Benefit the Organization.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Mr. Chamberlain's remark in his speech at Birmingham, on Saturday evening, that the Government's proclamation would do the League more good than harm was as true as anything he said to his followers. It has benefited the League inestimably and it is absolutely certain that further action on the part of the Government with a view to suppressing the organization will help it still more. Since the announcement of the proclamation several Gladstone members of Parliament have become members of the League to accentuate their sympathy with the body and their dissent from the policy of the Ministry, and many more stand ready to follow their example. It is asserted by League officials that eighty English Liberal members, not including those already enrolled in the League, have indicated their intention to join the organization, and will do so within a week. Mr. Gladstone is suffering somewhat from the effects of a cold, but will be in his seat in the House of Commons on Thursday night to move an address to the Crown appealing for the abrogation of the proceedings of the League. The defection of Mr. T. W. Russell, member for South Tyrone, was a staggering blow to the Unionists and his letter gives his reasons for his withdrawal has added much to the significance of his severance of his relations with the dissidents, especially that part of it devoted to expressing his opinion of the Ulster landlords in particular and the Irish landlords in general. Some curiosity is evinced by many members as to the exact position of several other Unionists, and they are looking forward with quickened interest to the division on Friday. Mr. Parnell has no desire that the Government shall be defeated on that occasion, but, on the contrary, prefers that the Ministry should remain a while longer in power in order that they may more fully develop the folly of their recent acts.

CARDINAL TASCHEREAU.

Rumor of His Early Retirement From the Archbishopric of Quebec.

QUEBEC, Aug. 23.—It is rumored, and it is generally conceded that the rumor is based on excellent ground, that His Eminence Cardinal Taschereau will shortly withdraw from the elevated position he holds as Archbishop of the Diocese of Quebec. When a correspondent met a priest of the seminary to-day, he was asked whether he had any reason to believe the rumor unfounded.

"Not the slightest," said he. "I heard it stated several days ago by ecclesiastics who are well in a position to speak, that the Cardinal was to retire. Age is beginning to tell upon the Cardinal, and when he returned to the city from his pastoral tour about a week ago, he was, as has never been known to occur before during the fifteen years he has been ministering to the spiritual wants of the faithful of his diocese, greatly weakened and even seriously indisposed. His medical adviser told him that he needed rest and fresh air and this is why he has been since then sojourning with the priests of the Seminary at St. Joachim. I have every reason to believe that the Cardinal's successor will be Rev. Abbe Begin, the Principal of the Laval Normal School, and a better choice could not be made."

Not for Mr. Joly.

A despatch from Quebec to the Montreal Star says:—Contrary to what has been stated in a previous despatch, Mr. J. C. Pacaud, Q.C., of Arthabaskaville, is to receive the seat in the Legislative Council, made vacant by the death of Mr. Gerin. When the name of Mr. Joly was mentioned as the most suitable person to fill the vacancy, the veteran politician's attitude with regard to the present Government in connection with the Riel matter was recalled by one of the Ministers. "He has not shown himself a friend of the Government," said that member of the Cabinet, "and no courtesy should be extended to him. It was quite enough that he had been appointed chairman of the exhibition committee." It was then decided to offer the seat to Mr. Pacaud.

Kingston's City Engineer.

KINGSTON, Aug. 23.—Thomas C. Bolger, of Belleville, one of the leading civil engineers of Central Canada, has been appointed city engineer at a salary of $1,500. His appointment dates from September 1st.

AN ATROCIOUS CRIME

A Mother Murders Her Son for the Sake of His Money.

A Paris despatch says:—There is something peculiarly shocking in the circumstances attendant on a murder which has just been committed at Orantova, in Spain. Years ago, it appears, a young man who was a native of that town emigrated to America in the hope of making a fortune. Having to some extent succeeded in his object, he returned recently to his old home, where his aged parents still resided. Remembering their age and infirmities, he was afraid to reveal his identity to them too abruptly, for they had had no tidings of their absent son for a long time past, and possibly thought that he was no longer living. He went, therefore, to the old homestead of his youth without saying who he was. He saw his aged father and mother, who did not recognize him, and after asking their hospitality as a stranger, he confided to his mother his purse, containing a large sum of money, as well as other property. The sight of the treasure excited the cupidity of the woman, and induced her to plan a most abominable crime—namely, the murder of the traveller whom she lodged beneath her roof. She sought to prevail upon her husband to become her accomplice, and, failing in this, determined to murder her guest single-handed. She accomplished her fell design by means of a hatchet, with which she almost severed her victim's head from his body. After she was arrested she learned that she had killed her own child. She displayed neither regret nor remorse, merely observing that he ought to have revealed his identity.

BURGLARS BAULKED.

A Revolver in a Hired Man's Hand Compels them to Disgorge.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 23.—James A. McGregor, of the 5th concession of Westminster, was visited by burglars on Sunday night. They obtained entrance to the house by prying open one of the back windows, but were overheard by the hired man, who was sleeping in a small room just off the kitchen. The man immediately got up and dressed himself noiselessly and waited for the return of the intruders, who had in the meantime found their way to Mr. McGregor's bedroom, apparently unobserved and unheard. Here they took two watches from the dressing case and also abstracted $125 in bills from Mr. McGregor's trousers' pockets. As they were making their return through the kitchen door, which they unbolted, they were confronted by a self-cocking revolver in the hands of the hired man, who ordered them to disgorge. The thieves did so, and as they were near neighbours and well known to the man they were allowed to go. In the morning Mr. McGregor informed the county police in the city, but afterwards asked them to take no action, as he had settled satisfactorily with the men.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

Trouble Threatened at Hamilton With the City Council.

HAMILTON, Aug. 23.—About three months ago the Bricklayers' Union complained about the employment of John Buscombe and two other non-union men at corporation work, and asked that they be discharged. The Board of Works refused to discharge them, and the men who were working at the engine house at the Beach were withdrawn, but the matter was arranged and the work proceeded again. Buscombe and his men have a sort of monopoly of the city jobbing and their work is said to be satisfactory, and they are not hampered by union regulations regarding hours and wages.

Yesterday the trouble was revived by the attendance of a deputation from the Bricklayers' Union composed of David R. Gibson and John Street, who waited upon the City Engineer and a number of aldermen and stated that unless Buscombe and his non-union men are dismissed from the city's service they will withdraw the men now at work on the engine house at the Beach and the Hunter street school, and when the city hall is to be built they will not allow union men to work on it.

The deputation will also wait upon the Sewer Committee on Friday night.

A Teller Gone.

WATFORD, Ont., Aug. 23.—There was considerable excitement here on Monday when it was learned that George Jones, the teller in the branch of the Bank of London here, had mysteriously disappeared. Jones kept the combination of the inner vault door and it was necessary to send to the head office for the combination before the amount of his supposed plunder could be ascertained. On opening the safe Tuesday morning a package of bills on other banks, amounting to $2,500, was missing.

Fatal Boating Accident.

On Sunday last while a party of young folks were boating near Campbellford, the craft, a common row boat, collided with a boom and upset, throwing the occupant into the water. Although the river was very shallow (only two feet deep) where the accident occurred, one of the party, a Miss Murphy from Rochester, N. Y., received such injuries that death ensued a few minutes after the body was taken from under the boat, which had fallen on her.—Hastings Star.

A Tornado.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 23.—A tornado passed over the country north of here about 4 o'clock this morning, doing considerable damage to fences, telegraph lines, etc., unroofing houses, blowing over chimneys, trees and carrying away everything loose. It only lasted a few minutes, passing eastward, close to Thordale station, accompanied by hailstones.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

GERMAN RETALIATION.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—It is stated that the German Government intends to propose a further increase of the import duties on cereals, at the assembling of the Reichstag in November, which means that Germany contemplates making reprisals on Russia for the latter's action in raising the duty on iron, to the detriment and in some cases absolute ruin of German manufacturers. A large number of iron masters in Silesia are cutting down the number of their employees in consequence of the reduced volume of business, and the stagnation of the iron trade in other parts of Germany, resulting from the action of Russia, is daily becoming more apparent.

NEW COMMERCIAL TREATY.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Times says a political and commercial treaty between China and France has been arranged.

THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Crown Prince Frederick William is still at Braemar, where he attended church on Sunday, and despite the rose-colored reports of his physician, concerning the health of his royal patient, Dr. Mackenzie was there too.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—M. Nelidoff, Russian Ambassador to Constantinople, is in Berlin negotiating with the German Government concerning the assumption of the Bulgarian throne by Prince Ferdinand and the status of the principality generally. It is reported that Germany agreed to consent to Russia's occupying Bulgaria, provided the number of troops to be sent there and the period of occupation be specifically defined previous to taking possession of the country, but that the Russian representative stated that Russia would not agree to any condition of restraint in the matter.

It will receive many more signatures, and will be presented at Washington in the middle of October.

HARTINGTON'S PROTEST.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Lord Hartington did not know that the Government intended to proclaim the league until after the decision had been reached. As soon as he learned of the Government's intention he sent a strong remonstrance to Lord Salisbury. Lord Hartington believes the proclamation ill-advised, dangerous and unnecessary.

OVERTURES TO MR. RUSSELL.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Capt. Benn, of the steamer York City, which rescued the passengers of the Str. City of Montreal, says he feels certain that the fire was not an accident, but was the work of some malicious person, or persons, because the fire broke out fore and aft at the same time, with the two bulkheads closed between.

PRINCE FERDINAND.

SOFIA, Aug. 23.—Prince Ferdinand arrived here at five o'clock yesterday evening.

ARMY OFFICERS IRRITATED.

SOFIA, Aug. 23.—M. Tantcheff has now consented to form a Ministry. The Metropolitan, in the course of an address in the cathedral to-day in the presence of Prince Ferdinand, said he was happy to learn that His Highness would do the best he could to reconcile Russia. This statement, together with the report that a Russian commissioner will accompany Artin Effendi to Bulgaria, confirming, as it does, the belief in Prince Ferdinand's submission to Russia, has caused irritation among the officers of the Bulgarian army.

The Daily Review

WEDENSDAY, AUGUST, 24, 1887.

QUEBEC AND ANNEXATION.

In a very able article La Minerve thoroughly exposes the folly of the agitation in favor of Annexation, or of its precursor, Commercial Union. Addressing itself especially to those of its own race and creed, it shows conclusively the favorable position held by the Province of Quebec as part of the Dominion of Canada under the British flag, and points out the certainty of very different treatment if ever it came under the Stars and Stripes.

As the Minerve says:—

"And we would proceed with a light heart to risk our national existence by sacrificing all its principal supports, and all that which constitutes its force and guarantees its vitality? And it is in the name of "nationality" that such a proposition is made to us. Is it not the height of inconsistency and blindness?"

We are glad to see this frank acknowledgment, which is only what we would have expected from the Minerve, of the fairness and consideration—we had almost said generosity—with which its compatriots have been treated by their more numerous English speaking fellow subjects and by the authorities of a British dominion. As we are thoroughly in accord with our contemporary in approving and desiring the continuance of these cordial relations between the two races, and also in maintaining the present political status of Canada as an integral portion of the British empire, we venture to take the liberty, without fear of being misunderstood, to point out that a danger to the stability of such satisfactory conditions comes from the Province of Quebec.

With the exception of a handful of disappointed politicians who not finding themselves appreciated, hope that by overturning all things they may chance to come to the top, and of another handful of dealers in farm produce who think they can turn their money over more rapidly and so make greater profits by selling to the States, we have only heard one reason advanced in favour of annexation, namely that Quebec would thereby be deprived of the power of dictating to the other Provinces. In support of this view it is urged that the French Canadians, not content with equal rights and, indeed, with exceptional privileges, are assuming a position of superiority and are claiming a right to dictate to the Dominion and even to the other Provinces as such.

While not admitting that such an heroic remedy as annexation is either necessary or advisable, for we have faith in the reasonableness, the discretion and the loyalty of the French Canadians, it is impossible to deny that there is some foundation for these grumblings. For instance in pursuance of the misleading agitation of political demagogues the French voters in Ontario assumed, both in the Dominion and Provincial elections, to make choice of representatives on a question in which their race was said to have an especial interest. They succeeded to the extent of securing the return of several members of the party to which they were politically opposed, so that Messrs. Edwards, Labrosse, Bronson, Pacaud and other Ontario members in the Commons and Legislature represent merely the cry of vengeance for the execution of a murderous rebel. Now, if this political change had been in regard to any public question, to free trade or protection, to a wide or restricted franchise, &c., we would not have a word of reproach to utter, fully conceding the right of every voter to form his own judgment in such matters. But the change was avowedly to punish a Ministry and a party for daring to allow justice to take its course in the case of a double-dyed rebel, a renegade from his creed and from Christianity, an instigator of the murder of priests, officials and innocent settlers, a venal man who offered to sell his cause and his duped associates for money, but for whom immunity for his crimes was claimed because he had some French blood in his veins. And on this cry a considerable number of French Canadians strove to upset the Administration, to change the whole policy of the country, not shrinking even from allying themselves with men who not long previously had used such foul language regarding them and all they most loved and respected that we cannot reproduce it because it is unfit for the columns of any decent journal. Such an attempt to reduce Canadian politics to a mere question of the nationality of a criminal is obviously most prejudicial. We could not be surprised at the tactics of the Rouges, whose doctrines, pushed to their natural conclusions, were displayed in the actions of their corresponding faction in the old world, the Communists of Paris.

We frankly recognise that the Minerve and its friends, the majority of the Quebec Conservatives, were not led away by this detestable cry. But it remains that on this indefensible claim a number of French Canadians turned their coats, sufficient to have an appreciable effect upon the choice of our law-makers, not only in the Province of Quebec, but even in that of Ontario.

We are not reviving these unpleasant memories to hurt the feelings even of opponents, still less to prolong discord, but to show the mischief of such sectional tactics and to offer a word of warning. The great majority of the English speaking people of Canada, certainly the Conservatives, are ready and willing not only that the French Canadians should have perfectly fair treatment and equal rights, but that this should be accorded in the full measure with which a generous majority should be ready to treat a minority. But they are not willing that French Canadians should assume a superiority, and treat the English speaking people of the Dominion as tolerated interlopers. The memory of the Riel agitation is unfortunately sometimes revived by acts and words which seem too much inspired by the same spirit, and if antagonism and impatience is manifested in return, it is not surprising, though it is to be deplored.

We trust the Minerve and its friends will continue their patriotic efforts to maintain and where necessary to restore that good feeling which should animate Canadians of both races, and lead them to work harmoniously together to build up their common country. There is at present an additional inducement to this wise course in the fact that want of harmony and sectional bickerings will aid those unpatriotic agitators who would alienate Canada from the British Empire and tie it to the United States. Canadians without regard to tongue, race or creed would gain nothing and would lose much by such a change. All patriotic Canadians should therefore stand shoulder to shoulder to oppose it.

Rapid Sight Seeing.

Americans traveling abroad are often laughed at for their passion for rapid sight seeing. But why may not the brain take impressions as swiftly and as easily as the photographer's chemically prepared plate? "How long will it take me to see the exhibition?" asked a lady of a gentleman who had just come from the world's fair at Philadelphia. "Fifteen minutes," was the response. The lady of course was astonished, and the respondent proceeded to explain. "To study all the details of the exhibition would require many months, but to obtain an impression of its magnitude, to seize upon its salient features, fifteen minutes would do wonders for you. A ride around the circuit of its connecting railway would give you a succession of pictures never to be forgotten." What is true of a great fair is true of a great city. It has been said that very few people really know London fully, but any one may obtain an idea of its physiognomy, of its characteristic features, in a half hour's drive through its streets. To discover all the qualities there are in a painting I must study it well, but single glance gives me an idea of the composition and the scheme of color. In truth this first instantaneous impression in art is invaluable, and a painting should always be approached, if it is possible to do so, under conditions that enable the spectator to get a full view promptly. How often a painter turns his picture to the wall and there lets it remain long enough to allow him to obtain an unprejudiced and instantaneous impression when he sees it again! Study and analysis are of course indispensable factors in some things, but the flash, the revealing glance, the sudden insight, the instantaneous photograph on the sensitized brain, are things of value in life as well as in art.—Home Journal.

New Soup Pot for the French Army.

Without his soup the French soldier is nothing, and during the Franco-German campaign Zouaves and Tirailleurs were often surprised by Prussians or Bavarians while engaged in skimming their pot au feu or watching the simmering of their soupe aux potreaux.

Gen. Forron proposes to prevent any recurrence of this disastrous state of affairs by adopting a campaign cooking pot, which shall enable each particular Dumanet or Tommy Atkins to make his own soup, and that of course more speedily than when he had to prepare it for three besides himself in the rather cumbersome and complicated apparatus which was set down in the books of the army stores and the inventories in the barrack rooms as the utensile a quatre.

The new soup pot was tried with success some years ago in France and Algeria, but in 1883 it was rejected by Gen. Billot on the ground that it would destroy esprit de corps by isolating the soldiers from each other. Gen. Ferron combats this view by alleging that the soup may be divided between three at least when made in the new pot, and that in any case comradeship was not so well fostered under the quadruple regime as to necessitate the continuance of the old marmites; but his great reasons for the change are based on the speed and the saving which the new pot will realize.—St. James' Gazette.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

The whole of the grading on the Red River Valley railway from Winnipeg to the boundary is practically completed except four miles at Morris. The work was completed across the disputed Browning lots on Saturday afternoon, before notice of the injunction was served on the contractors, and it is reported that the service has not yet been effected.

E. J. HARTLEY

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"That's enough, Harry," he interrupted. "You mean well, but you don't seem to see that apologizing on Hilda's behalf is implying that she is to blame. I can't admit that for an instant. She never gave me anything in the shape of a promise; and if I chose to imagine that she cared for me, the more fool I."

"Well, perhaps so," I agreed. "Anyhow, it's very evident that she did not care for you."

"Yes," he replied, sighing; "that's evident, I suppose. And yet I can't help thinking that she might have cared for me if Bracknell hadn't come down. But there's no good in talking about that now. I shall be off somewhere for the next few months, I think. You couldn't be persuaded to come with me to Switzerland, and perhaps spend the winter in Italy, could you?"

I reminded him that I was not a man of independent fortune, and that my winter would have to be spent in the less agreeable atmosphere of Lincoln's inn, where I had already taken chambers; but I strongly advised him to go away and travel. He had so many friends that he was not likely to be left long without a companion. I fear that he did not find me very sympathetic; and in truth it was all I could do to restrain myself from openly congratulating him upon his escape.

Presently he said that if my mother was well enough to receive him, he would just go and say good morning to her, and I knew better than to accompany him to her room. From that quarter those who were afflicted in mind, body or estate could always count upon obtaining sympathy, if not comfort; and sure enough, when Jim emerged, after an interview of half an hour, he looked so much less inclined to hang himself that I was afraid my mother had committed the imprudence of advising him to try again. But that, it appeared, was a groundless alarm.

"Oh, no," he said, quietly, in answer to my inquiry, "she didn't give me any hope. She was awfully kind, though, and I believe it's quite true that I shall get over this some day. Only I wish Bracknell had been a little more straight about it."

Well, upon the whole, that seemed to be a very proper spirit in which to meet adversity, and I accompanied my friend down stairs, hoping that, after all, he might not be quite as hard hit as I had supposed. But when we reached the front door, whom should we find talking affably to the groom and caressing Jim's horse but Miss Hilda Turner in person!

Jim started violently, while I, for my part, inwardly commended her to the devil; for I could not doubt her purpose in waiting outside in that unseemly way.

"Why did you not come in?" I asked, with a touch of asperity. "I presume you called to see my mother, didn't you?"

"I did," she replied calmly, and never so much as changed color; "but when I saw Jim's horse at the door, I thought I would wait for him and call on Mrs. Maynard some other day. I know it tires her to have more than one visitor at a time. Jim, if you have nothing better to do, you might walk home with me."

"Good heavens!" thought I to myself, "is she going to propose to him?" I took the liberty of raising my eyebrows ostentatiously, but I doubt whether any evolutions which I could have induced my eyebrows to perform would have disturbed her equanimity. She met my gaze with perfect composure, and it was I, not she, who had to look the other way.

The countenance of that foolish Jim expressed mingled surprise, pleasure, and doubt. What was the good of my giving him a surreptitious dig in the back and making grimaces at him when he turned around? Hilda had but to beckon him and he would have gone with her to the world's end. He went with her unhesitatingly to the end of our short avenue, leading his horse; and there they were lost to my gaze. But it was not necessary to be gifted with second sight in order to feel tolerably sure of what was taking place between them after they had vanished; and I returned to the study of the law with misgivings which were only too soon to be justified. An hour or so later, while I was immersed in pleadings, and was cumbering my brain with the absurd jargon of replications, rejoinders, surrejoinders, rebutters, and the like, I heard somebody ride full gallop up to the house, immediately after which my door was burst open, as by a charge of dynamite, and Jim, victorious and triumphant, stood before me once more. One glance at his face was sufficient to show me that it was all up with him.

"You needn't go into ecstasies," I said snappishly; "I know all about it."

"Now, my dear Harry," he remonstrated, "how can you possibly know all about it?"

"At least," said I, "I know that you are engaged to Hilda Turner."

He gave me to understand in reply that such was indeed his good fortune. "And do you know," he continued, "the truth is—it's so glorious that I can hardly believe it, and yet I feel somehow as if I had always been sure of it—the truth is that she has loved me all along!"

"Then," I could not help remarking, "she took the very oddest way of showing her affection that I ever heard of."

Jim said, "Not at all odd; the same kind of thing has often happened before, as everybody knows. It all arose out of my stupid bashfulness. She naturally thought that I couldn't care much about her, since I wouldn't speak out, and so when Bracknell made his offer she accepted him. She says she would have accepted anybody under the circumstances—and I can quite understand it."

Obviously reasoning would be thrown away upon such a lunatic; nevertheless, to set myself straight with my conscience, I endeavored to reason with him.

"It appears, then," said I, "that she sought you out in order to avow her love. If she was not too proud to do that today, why in the world couldn't she have done it a few weeks ago?"

"Good Lord!" ejaculated Jim, "what a low opinion you have of your fellow creatures! Sought me out indeed! Why, my dear fellow, you wouldn't believe what trouble I had to extort the truth from her. What she sought me out for—not that she did seek me out—was to beg me to try and make peace between her father and old Staines. That, of course, led us to speak about Bracknell, and then I couldn't help telling her how long I had loved her, and then at last she admitted that she had only promised to marry him out of pique. But she was very unwilling to accept me, I can tell you. Harry, old chap, you don't know Hilda; she's the sweetest girl in England!"

If she was, I certainly did not know her; but to make such a rejoinder as that would only have been to expose myself to a surrejoinder which it would have been altogether futile to attempt to rebut; so I said what was expected of me with as good a grace as I could command, and as soon as Jim was gone I kicked those odious law books to the other end of the room, in token alike of my abhorrence for them individually, and of my disgust with a state of things which I was powerless to remedy.

CHAPTER IV.

The young couple were, to all appearance, thoroughly satisfied with one another, and their satisfaction was very commonly, if not quite universally, shared by their friends and relatives. Old Turner rubbed his plump white hands, and declared that the wish of his heart was now fulfilled; Lord Staines was so delighted that he could not rest until he had walked over to the rectory and announced his delight; and my mother, though secretly a little disappointed (for Jim was a great favorite of hers), did not hesitate to aver that all was for the best. It is true that she would have said and thought the self same thing if she had just heard me sentenced to be hanged by the neck until I was dead—such being her simple creed. Taking her stand upon certain passages of Scripture, she boldly asserted that it was not for us to judge whether this or that event would be productive of ultimate good or not, and, in short, adopted without reservation the doctrine that whatever is is right.

To fall in with my dear mother's views in this respect has never been possible to me, and amid the general chorus of approval I found some comfort in listening to a dissenting voice which harmonized with my own. It was a very quiet little voice, but it was a sweet one, and was seldom used to utter disparaging remarks about anybody. "Since you ask me," Lady Mildred said, "I am not glad, I am sorry. It seems to me that Hilda is not good enough for Mr. Leigh."

"That," I observed, "is beyond all question."

"Yes; and I don't understand her changing her mind so quickly. Of course it was impossible that Bracknell should marry her; but if it had been possible they might have got on together well enough, perhaps. I am fonder of Bracknell than of anybody else in the world, and I don't know that she is exactly good enough for him either. But he is different from Mr. Leigh. I mean that if he had found out afterward, that Hilda was not quite—quite what he had fancied her, I don't think he would have taken it so much to heart."

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

HALF A DOZEN CHEESE BUYERS ON THEIR DIGNITY.

Attempt to Boycott Mr. Wrighton—The Board Stands by Him—High Prices on the "Bolters'" Market.

The regular fortnightly session of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held in the market building on Tuesday afternoon, when a large representation of salesmen and buyers were present. Messrs. Taylor and Drummond conducted the sale as usual. The offer was the largest ever made on this board, ten thousand two hundred and twenty-five boxes, being the make from this till the end of the season, August, September and October. The buyers present were:—Messrs. Warington, Cook, Flavelle, Wrighton, Dingwall, Brentnell, Green, Bird, Fitzgerald, Hodgson, and a new buyer, Mr. McCarger, of Belleville.

The market opened in a rather stormy manner. A few words will explain what it took quite a while for hot tempers to make clear to the Board. Warrington bought the whole offer at the last meeting. He went to a factory and pronounced the cheese to be bad. Mr. Wrighton, the Board's arbitrator, was sent for and he said that thirty out of the forty cheese should be taken. This riled the buyer very much and he moved a motion that Mr. Wrighton resign the position of arbitrator. McCarger, Cook and others held it an injustice for them to buy cheese here when an opponent at the Board meetings held it in his hands to say that they should take cheese whether good or bad.

Mr. Warringtons motion was not seconded and was not put.

The Secretary said that they would proceed with the sale.

Mr. WARRINGTON—If you do you won't get a bid from me.

Mr. PRESIDENT—Now, gentlemen, we will ask for your bids.

Here Mr. Warrington and his following, Messrs. Cook, Hodgson, McCarger, Bird and Fitzgerald, got up and left the room.

Mr. WARRINGTON—You can sell your cheese to Mr. Wrighton.

Mr. PRESIDENT (quite unruffled)—Now, gentlemen, we'll ask for your bids.

Mr. FLAVELLE—You have a bid in, I believe.

The PRESIDENT announced that Mr. Leary had sent in a bid of 12 for August, 12 for September and 12¼ for October. Mr. Flavelle bid 12¼ for selection for the three months. Mr. Wrighton bid 11¾ for August.

During a lull Mr. Wrighton took the opportunity to make an explanation. He said that three times he had been called to arbitrate on Mr. Warington's cheese. Twice he had given judgment in his favor, and this time it was only a matter of ten cheese. Mr. Cook, Mr. Warington's buyer had acknowledged his willingness to take twenty, and it wouldn't have been much out of the way to take ten more. It seemed to him that to-day's shuffling was a combination of the Belleville men to break up the Board. As for McCarger, he thought it was entirely out of place for him to talk so much since he had never bought a cheese on the Board.

The SECRETARY—We have the utmost confidence in Mr. Wrighton's judgments. We were asked to appoint our arbitrator and we unanimously chose Mr. Wrighton. We mean to abide by him. (Applause.) We do not propose to allow strangers to come here and dictate to the people of Peterborough. Nor do we intend to allow the government of this board to go into the hands of interested parties. (Applause.)

Mr. EDWARDS, salesman for Warminster, pointed out that Mr. Warrington need not have taken Mr. Wrighton's judgments. The rules of the Board permitted the buyers to choose one to act with Mr. Wrighton.

Mr. FLAVELLE said that this was a weak day in cheese, and that these buyers did not want the cheese. If there was money in it they would be here now.

Mr. DINGWALL offered 11¼ for Peterborough's first half of August. Mr. Flavelle offered 11¾ for selections for first half.

Mr. BRENTNELL advised the salesmen to sell.

Mr. FLAVELLE named his selections as follows: Warsaw, Warminster, Lakefield, North Smith and Central Smith. The salesmen sold on contract for the three months.

Subsequently Mr. Bird, who had left the room with the Warrington faction, returned and made a deal for Cherry Grove, Lilly Lake and Trewern, contracting for the three months at 12¾.

Mr. Flavelle bid 11¾ for the first half of August of the remaining factories. Keene, Central, Otonabee, Union, Myrtle and Glenthorn accepted.

An offer of 11¾ was made by Flavelle to the Victoria men for the first half of August, but some refused and the offer was withdrawn.

In the meantime a market had been established by the "bolters" outside of the building. Lively work was done, as the contracts showed. Cook and Warington contracted with South Dummer for the three months at 12¼, 12¼ and 13 cents, respectively. Contracts were made by the same parties for Westwood, Norwood and Melrose Abbey at 12¾, 12¾ and 13, and when the Victoria men came out they were button-holed, and Mariposa, Bobcaygeon, West Ops and Cambrey were picked up by Warington and Cook at 12¾, 12¾ and 13.

These salesmen selling outside the Board are each liable, by the rules of the Board, to a fine of $25 each, or $200 altogether.

As reports were brought to the Board the salesmen began to speculate as to what would be done with the fines. One festive salesman proposed having a big "blow out," oysters, etc.

The Board will hold another session in two weeks, but it will be small, owing to the number of contracts that have been made.

AN INDIAN TREATY.

Canadian and American Indians Agree to Cease Hostilities.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The British Minister has handed the Secretary of the Interior, through the State Department, a communication from the Dominion Government, embodying a report from Inspector Saunders, of the Mounted Police, upon a trip made by him in June to Fort Assiniboine, Montana. Last year, in one of the raids of the Canadian Bloods and American Gros Ventres upon each other, back and forth across the international boundary, the latter killed 6 Blood Indians and stole 35 horses belonging to this tribe, with which they escaped to their reservation. The authorities at Fort Assinaboine arrested and gaoled the guilty Gros Ventres and recovered the horses, which have been held ever since. Inspector Saunders' trip into the United States was for the purpose of recovering these horses. He took with him Mr. Pocklington, Indian Agent for the Bloods, and a half dozen Blood chiefs. The party was met at the boundary by a detail of United States' soldiers and conducted to Fort Assinaboine, whence they were taken to the Gros Ventres' agency at Fort Belknap, where the Blood chiefs concluded a treaty of peace with their old enemies, no reference being made to the Bloods who were killed. The horses were then turned over by the authorities to Inspector Saunders, and as the Bloods had in their powwow seemed willing to let the matter drop, the Gros Ventres who had been gaoled for a year were released. Inspector Saunders says it has been reported to him that the Sioux and other Indians on the Fort Peck reservation are determined to cross the boundary and raid the Bloods at an early day, but that he believes there will be no further trouble between the Boods and Gros Ventres.

THE ROTUNDA DEMONSTRATION.

The Effect it Will Have—The League's Friends Take Comfort.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The indignation meeting to protest against the Government's proclamation of the Irish National League, held in the Rotunda at Dublin last night, was an enormous affair. The proclamation of the League has certainly given great impetus to the work of that organization and applications for membership from Liberals in England, Wales and even Scotland are constantly pouring in. These applications represent all classes of social standing and present a remarkable unanimity of opinion and sentiment. The applications will be considered at the next regular fortnightly meeting of the League which will be held on Tuesday next, August 30th, when all will be formally enrolled. How much influence the meeting will have in shaping the future policy of the London Government and the Dublin executive cannot now be even approximately estimated, but it is safe to assume that the results of the demonstration will not prove disadvantageous to the league.

THE LONDON FAILURES.

Depositors of the Bank of London not Likely to Lose Anything.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—There are no new developments in regard to the Bank of London. The opinion gains ground, however, that the bill holders and depositors will lose nothing. The Directors of the Ontario Investment Association held a long session yesterday. Messrs. Jewell and Booker, professional accountants, who have been thoroughly investigating the books of the association, informed the Directors that serious irregularities had been discovered in the records of transactions made by the late President, Henry Taylor.

THE POPE'S JUBILEE.

Preparations to Begin in Rome Next Month for the Celebration.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The preparations for the celebration of the Pope's jubilee will begin at Rome in September on an extensive scale. Among the features of the celebration will be an an exhibition which will be formally opened in the presence of the Pope, Dom Pedro I., Emperor of Brazil, and the envoys of all the sovereigns of Europe. An ode to the pope will be written by M. Gounod, and presented to His Holiness on the anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood on December 23rd, which day will be the principal one of the celebration. It is the intention of those into whose hands the arrangements for the celebration have been entrusted, to surround the occasion with a display of magnificence surpassing any event that has occurred in Europe with the century, and no expense will be spared to achieve the results aimed at.

WAS IT SUICIDE?

"Alex." Slavin Found Dead in the Woods in Dummer Township.

Alex. Slavin, a ward of the township of Dummer, was found dead in the woods near Mr. D. McMullin's on Thursday last. Mr. Alex. Small, at whose place deceased boarded, gave our reporter the following account of the finding of the body and the movements of the deceased previous to his disappearance. Deceased lived in a shanty a few yards distant from Mr. Small's residence and his meals were handed in to him. Tuesday forenoon he visited his sister, Mrs. D. McMullin. During the day she had occasion to visit a neighbor and on returning found that her brother had taken his departure, leaving his walking stick behind. As he had frequently left in his manner she thought nothing of it, supposing that he had returned to his boarding house. Wednesday morning, Mr. Small became alarmed on finding that his boarder had not returned and at once made inquires among the people of the neighborhood, but could find no trace of him. Thursday morning a search party was organized and the woods in the vicinity of his sister's residence scoured. Finally a man named Patterson discovered his dead body lying at the foot of a large tree in a lonely part of the woods. Beside him lay a large black bottle and tin cup. Although the deceased was a heavy drinker the bottle did not smell as though there had been whiskey in it. Before lying down he had taken off his boots and socks and placed them neatly at the foot of a tree; carefully lay down within reach of the bottle and cup. Mr. Small's opinion is that the bottle contained arsenic and that deceased deliberately committed suicide. It is supposed that the poison was procured in Norwood as deceased was seen in the village the week before. Previous to his coming to Norwood he had asked a neighbor to bring him a gallon of whiskey and some arsenic, but was refused. The circumstances all point to deliberate suicide. The deceased had no home, was never married, and from what could be learned of him was friendless. His remains were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery on Thursday. As the deceased received no spiritual consolation in death, the usual burial service was not observed at the grave.—Norwood Register.

Another McGlynn Adherent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—It is announced that Rev. Sylvester Malone will be on the platform with Rev. Dr. McGlynn on Friday evening, when the Doctor will lecture before division 3, Ancient Order of Hibernians, in Brooklyn, next Friday evening, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the society. His brother, Edward Malone, M. D., will introduce Dr. McGlynn. When asked if he regarded this as consistent with his standing as a good Catholic, he said: "Certainly I do. In my estimation and that of my brother, the Rev. Sylvester Malone, Dr. McGlynn was unjustly excommunicated, and as good Catholics we must follow our own conscience, which forbids us from severing our connection with him."

Meeting of Irish Patriots.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—At a meeting of Irish patriots last night, Prof. Mezzeroff in the chair, the condition of Ireland was discussed and the opinion prevailed that the time had come when the vast sums sent from America could be put to better use than supporting English landlords. It was unanimously resolved to form a new organization to render Ireland more effective assistance in the near future. The new organization is to be known as the Patriotic Irish Exiles. Prof. Mezzeroff was elected President. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and prepare a manifesto.

The Royal Military College.

KINGSTON, Aug. 24.—The rumor revived at Ottawa and to the effect that Col. Oliver will retire from command of the Royal Military College and be succeeded by Sir Fred. Middleton is not credited here. Col. Oliver himself regards the report as the outcome of idle gossip and as highly improbable. His connection with the Imperial army is now such that his services are at the disposal of the Canadian Government as long as they are desired.

The Indian Muddle.

OMAHA, Aug. 24.—General Crooks received a despatch from Major Randlett, in command of Fort Duchesne, Utah, in which he gives an account of an unsuccessful attempt to find Col. Row, and negotiate with him. Gen. Crooks said he had received no direct information that there had been an outbreak, and is strongly inclined to the belief that there is nothing in it.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE DUBLIN MEETING.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Daily News says the meeting at the Rotunda in Dublin last night marks an epoch in the history of England and Ireland. The attendance of English members of Parliament is an emphatic testimony that a real union has at length been achieved by the most illustrious of English statesmen. The English members of Parliament present advised Irishmen to be calm and to refrain from a collision with the law. Mr. Dillon said that, in spite of proclamations, the League would continue to exercise what Mr. Balfour calls intimidation. Instead of advising tenants to be reasonable they would advise them in future to double their demands. Mr. O'Brien said that no Irishman was worth a pinch of salt unless he trampled the proclamation under foot, but he advised calmness in the struggle for freedom.

SUEZ AND THE NEW HEBRIDES.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—In the House of Commons last evening, Sir James Ferguson, replying to a question, refused to admit that the settlement of the Suez Canal neutrality question depended upon a concession with respect to the New Hebrides. The negotiations with France are proceeding in an amicable spirit.

FRANCE AND GERMANY.

BERLIN, Aug. 24.—The Cologne Gazette says that negotiations will shortly be opened between France and Germany regarding the expulsion of natives of the one country from the other. France, it is understood, will only agree to negotiate after the opening of the Chamber of Deputies, and in the meantime reserves the right to retaliate for the expulsions that have taken place in Alsace.

ENGLANDS OPPOSITION.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The Soleil says England's opposition to France's annexation of the New Hebrides in due to a desire for compensation, which France could easily grant and quickly terminate the difficulty.

ENNIS DEFIANT.

DUBLIN, Aug. 24.—The Ennis Board of Guardians has adopted an official resolution defying the Government's proclamation against the National League and exhorting all boards of guardians to advance the principles of the League.

A PRINCE DIES OF GRIEF.

PARIS, Aug 24.—The Russian Prince Pierre Wittgenstein has died at Kanleon, near Brest, of grief for the loss of his wife the daughter of a Breton fisherman, whom he had educated. He leaves his vast fortune to Princess Hohenlohe.

PEACE MEMORIAL COMMENDED.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Telegraph highly commends the American peace memorial and says that there should not be a question of sufficient gravity to justify, under any circumstances, a war between two great English-speaking nations, common in blood, language and literature. If the memorial is successful, the Telegraph says, it might lead to the establishment of a system of European internal arbitration.

THE BULGARIAN MINISTRY.

SOFIA, Aug 24.—MM. Stolloff and Grekoff have refused to join the ministry which will apparently be composed of non-entities, as all the leading men of the country are holding aloof.

DON'T LIKE ONE ANOTHER.

BERLIN, Aug 24.—The Cologne Gazette says the public opinion in Russia is highly suspicious of Germany and that the strained relations between the two countries is due to this popular antipathy.

THE CHOLERA.

NAPLES, Aug 24.—During the past 48 hours here were reported in this city 30 new cases of cholera and 15 deaths.

CANADIAN MATTERS.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Times, referring to the Manitoba railway and Canadian tariff question, says: "The position altogether seems to be one in which the heedless haste of a few persons must precipitate the solution of a very extensive question, in which the whole future of the Dominion is bound up."

FURTHER NEWS OF STANLEY.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—A letter has been received from Dr. Parke, dated Arawimi, June 20, stating that Stanley and all of the Europeans comprised in his party are well. The followers of Stanley, the letter says, were entrenched in a camp affording all necessary advantages, and the whole party would begin, on June 28, a forced march of 400 miles to Wadelai, where they would meet Emin Bey. These advices are one day later than any others that have been received, and completely overthrow the possibilities of the correctness of the reports announcing Mr. Stanley's death, which nobody now believes to be true.

RUSSO-GERMAN AGREEMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Standard's Berlin correspondent telegraphs that he has learned from the highest authority that Germany has agreed to support Russia's Bulgarian policy on condition that Russia will bind herself to remain neutral in the event of difficulty between France and Germany.

A RUSSIAN PROPOSAL.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 24.—Russia's reply to the last circular of the Porte suggested that an Ottoman commission and a Russian general should go to Sofia to secure conjointly and in a legal manner the election of a new Sobranje which should elect a new Prince. This proposal being submitted to the powers, was sanctioned by France and Germany, but disapproved of by the other powers, who advised the Porte to adopt a policy of moderation and to await events.

THE PRICE OF SUGAR.

WE will not pretend to decide whether the price fixed by the sugar refiners is or is not excessive, for we have not at present before us the exact data, of somewhat complicated nature, on which alone an honest judgment could be formed. But we would call attention to the fact that those journals which are raising an outcry on the subject in order to assail our tariff policy, which their political leader dare not directly attack, are deliberately "doctoring" the figures they use. They parade the amount of duty imposed on imported refined sugar and then assert that the Canadian refiners are protected to that extent, and advance their prices almost to the limit thus allowed them. This is a manifest misrepresentation to create discontent on false grounds. Besides the duty on refined sugars there is a duty on raw sugars, and the protection to our refiners is obviously only the difference between the duty on the raw and the manufactured goods. The amount of this protection is further reduced by the advantages given to foreign refiners in bonuses on manufacturing or so-called drawbacks on exportation. As to the fact that some special importations from Scotch refineries have been sold at a fraction under Canadian prices, it is by no means conclusive proof that the latter are too high. It is well known that manufacturers will make special reductions in such cases to try if they can extend their market, and British refiners have a great incentive to this course in the fact that they have been almost ruined by the unfair competition of imported bonused sugars. It is also well known that in Great Britain it is a common habit of grocers to sell sugar at cost or even at a loss to induce custom for their other goods on which they rely for a profit. The importing grocers may very possibly be selling at cost with the double object of carrying on their dispute with the refiners and advertising their general business.

We would be glad to see light thrown upon this subject by some authority well versed in the intricate details. In the meantime the critics have thrown grave doubt on the justice of their contentions by their dishonest manipulation of the tariff figures.

This at least the public knows, that the sugar they buy is far cheaper and also better than it was previous to the adoption of the National Policy, while the revenue is larger and employment is given to a great number of Canadians rather than to foreigners.

"RULE OR RUIN."

EVER since the adoption of the National Policy by the people of Canada the Opposition minority have never ceased to show themselves inimical to it. There has, it must be admitted, been no sameness or consistency in their methods. Sometimes they have posed as Freetraders, opposed to all duties not absolutely required to produce a revenue, and especially to such duties as would prevent competition of foreign goods with home manufactures. Sometimes again they have professed to sanction a high tariff because necessary to meet our expenditures, but with hints that it would be modified as soon as possible. Now they are throwing their freetrade doctrines overboard, and urging upon Canada the adoption of the higher protective duties of the United States. Sometimes they opposed the N. P. openly, and sometimes by a side wind.

But though thus inconsistent in their methods, the have all along been consistent in their aim. This has been throughout to deter capitalists from investing their money in Canadian industries, by persuading them that our tariff policy was unstable and would soon be changed to their disadvantage. Thus they aimed, with a certain degree of success, at checking the beneficial effect of the National Policy, preventing the development of our trade and of our resources, and by injuring the country rendering its people discontented. "Rule or Ruin" has been the constant motto of these unpatriotic schemers.

WHEREVER the hired slanderer of the Detroit News pursues his disreputable avocation, there follows a plentiful crop of repudiations of his misrepresentations. He has been to Belleville, and his mistatements in regard to the annexation views attributed to Mr. Carman of the Belleville Ontario (Reform), Mr. Burdette, M.P., and other gentlemen are immediately exposed. So it is wherever he goes. Honest men whom he tries to interview should either order him away like any other noted blackguard, or should decline to speak a word in his presence without trustworthy witnesses as the only safe precaution in dealing with such a proved falsifier. The little knot of advocates of commercial and political annexation should be proud of their tool. Their methods show the nature of their agitation.

SOMETHING UNIQUE IN WARFARE.

A Struggle in Which the Old Were Pitted Against the Young Men.

Dr. Wolf, the explorer of the Sankuru river, has just told some curious facts about the Baluba tribe, who are becoming distinguished among all the millions of the Congo basin for their eagerness to accept from the whites all the ways of living and the information that they think will benefit or improve them. Long before the whites knew them they were regarded by the neighboring tribes as a most remarkable people, and they are keeping up their reputation.

Until within the past fifteen years the Baluba kept themselves strictly separate from their neighbors. They had no intercourse whatever with any other tribe. This is very unusual, for the tribes throughout Africa, if not quarreling with their neighbors, generally have many commercial dealings with them, and even in time of war the women of the hostile tribes sometimes mingle in perfect unity, exchanging their commodities.

The young men among the Baluba finally decided that it would be better for their tribe to cultivate relations with their neighbors and open the country to traders with other tribes. They had the support of their chief, but the old men and graybeards of the tribe set their faces sternly against the innovation. With the conservatism of old age they declared that such a step would ruin the tribe. As long as they lived, they said, they would never consent that the Baluba should mix with other peoples.

Each side was determined to have its way, and the quarrel grew more and more bitter, until finally it resulted in civil war. It was one of the most remarkable wars ever waged for on one side were ranked the old men, the fathers and counselors of the tribe, while on the other side fought the youth and lusty strength of the Baluba. The sons were pitted against their elders, but in this case as in others that might be mentioned, conservatism was simply unprogressive narrowmindedness, and wisdom was with the younger party.

The struggle was short and furious. It resulted in the complete overthrow of the old men. The hatred engendered by this unnatural war was so intense that the vanquished were nearly exterminated. Almost all the old men were killed or were thrown with their women into the Lulus. Then the young men opened their doors to commerce.—New York Sun.

Vest Button Photography.

The process of instantaneous photographing is rapidly becoming an evil. We hear talk already about specialists in photography for instantaneous pictures since the "Detective Camera," as it is called, was put upon the market. The box is so small that it can be carried anywhere without the slightest inconvenience, and, as the little lens at the bottom is always ready for use, an instantaneous picture can be taken at any desired moment.

In Germany, Herr Stirn recently produced before a photographic society enlargements to a size of forty centimeters from such pictures, and all were remarkably distinct and well defined. These plates can also be taken at different distances and always sharply outlined. Young men take their lady friends on promenade to be unconsciously photographed. People, young and old, who have never entered an artist's studio or a photographic gallery will be astonished to see their pictures freely circulated. Most of all, it is to be feared that the legitimate business of the photographer will be injured by these cameras. Any possible mania or desire for photos can soon be gratified at trifling expense and after a short term of practice by means of this invention. Photographs can soon be so multiplied as to become a positive nuisance, and from the various considerations that enter into the matter, it does not seem so very easy to answer our query—"What next?"—American Lithographer.

A Fine Melon.

"I want the biggest and best watermelon in that lot," he said as he surveyed a great pile of watermelons in front of a Woodward avenue grocery.

"Yes, sir—here it is—best melon I've seen this year."

"Plug it," was the brusque command.

"Yes, sir—splendid red core. Shall I put it on ice?"

The purchaser drew from his pocket a flask of port wine and proceeded to pour the contents into the orifice. The melon readily absorbed the liquid, and when the plug was replaced the man chuckled: "He! he! he! I want that melon sent to ——, the temperance fanatic! Say nothing, and it will be a big joke on him."

A couple of days later the man came around to the store again and asked:

"Well, the melon was sent up?"

"Oh, yes."

"And the boy didn't give my little plot away?"

"Oh, no, but we heard from it."

"You did! He! he! he! What did he say?"

"He and his family were off up the lake, but the hired girl and coachman said it was the finest melon they ever put tooth into!"—Detroit Free Press.

An Ex-Manager's Superstition.

"I'll give you a tip," said J. F. Donnelly, formerly of the management of the Bijou opera house, in New York, recently. "If a man offers you a fair price for your horse or dog, or any favorite or pet of the kind, take it. I am superstitious upon that point. I once lost a valuable horse the day after I had refused a big offer for him, and on Saturday last a man fell in love with my Irish collie, and I actually denied him when he rubbed a wad of $400 under my nose! The dog was a great pet in my household. I brought him from Ireland when a pup. Yesterday he got caught by the cowcatcher of a Sea Beach road locomotive and was instantly killed. I wish now that I had accepted the man's roll of bills. Don't you ever refuse an offer under like circumstances. You watch the papers. You will notice when the death is announced of a great racer that the day before his owner had been offered a fabulous price for him. It isn't any reportorial finishing touch. It's a fact. I know, and I give you the tip."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

DUPLICITY EXPOSED.

Now, this will not do: Mr. Wiman has told us that the farmers of Ontario are in debt and unable to make a living; that their farms are heavily mortgaged; and that unless the United States takes pity on us, and remit the duty on eggs, which does not exist, we shall all probably starve to death. In the face of this, the Toronto Globe has the audacity to assert that for many miles around London the farmers are "solid and wealthy men." THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

These were precisely my sentiments, but as no one had the remotest intention of consulting either me or Lady Mildred, we could not do better than keep them to ourselves, and we kept them to ourselves accordingly.

Of Bracknell I heard nothing, nor, I suppose, did Jim receive congratulations from that quarter, although I did not like to ask him the question. No doubt he had forgiven his old friend, as he could well afford to do, being more or less in the position of a conquerer. His marriage was appointed to take place in the ensuing month of January, and soon after hearing of this arrangement I left home to be formally called to the bar and to take possession of my chambers, where, I am thankful to say, that my legal library has remained unconsulted from that day to this. For then it was that I received my first substantial encouragement to persevere with those literary labors which have since made life pleasant to me, and have even enabled me to afford an occasional pat of butter with my bread.

A few days before Christmas I seated myself in the down express from Paddington, being bound for Cranfield, with the twofold object of spending that festive season at home and assisting at Jim's subsequent nuptials. Just as the train was starting a young man of fashionable exterior jumped into the carriage, tumbled over my legs, apologized, and then said, "Oh, it's you, Maynard, is it? Going down to the old shop?"

I replied that such was my destination, but that I presumed it wasn't his—not that I really presumed anything of the kind, but because I thought that, taking everything into consideration, Bracknell would have shown better taste by remaining absent from the paternal abode at that particular juncture.

"Oh, yes, I'm going to Staines Court," he returned. "Why shouldn't I?"

"If you don't know, I'm sure I don't," I answered.

"My dear fellow," said Bracknell, lighting a cigar, "if you were to be bound to avoid every woman with whom you have ever been in love, your life would be a perpetual game of hide and seek. In fact, the thing really couldn't be done. How is that dear old duffer Jim getting on? Lord, what an existence he has before him! It was a bad day for him when the governor refused to let me take Miss Hilda off his hands. That girl will end by breaking his heart, you'll see."

"She does not," I observed, "appear to have broken yours."

Bracknell smiled, but it struck me that he also winced ever so slightly. "Women are all the same," said he; "a man who allowed one of them to break his heart would be a great fool. Jim is a great fool."

"If being too chivalrous for the world that we live in is being a fool, he certainly is one," I agreed; and I hardly know what prompted me to add: "I hope you will always be as loyal to him as he is to you, Bracknell."

It was rather a silly speech to make, and perhaps also rather an impertinent one, but Bracknell did not appear to resent it. He stared for a moment and then said: "I suppose he didn't like my cutting him out, eh? It was rough upon him, I admit; but how the deuce was I to help it?"

Being unable to make any concise reply to that question, I only answered: "Well, it is all over now, and the less said about it the better."

So, by way of changing the subject, my companion began to entertain me with an account of a steeplechase in which he had recently taken part, and this, with occasional breaks, lasted us to our journey's end.

I should have liked to witness the meeting between Bracknell and Hilda, but that pleasure was denied me. On Christmas day I dined at Staines Court, my mother, who was unable to leave her room, insisting upon my accepting the invitation which had been sent to me to join the party assembled there. The house was full of Henleys and Beauchamps, relations of Lord Staines', who were unknown to me; but the very first thing that I saw on entering the drawing room was a little group, composed of Hilda, Lady Mildred, Bracknell and Jim. They were conversing together in the most friendly manner, and had evidently made up their minds to let bygones be bygones. Jim beckoned to me, and very soon drew me aside to whisper, "Isn't Bracknell a good fellow? I don't believe there's another man in England who would have taken things as he has done and come down here just to show us that he bears no malice!"

It might be that Bracknell had come to Staines Court for that amiable purpose, but I had some difficulty in supposing it. In the first place, he can hardly have thought that any one would suspect him of bearing malice, and in the second, he might so easily have written a letter calculated to allay such apprehensions. There, however, he was, chatting to Hilda as unconcernedly as ever; and even if he was bent upon mischief—which, after all, did not seem very likely—it was certain that Jim would never believe it of him.

At a late hour somebody—I suppose it must have been Bracknell—suggested a game of pool. About ten of us, including two or three ladies, adjourned to the billiard room, and then it was that I was able to take a few mental notes of Hilda's demeanor toward her former lover. Her position was not a very comfortable one, because everybody in the room knew that she had consented to marry Bracknell only a few months before, and she must have known quite well that they knew it. Her serenity, however, was not ruffled, nor did she fall into any of the mistakes which she might so easily have made, and which a woman of more feeling could hardly have avoided making. She neither shunned Bracknell nor thrust herself upon his notice; she was neither overfriendly with him nor the reverse; When he spoke to her she answered him civilly, and once or twice she even addressed him first, but indeed she was in an unusually quiet mood and spoke very little to anybody. If there was a criticism to be made upon her, it might have been that she was just a trifle too affectionate with Jim, whispering a word or too in his ear occasionally, as she passed round the table, and glancing quickly at him for applause whenever she had achieved a brilliant stroke.

After the game had been going on for some little time Bracknell came and threw himself down on the sofa beside me. "By George!" he exclaimed, in an undertone which had a ring of vexation in it, "that girl has no more heart than a stone!"

"That," replied I, "is no news to me and no business of yours."

"And to think," he went on, without heeding my remark, "that she has spent the whole of her life in a country parsonage! So much for rural simplicity! Why, there isn't one of these Belgravian women who could hold a candle to her for coolness!"

I don't know what he had expected her to say or do, but he was evidently annoyed, and added that he wouldn't be in Jim's shoes for a trifle. He was obliging me with his views upon feminine nature in general, which, I am sorry to say, were too disrespectful and too crudely expressed to bear repetition, when somebody called out to him that it was his turn to play.

He had a long and rather difficult shot to make, and at the instant when he was drawing back his cue Hilda all of a sudden stepped close behind him, so that he struck her sharply in the side with the butt end of it. She gave a little cry and fell back upon the sofa where I was sitting. Bracknell, full of apologies and alarm, dropped his cue and peered anxiously at the blanched cheeks of the sufferer; Jim came tearing up from the other end of the room; somebody ran for a glass of water; the rest of the players crowded round the sofa, and we had quite a little scene. At length Hilda got back her breath, and, smiling faintly, assured us that she was not really hurt.

"It is nothing—nothing at all," she said. "It was my own fault entirely, and I shall be all right in a few minutes. Please go on with the game and don't look at me."

To this day I can't feel sure that she did it on purpose. If she did, I am glad to think that she received a considerably smarter dig in the ribs than she had bargained for. In any case, this trifling incident had the effect of producing a complete alteration in Bracknell's humor. He was naturally concerned at having hurt a lady, and it may be that his self reproach was increased by the recollection that he had been saying hard things of her the minute before. He remained sitting beside her after she had gently pushed Jim away, and the others, at her request, had resumed their game, and I saw that a rapid interchange of words took place between them. Their colloquy was soon interrupted; but it had lasted long enough to bring a slightly increased color into Bracknell's cheeks and a pensive look into his eyes. Knowing what I did of Miss Hilda, I was convinced that she must either wish to subjugate him once more or to avenge herself upon him; and, all things considered, there seemed to be a very fair chance of her succeeding in her aim, whatever that might be.

(To be Continued.)

A DUBLIN OPINION ON FLAX.

In his report to the Department of Agriculture Mr. Thomas Connolly, the Government Emigration Agent at Dublin, makes the following reference to flax growing in Canada:

From Russia, Germany, Holland, Belgium and other countries, England imported this year, 1,287,034 cwts. of dressed and undressed flax, valued at £2,416,118; and of hemp, dressed and undressed, from Russia, Germany, Italy, British East Indies, Philipine Islands and other countries, 1,213,857 cwts., valued at £1,726,822. Flax and linseed from Russia, British East Indies and other countries, 2,081,283 qrs., valued at £4,366,998, and oil seed cakes, 296,530 tons, valued at £1,287,951. With a climate and soil suitable for the growth of flax, I think Canada should figure in these imports. However, except the countries named, all other countries only supplied of flax 32,407 cwts., valued at £61,485; of hemp, 207,829 cwts., valued at £267,412; and of flax and linseed, 180,244 qrs., valued at £414,643. The Russian area under flax cultivation exceeds 2,000,000 acres, the annual production of which is estimated at 270,000 to 300,000 tons, of which about 250,000 tons are available for shipment, and at the low price of £40 per ton. Russia receives annually for its flax cultivation £10,000,000. Belgium, which has been pressing her sales of flax for some time in England, has an aggregate breath of some 250,000 acres under flax, which, by good cultivation, produce an average yield of 450 lbs. to the acre. France is the most productive cultivator of flax, its average yield per acre being 500 lbs. from a breadth varying from 160,000 to 170,000 acres. However, France consumes its own flax in the mills and factories of Dunkirk and its vicinity.

Although the soil and climate of Ireland for flax cultivation is not excelled by any country, and so far as Europe is concerned Ireland is the birth-place of flax spinning and weaving, as well as of flax growing, yet there were only 127,865 acres under flax, with an average prodution of 400 lbs. to the acre. The average prices in the Ulster markets ranged from 43s. 6d. to 61s. per cwt., while the same weight of wheat might be bought for 5s. 10½d. to 6s. 10d. The area under flax has been increased 38,640 acres during the last three years, and no doubt it will continue to increase while the prices of other crops are so low.

Therefore, I cannot understand why the cultivation of flax is almost neglected in Canada, where there are so many people from the north of Ireland who must thoroughly understand its cultivation and preparation for market.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

Water Works.

Up to the present about three quarters of a mile of water works mains have been laid on the different streets this year, but a great deal remains to be done before the season closes. At present the men are engaged in running a line of pipe from London street north on Aylmer street to Smith street, and down Smith to George street. A line is to be laid on Stewart street, from Sherbrooke to Wolfe, and on Dalhousie from Bethune street to Stewart street.

Personal.

Dr. S. P. Ford, of Norwood, has been appointed by the Dominion Councillor, District Deputy for Peterborough of the Royal Templars of Temperance.

Mr. A. F. Hoover, and Mrs. Hoover, have returned home after having spent a pleasant three weeks in the western part of the Province. Mr. Hoover will be ready to meet his class in pianoforte tuition on September 1st.

Paragon Picnic.

Father Kelity's Paragon Picnic at Bridgenorth on Thursday, Sept. 1st, promises to be the picnic of the season. All the prominent men of town and country intend to be there. The Peterborough Base Ball Club will give an exhibition of their prowess and display the silver cup they intend to capture from the Bas Ball Club of Lindsay. By all means let everybody attend the Paragon Picnic. Its object is one that everybody may sympathize with, the formation of a free library for the Township of Ennismore.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

Success at Toronto.

Lieut. W. H. Hill won a five dollar prize in the "Tait-Brassey" match, in the Ontario Rifle Association series. He stood fourteenth in a list of 75 winners, with a score of 76, the highest made being 82. Pte. W. A. Bell won a four dollar prize in the same match, which was restricted to the active militia. The Peterborough representatives have done very well and creditably represented the marksmen of the town. The Toronto World says:—"The Peterborough delegation at the butts have done remarkably well, in fact no other town can exhibit a better showing than that made by Messrs. Hill, Bell and Fitzgerald, the gentlemen from that place. All three have taken prizes in the different matches, Lindsay has a large representation, and the Peterborough men think it is their excessive modesty that has prevented them from taking a front pew." Peterborough will send a heavy team to Ottawa, to compete in the Dominion match. They intend to make a decent and "scoop" the prize list.

CRICKET.

The Lambs Defeat the First Eleven by Ten Runs.

On Wednesday afternoon a cricket match was played on the P. A. A. A. grounds between the first eleven of the Cricket Club and "Bill Wrighton's Lambs."

The lambs were very uneasy as to the result and some of them were known to have done some "bowling" before the game commenced, so as to get their courage up. Mr. Wrighton's faith in his team, however, was unshaken. He laid himself out to lay the eleven low; and low they were laid as the following score shows:—

After the match there was the usual hilarity. Mr. Wrighton is of opinion that with a little practice he can get up a team of eleven lambs which will do the first eleven up.

Mr. Minore was going to move a resolution of condolence with the first eleven, but on second thought he did'nt.

The lambs went down street two and two inwardly singing

Wrighton had a team of lambs
At cricket they did play
They laid the first eleven out
And then yelled "name the day" for the next match. This was sung to the tune of Yankee Doodle.

The Idyl Wild Picnic.

The picnic held at Idyl Wild on Wednesday under the auspices of the Harwood R C. Church was a success in every respect. The Golden Eye left the Wolfe street wharf at 7.30 o'clock with a good crowd on board. The excursionists were delighted with the music supplied while going down the river by Prof. Doucet's orchestra, and enjoyed themselves in dancing on the palace scow. At Idyl Wild the number from Peterborough was augmented by boat loads from Cobourg, Harwood and Hastings. The principal events of the day were the contests for the gold headed cane between Dr. Collins, of Peterborough, and Dr. Edmondson, of Harwood, and the gold watch between Miss Wade, of Harwood, and Miss Howell, of Cobourg. The elections were very exciting. Dr. Collins, however, was declared elected to carry the cane. He won the cane by $244.00 to $220.00. The gold watch was won by Miss Wade by $200.00 to $196 00. Coming home on the Golden Eye the cane was tied on the bow of the boat, and remained there till the wharf was reached. Dr. Collins has reason to feel proud at winning so handsome a trophy. The cane is of solid ebony, with the head of gold beautifully ornamented with embossment and plain diamond panels.

North West Missions.

The Committee of the Peterborough Auxiliary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society (St. Paul's Church), hereby notify its members, the congregation, and friends generally that the box of winter clothing, &c., for the Missionary Stations in the North West, must be forwarded from here in September and that contributions of the following articles will all be acceptable:—The supply being more needed for the women and children than for the men, all kinds of warm material, woollen underware and flannel, socks, stockings, mitts, mufflers, yarn and knitting needles as well as cast off clothing in good condition or repaired, will be appropriate, while blankets and quilts or comforters are urgently required in all the reserves. Parcels will be received by Mr. W. W. Johnston at his store, George street. It is particularly requested that these be distinctly marked "for North West."

Canton Peterborough No. 10.

Nineteen members of the Canton assembled at the Old Music Hall on Wednesday evening, and were put through their facings. When the uniforms arrive and are donned by this splendidly built lot of Chevaliers, Canton Peterborough No. 10, will have few peers in Canada. At the conclusion of the drill Chevalier Morris was appointed Standard Bearer of the Canton, and a right good one he will make. "Bill" says he will lead them on to victory and wishes the ladies to understand that they cannot put to much "fixings" on the banner they are going to present to the Canton. Wednesday evening was selected as the regular weekly drill night, and other minor business transacted, when the Canton was dismissed.

Brick.

The brickyards in the vicinity of Peterborough are doing a good business this year. The local demand is supplied wholly by local factories, and a large number of orders have been filled coming from outside places. Up to the present about 3,000,000 bricks have been turned out.

The Fair.

Director Tully is now on the road billing the Peterborough Central Exhibition. This fall's week's fair promises to eclipse all others.

The Rate.

A meeting of the Finance Committee was held on Wednesday evening, when among other things considered was that of the rate of taxation for the present year. A rough estimate was made and it was thought that the rate would probably be struck at 12 7-10 mills on the dollar.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

The Hangman Cheated.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 24.—Campbell Langley, father of the once notorious and not yet forgotten Bill Langley, removed to Bell County, Texas, from near Lexington, Lee County, Texas, twelve years ago. During his residence in Lee and Bell counties he has been known as a well-to-do farmer and upright citizen. He says that his son, Bill Langley, who was publicly hanged twelve years ago in Giddings, Lee County, by Sheriff Jim Brown, in the presence of several thousand people, was not hung at all, but was allowed to escape. The father says when the Supreme Court and the Governor refused to intervene in Bill's behalf a rich uncle in California came to the county with $40,000 to buy up the sheriff and succeeded in doing so. Matters were so arranged that the weight of the body of Bill Langley exactly counterbalanced the drop. By having his body fall upon an iron hoop placed underneath the platform and unseen by the spectators he escaped physical torture and escaped unhurt.

Burglars at Woodville.

WOODVILLE, Ont, Aug. 24.—There was a considerable sensation in our usually quiet village early this morning when it was discovered that the branch store of Hugh Wilson, of Cannington, was broken into and the door of the safe blown to pieces. D. McLachlan, his manager, says there was only about a dollar of change left in the safe. The burglars also visited the G. T. R. station, and here they were more fortunate, for they got about $75 in cash, which was the private money of Mr. Adams, the agent, which he had left in the ticket box. They also cut open several valises that travellers had left for safe-keeping at the station. As yet there is no clue to the guilty parties.

The New American Party.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug 24.—Regarding the published statement that he was a member of the new American party, Mr. Powuerly said yesterday: "I have not joined the new party and have not given permission to any body to class me among its members. While I am an American, I am not interested in reviving, purely American ideas,' I have no desire to rekindle the campfires of the purely Americans nor do I wish to see the re-establishment of the ducking pond or the burning of witches."

Degrees of Intoxication.

At the great naval review a steamboat load of sightseers passing the Victoria cheered lustily for Lord Hartington and Lord R. Churchill, who were known to be aboard that vessel. Being away aft the noble Lords missed this demonstration, but presently ran across Mr. Chamberlain, who told them what had occurred. "You two," he said, "have been cheered by a lot of people in a steamboat; but they were all drunk!" "Ah, were they?" replied Lord Hartington; "but not drunk enough to cheer you!"

Speed of the Volunteer.

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—Mr. Burgess stated that on her return from Cross Ripple lighthouse to Marblehead the Volunteer showed a speed of over twelve miles an hour under a three-reefed mainsail. A table was shown by the owner of the steam yacht Carsan, which kept alongside the Volunteer part of the way, showing that the Volunteer made 12.69.100 miles an hour during the time the vessels were together. Gen. Paine stated that he never before sailed in such a breeze and such a sea.

Fatal Accident at Napanee.

NAPANEE, Aug. 24.—Among a number of men who were unloading cheese at the station to-day was a farmer named Jolly, of Richmond, a young and promising man of about 24 years of age and unmarried. The whistle of the engine startled his horses, when he caught them by the head, but the horses were frightened and plunged madly forward, threw over the waggon with its load of cheese, striking the unfortunate man on the head, fracturing his skull and killing him instantly.

Three Men Killed.

SCRANTON, Aug. 24.—A frightful accident occurred on the Lehigh Valley Railway at Ransom Township at noon to day. A pony engine, on which were Gen Supt. Stevenson of the Lehigh Road, John M. Rahm, roadmaster, G. Collins and L. M. Hall, while rounding a curve plunged into a gang of five trackmen and instantly killed Foreman Connell and a Hungarian laborer, and fatally injured another Hungarian.

Mr. Hague on the Financial Outlook.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 24.—Mr. George Hague, President of the Merchant's Bank of Canada, has arrived. He speaks confidently with respect to the financial outlook for Manitoba, and said that the policy of his bank would be to hold any properties here. He considers that any investments here are perfectly sure and are bound to increase in value.

A Great Fire.

PANAMA, Aug. 24.—A fire broke out at the village of Old Gatun, a few miles from Aspinwall on the canal route, on Aug. 7. It did about $200,000 damage and reduced hundreds of laborers and small shopkeepers to complete destitution.

Russian Wheat in the North-West.

OTTAWA, Aug. 24.—The Department of Agriculture has been advised that the Russian wheat distributed in the North-West last spring is giving great satisfaction. The crop in several places was ripe on July 26th.

Morvin, expressman, was also slightly injured. The cause of the accident is not known.

DEVOTION TO TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 24.—M. Vulkovitch, the Bulgarian agent, has handed to the Porte a telegram from Prince Ferdinand expressing his devotion to the Sultan and asking permission to come to Constantinople to pay his homage in person. Kesmid Pacha, the Prime Minister, will reply to the telegram, informing the Prince that the Sultan cannot accede to his proposition.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Mr. Gladstone, Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt, Early Spencer, Mr. Arnold and John Morley had a long conference this morning in reference to the proclamation of the National League. Mr. Gladstone is in good spirits. He wears a thick overcoat, though the weather is hot.

MR. RUSSELL'S REPLY.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—In reply to Lord Hartington's invitation, Mr. Russell says that he is willing to attend a conference, but that his position is a difficult one. He adds that he must in future, although a staunch Unionists, work outside the party.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1887.

Now it is the San Francisco wheat gamblers who are demoralizing the market in the States, there having been a gigantic scheme in California to operate a corner on an unprecedented scale. How our Ontario farmers must long to be more closely connected with men who in their gambling knock the market for wheat up and down, more frequently down when the farmers have wheat to sell.

In referring to some abuse by Mr. Travis the Toronto Globe says:—

"Are we to be asked to disbelieve an oath from a man Sir John Macdonald thought worth to be made a judge?"

The truth is that Sir John Macdonald did not consider Mr. Travis worthy to be made a judge and did not make him a judge, so Mr. Travis is abusive.

OPPOSITION journals continue to advise the people of Manitoba to set the law courts at defiance, even if they have to resort to rebellion. These advisers can have very little confidence in the legality of the position which they would have supported by such means.

PARTY CONFERENCES.

Preparing for a Full Attendance—The Tories Harmonious.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Mr. Gladstone held a second conference with Mr. Arnold Morley, the Liberal whip, in the lobby of the House of Commons shortly before the beginning of yesterday's sitting. Their conversation was brief but earnest, and it is understood that Mr. Arnold Morley informed his chief that every arrangement had been perfected to secure a full attendance of the Gladstonian members on Friday evening. Some regret is expressed that Mr. John Morley is not likely to be present, but a sufficient number of opposition members will be in their seats to make his presence unnecessary to the success of the Gladstonian programme, though a vigorous speech from him would be more than welcome. When Mr. Gladstone entered the House he was greeted with a tremendously enthusiastic reception by the Liberal and Parnellite members on the floor. Rumors were in circulation that considerable discontent existed in the Liberal ranks over the action of the Gladstonian members joining the National League, and the expressed determination of others to follow their example. Careful and extended enquiry has shown, however, that the reports are baseless. Not only has there been no discontent manifested by any Liberal member, but, on the contrary, the members who openly avowed their sympathy with the principles and objects of the League, and proved their sincerity by joining its ranks, have received the full approval of those of their colleagues who have not as yet committed themselves absolutely to a "thick and thin" support of the condemned Irish organizations.

The Conservative conference held at the Carlton Club yesterday, was entirely harmonious, and no disposition was visible on the part of any of the Tory members to make any alteration whatsoever in the programme adopted by the Government for the conduct of parliamentary business or Irish affairs during the remainder of the session.

The arraignment of the Government by Mr. Gladstone and his followers in the House of Commons to-day promises to be a lively affair.

STARVATION AND CANNIBALISM.

A Horrid Story from the North-West—Whole Family Eaten.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—Letters have been received from Messrs. Colin Fraser and Charles Stewart, dated Port Chipewyan, July 5th. They were thirty days getting there from Landing, about three times as long as they should have been, owing to lack of knowledge of the river, but by being careful they had no mishap. The flies were terrific. The country around Chipewyan is rock, sometimes covered with moss or timber. The starvation of last winter caused several cases of cannibalism. One old woman now at Chipewyan admits having killed and eaten her whole family last winter at Little Red River. Starvation and cannibalism are reported from Mackenzie River.

NORWOOD.

I. O. O. F.—A lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows will be established here this fall. There are quite a number of Oddfellows in the village, the majority of whom belong to Otonabee Lodge, Peterborough. Mr. R. Metcalfe is fitting up a hall in his new brick block on Colborne street, which, when completed, will be one of the finest society halls in the town.

A PROSPEROUS INDUSTRY.—The hub and spoke, bent stuff, etc., factory of Messrs. John Finlay & Son, of this place, is, we may safely say, one of the most prosperous manufacturing concerns in this part of the Province. Not a year passes that some addition or improvement is not made. This year the firm has erected buildings covering nearly half an acre on the opposite side of the street. The latest improvement was made last week and consists of a suspension bridge which connects the third storey of the main building with those on the other side of the street. On this is an iron track over which loaded cars are run. It will greatly facilitate the carrying of material between the two buildings. Messrs. Cumming & Son had charge of the construction of the bridge and performed the work in a highly satisfactory manner.—Register.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HOME FROM CAMP.—Six of our villagers arrived home here the latter part of last week, after having spent about three weeks camping at Birch Point, on Sturgeon Lake. There were fourteen in the party, consisting of the Rev. A. F. Tully and his family, of Mitchell; Mr. Robert Tully and his daughter, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. W. Hickson, Mr. D. W. Best, Miss Laura E. Best, Mrs. John McLean and Mr. George McLean, of Mount Pleasant. They spent a most enjoyable time, as the weather was all that could be desired for comping, and the fishing was very good. There were about forty nice lunge caught among the members of the party, but Mr. W. Hickson takes the lead for having caught the largest number of any one in the party. He took in a beauty that weighed 20 pounds.

PERSONAL.—Mr. John Saddler, of Toronto, who has had an attack of bilious fever of late, is spending a few days here to recouperate. We hope that the fresh air among the hills of this locality will produce the desired effect.

SUCCESSFUL AT THE EXAMS.—We are pleased to note that Messrs. D. W. Best and J. C. Murdoch passed the second class teachers' examination, and L. Thexton the third class non-professional examination held in Lindsay on the first two weeks of July last. This is a good showing for our school, which also passed two at the teachers' examination last year.

BRIEFS.—School has opened again after the holidays with a very good attendance. Harvesting is about finished in this vicinity, and some of the farmers are commencing their fall ploughing.

SIR WILLIAM VERNON-HARCOURT

Vigorously Denounces the Government and the Unionist Leaders.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—An open air meeting was held at Westminster last evening, for the purpose of denouncing the Government's action in proclaiming the League. Mr. Biggar, Member of Parliament for West Cavan, delivered an address and was followed by Sir William Vernon-Harcourt. The latter quoted Mr. Chamberlain's statements of Saturday to the effect that Ireland was free from crime, and, continued the speaker, "Messrs. Chamberlain and Collings, who were opposed to coercion after the Phœnix Park murders, countenance coercion now when Ireland is tranquil, even without the local government. Mr. Chamberlain seems to like the principle, but not the application of coercion. I am glad there is so much old leaven left in him. He ought to have known that to give the Tories a coercion act with the advice not to use it, would be like putting a tiger in a cage with a man, and enjoining the tiger not to eat the man." Referring to the secession of Mr. Russell, the speaker said: "The history of the secession for loyal Ulsterites ought to be a frontispiece with a picture of the faithful Russell, who was trotted out at the Carlton Club by Lord Salisbury as the bright star of Ulster, and who was finally closeted by Mr. Smith. The Unionist party is perishing by the process of political mortification. The Government have repudiated their advice, and the country have repudiated their candidates." Referring to Lord Hartington, he said he very much regretted to learn that his absorption by the Tory party had already been arranged for, but he hoped that Lord Hartington would be warned in time by the sad fate of Mr. Goschen.

Mr. Gladstone, Sir George Trevelyan and sixty other Liberal members of Parliament have promised to attend a Liberal League demonstration at Alexandra Palace on September 5th.

THE BANK OF LONDON.

How the Late President Obtained a Loan of a Quarter of a Million.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 25.—The management of the Henry Taylor estate has been handed over to H. E. Nelles, as trustee, with a power of Attorney to wind up the estate. A meeting of the creditors is to be held on the 5th of September. A gentleman evidently familiar with the Bank of London affairs states that at the time of the run on the bank Henry Taylor went to Tyronto and was offered 200,000 on various stocks and subsequently secured a loan of $250,000. He was well supplied with stock of the Bank of London, City Gas Company, Bennett Furnishing Company and other concerns, which he hypothecated and secured American drafts. He gave as a reason why he wanted these funds that there was a little run on the Bank of London, which he wanted to tide over. The gentleman in question, however, thinks that Taylor at the time was preparing for his exodus. In the above connection it is known that Mr. Taylor, before he left London, settled a number of accounts with tradesmen for large amounts.

THE NEW HEBRIDES QUESTION.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—In spite of the very much modified tone of the French press, the friction between the Governments of England and France over the New Hebrides question increases. The ground upon which France blocks the way to an amicable settlement of the dispute is most trivial, and no one can doubt that England is amply justified in her attitude. Sooner or later France must yield the concessions she persistently and unwarrantably withholds.

THE LEAGUE PROCLAMATION.

Mr. Gladstone's Protesting Resolution—The Debate Adjourned.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Mr. Gladstone was greeted with cheers in the House of Commons this evening when he arose to move his resolution, that a humble address be presented to the Queen representing that the Viceroy of Ireland has proclaimed the National League as a dangerous association; that no information has been furnished to Parliament to justify the proclamation, by virtue of which Her Majesty's subjects are to be rendered liable to be punished as criminals without a judicial inquiry into the nature of their acts, and this House, in the absence of such information, prays that said proclamation shall not continue in force as to the association named and described therein. Mr. Gladstone said he had always contended that the Government were legislating against combinations apart from crime, and now was the time for the Government to show that he and his friends were wrong. But the Government shrank from the test and declined the challenge. The proclamation of the National League, Mr. Gladstone declared, was a near approach to a declaration of war on the Irish people. The people of Ireland generally sympathized with the league, because they believed that it had been their salvation. (Parnellite Cheers.) Nobody did anything for the tenants until the league was founded. The Government were pressing Ireland very hard, and it was evident that they intended to work and act by summary jurisdiction. The Government's action absolutely excluded the House from anything except an absurd and perfunctory operation in connection with the great duty devolving upon it. Under the statute the cognizance of this proclamation was reduced to a mere farce. There would be no jury, judge or resident magistrate, and no Parliament to control Ireland. There would be nothing but the absolute, unmitigated, arbitrary act of the Irish Executive, which was necessarily partisan. He hoped that the Irish would continue to bear the pressure. They would not have to suffer long. It was certain that they would not obey the law through fear—(cheers)—but from a strong, vivid, buoyant hope which, even at the last election, was not damaged, and which now was brighter and livelier. (Cheers.) The Irish believed that the Government's policy had not the sanction of the British nation. (Cheers.) The Government's foundation was slipping from under them and their action in reference to the proclamation of the League showed that their strength was failing. Ireland, seeing this, trusted the English nation to fulfil her reasonable wishes and was convinced that her expectations would not be disappointed. Mr. Gladstone then presented the petition amid prolonged cheers.

Mr. Balfour said that Mr. Gladstone would have been wiser had he rested his argument on the allegation that the House was ignorant of the grounds for the proclamation, rather than on a defence of the League. The Government's difficulty was not the finding of evidence to justify the proclamation, but the selecting of it from the enormous mass of evidence they possessed. There was sufficient foundation to justify the proclamation the columns of the Local newspaper without going into the Government's confidential reports. Mr. Balfour argued that when Gladstone proclaimed the Land League he did so when Mr. Parnell was imprisoned, when Parliament was not sitting, and that he afforded no information to anyone concerned. He quoted at length from documents to show that the Land League was guilty of boycotting, coercing and instigating infraction of the law.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt asked the speaker whether documents from which he quoted would be submitted to the House.

Mr. Balfour refused to submit the documents, and proceeding narrated other instances of the league's unlawful action.

Sir William asked the Speaker whether Mr. Balfour was bound to table the officia documents cited.

The Speaker replied that Mr. Balfour was not bound to table confidential documents, but the case was different with official papers which the House might want to verify. Although Mr. Balfour was justified in quoting from confidential documents, the authority of such quotations was weakened because the documents had not been tabled.

Sir Vernon Harcourt: After the Speaker's ruling I expect that the papers will be tabled.

Mr. Balfour: I shall do nothing of the kind. My documents are of three sorts, public and confidential papers and my own notes. If the people realized the true nature and working of the league they would, regardless of creed or part, support the Government. (Ministerial cheers.) Mr. Balfour accused the Opposition, through Mr. Gladstone, of making themselves apologists for, and therefore accomplices in intimidation.

THE REVIEW BINDERY

Books, Magazines, and all kinds of printed work bound promptly and neatly.

The Daily Review

FRIDAY, AUGUST, 26, 1887.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

THE Detroit News, which is the most energetic and unscrupulous organ of the annexation agitators, makes no pretence at concealing their real aim. In its issue of Aug. 23rd, it appeals to its more cautious countrymen at great length in support of its filibustering projects. It gives the detailed history (illustrated by a map) of the various acquisitions of territory made by the United States since the declaration of independence, from France, Spain, Mexico and Russia, and urges that Great Britain should also be ousted from the continent. It concludes as follows:—

"In the light of history, who is there to question the wisdom of the policy which has added territory of incalculable value to the country's domain and proved of inestimable advantage from a political as well as a commercial point of view? To-day there is but one foreign power, instead of five, with a foothold upon the North American continent. It is not a wild prediction to make that within the lives of those now living that one will be removed by the wiping out of the artificial boundary line which separates the domain of Great Britain from that of the United States. And why should there remain this unnatural barrier between people of a common race, a common language and a common religion? In their ancestry, their traditions, their language, their industries and their commerce they are now practically one people. The political division which separates them has no longer reason for its being. The history of our own country shows that its wiping out would do no violence to the spirit of our institutions, and the experience of a century leaves no doubt of the advantages that would redound from the extension of our boundary line to the polar sea. The majority of the people of both countries would bless such a union, and only a timid sentiment of conservatism on one side and a false idea of loyalty on the other stand in the way of its consummation. The eyes of the people of the United States are upon Canada, and the Dominion is looking toward us. The people of both countries are rapidly coming to realize that a joining of the two under one government is but the logical event of history, and when their education is complete—as it must be before many years—no earthly power can stand in the way of their joining hands in a political union that will make the United States' possession of the North American continent practically complete."

It is well that the true object of this handful of greedy foreigners and unpatriotic Canadians should be thus plainly and authoritatively exposed. Those who have allowed themselves to be deluded by the sophistries of these schemers will draw back at the sight of the result that is to be attained by all this wire-pulling and falsification. To cut adrift from the British Empire, in order to join the United States, is not a programme that will be acceptable to true Canadians.

RESULTS OF A ZOLLVEREIN.

IN its desperate efforts to promote commercial and political annexation to the United States the Toronto Mail sometimes shows its unpatriotic object too plainly for the success of its evil cause. It is now advancing an argument which with all thinking men will be fatal to its pretensions. For the space of a column and a half it argues that the German Zollverein has been a great success, and therefore that Canada should snatch at an American Zollverein.

Well the German Zollverein has been eminently successful in its object. It has consolidated the north German states into the German Empire, which is virtually Prussia, which again is the Emperor William and Bismarck. The smaller German "powers" are mere satellites of Prussia, with less voice in the management of affairs than the various States in the United States of America. The German Zollverein has converted Commercial Union into political union in its worst form, and because such has been the result the Mail and its new allies wish us to follow this ill-omened example.

Still urging from the case of Germany the Mail pretends that Canada need not fear that it will not have an equal voice with the United States in framing the joint tariff, because the terms of the German Zollverein provide that the Duchy of Brunswick for instance, should have an equal voice with the Kingdom of Prussia. And who does not know that the Duchy of Brunswick dare not lift a little finger if the German Empire, that is the Kingdom of Prussia, that is Bismarck, says "no." This is what a paper stipulation is worth with a powerful and unscrupulous ally. Those who wish that Canada should occupy the position towards the United States that Brunswick does towards Prussia and the German Empire may follow the lead of the Mail and its friends The people of Canada have not yet sunk into such degradation, nor do they yearn thus to degrade themselves.

PIETY WITHOUT DISPLAY.

Lesson IX of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Aug. 28. Text of the Lesson, Matt. vi, 1-15. Golden Text, I Samuel xvi, 17.

V. 1. This verse is a statement of the general principle which is illustrated in what follows. The Revised Version has properly introduced the word "righteousness" instead of "alms." The best critics are agreed in this change. Righteousness here is not the righteousness of Christ; it means rectitude, right doing, conformity to the will of God.

Vs. 2-4. Here we have the first illustration of the application of the principle to alms giving. The change from the plural ye to the singular thou individualizes the thought. Not sound a trumpet.—It is supposed that it was the custom of the Pharisees literally to sound a trumpet and so call together the poor; others think the reference is to the trumpet shaped money boxes and the shaking of the coin as it fell into them. But all these suppositions are far fetched. Hypocrites.—The word originally meant those who wore a mask and performed a part. This is is the classical usage. As the composition of the word suggests, they were dissemblers. In the synagogues.—Here religious assemblies were held at which offerings were made. In the streets.—Where beggars gathered and where gifts were bestowed. Have their reward.—Of course they have. Men generally get what they seek. Literally, this is their full reward.

V. 3. Left hand.—This doubtless was a proverb. The privacy was to be so great that one member of the body was not to know what another member did. This is as if the right hand slipped out its gift so quietly and quickly that the left hand was ignorant of the act.

V. 4. This verse indicates the true method; it gives the positive direction. In secret—in a secret place. God will see. Thy Father.—The individuality of the deed is still suggested by the statement regarding the reward.

Vs. 5-15. We now have the second illustration of the application of the general principle of doing good without ostentation. This is in regard to private prayer. The remarks made are not to be applied to common prayer or public worship.

V. 5. Hypocrites pray to be seen of men, but when ye pray there is to be another motive. Dr. Broadus calls attention to the fact that throughout this passage the plural is used in general injunctions and the singular in pointed applications. No criticism is here made on the standing posture in prayer. It is ostentation which is condemned. The corners of the streets.—The crowded thoroughfares, the broadways, this is the idea, were admirable places for such ostentatious display.

V. 6. Now comes the positive side of the teaching, the pointing out of the true method. Thou.—The singular form for the sake of a pointed personal application. Closet.—Literally, storeroom and so a place of privacy; an innermost apartment. In the Revised Version it is rendered "inner chamber," sometimes the upper chamber (Acts i, 13; ix, 37; xx, 8). By thy closet may be meant a place under one's own control. No Christian can be strong among men except he be often alone with God. Shut thy door.—Not only must the door be closed, but, as is implied, fastened; this suggests the greatest privacy. No rebuke is intended for family, social or more public prayer. Every man's own heart may be his closet. Openly is to be omitted.

Vs. 7-8. Ye.—Our Lord now comes to speak of prayer in its varied relations in life, and so uses the plural. Prayer is liable to other dangers than ostentatious display; another fault in prayer is vain repetition. One practice has been condemned—the pharisaical practice; the other is the heathen practice which is to be condemned. Vain repetitions.—The word so translated occurs nowhere else in the New Testament. Some have thought that it is derived from the name Battus, a Cyrenian king mentioned by Herodotus, who was noted for his stammering; others derive it from a poet of that name whose poetical effusions abounded in repetitions.

V. 9. Now we come to the model prayer; this is its true name. The true Lord's Prayer, our Lord's intercessory prayer, is found in John, 17th chapter. The prayer here is rather the disciples' prayer, although the common name is found as early as A. D. 250. For simplicity, comprehensiveness and spirituality, this prayer must ever be a model. There is nothing said of the mediatorial work of Christ, no asking in his name, but these elements could not be present at this stage in his life and teaching. The prayer is adapted to the time when it was uttered. It is not given as a form to be always and necessarily used; it is to serve as a specimen of acceptable prayer. In Luke we have it with important variations, showing that it was not intended as an invariable form. So far as we know Christ did not himself use this form, neither did the apostles. The prayer falls into two divisions of three petitions each. The first class of petitions—like the first table of the law—refers to God and our relations to him. The second—like the second table of the law—to ourselves and our relations to one another. We are to pray for God's glory before we pray for our own bread. Our Father.—The plural is used throughout the prayer, because the prayer is social rather than secret. God is our Father by creation, preservation, and especially so by adoption. Our shows the brotherhood of man, as well as the fatherhood of God. In heaven.—More accurately, in the heavens. This is a Hebrew usage very common in the New Testament. Hallowed.—This is an Anglo-Saxon word often used in translating the Old Testament, but only here and in Luke ii, 2, in the New Testament. It is a prayer that God's name may be regarded and treated as sacred, sanctified and revered alike by our works, words and thoughts.

V. 10. Thy kingdom come.—God's kingdom is his reign; the administration of Jesus Christ. To offer this petition aright is to labor and to give for the spread of the Gospel, for the conversion of the world. Thy will.—This includes all which God purposes and commands. Strictly, "be done" means to come to pass. The order in the Revised Version is worthy of notice. "As in heaven, so on earth." That is, as fully, joyously and universally as it is done by angels. Bengal notes that in the first three petitions we have thy, thy, thy, and in the others us, us, us.

V. 11. Daily bread.—With this verse the second division of the prayer begins, and petitions for us are now offered. Bread stands for food in general. To the Israelites God gave daily manna. This is a prayer primarily for the body. The man who is too lazy to work ought not to use this prayer.

V. 12. Debts.—Our chief need is forgiveness of our sins. Our hearts ought to give their supreme love to God. They have failed to do this; God, therefore, has claims upon us. This obligation must be discharged by us or atonement be made by another. Our failure is our sin, and it is here represented as a debt.

V. 13. This is the sixth and last petition. Lead us not.—We need not simply forgiveness for past sins, but also preservation for the future. This word lead, or "bring," as in the Revised Version, has caused many serious questionings. Can God lead men into temptation? The prayer asks that God would so control our affairs that neither Satan nor any of his agents may lead us astray; and, as all things are under God's control, he may be said to lead us into temptation. Temptation, trial. This may be a test of one's character or faith or love; or the word may be used to mean a direct solicitation to sin. In this latter sense God tempts no man (James i, 13); but he does test, try, prove men as he did Abraham and others (Gen. xxii, 1; Ex. xv, 25; Deut. xiii, 3). Deliver.—This is the positive side of the former petition. Evil.—Is perhaps the evil one. This, however, cannot be absolutely determined; but as all evil comes from the evil one, the meaning is substantially the same.

V. 14. For, etc.—This petition of the prayer is taken up a second time and emphasized, showing the importance of forgiveness. Trespasses.—The figure of the 12th verse is here changed to that of a fall or a false step. Sin is a deviation from the straight line of right as well as a failure to meet our obligations to God.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. True religion avoids all ostentation. Its home is in the heart; its fruit in the life.
2. No man can long deceive God or men.
3. "For Jesus' sake" is the true motive in all benevolence.
4. Secret prayer is a necessity to a true life.
5. We must be willing to grant forgiveness to others if we would receive forgiveness from God.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

When I said as much to my other on the following morning, after giving her the full account which she always likes to have of what had taken place at the dinner party and after it, she shook her head. "Ah, my dear Harry," she sighed, "you are too ready to seek for bad motives and study bad people—that is, if poor Hilda is really bad. If I were you I should find it much more interesting to study Mildred. Is she too good to be attractive?"

"Are you suggesting that I should fall in love with Lady Mildred?" I inquired.

"My dear boy, no! What would Lord Staines say? Besides, I am afraid you would be a day too late. Have you really not discovered Mildred's secret, Harry?—you, who are so quick sighted!"

"We all have our weaknesses; and amongst the many to which I should have to plead guilty, if placed upon my oath, is that of fancying that I can read the hearts and minds of my neighbors with some facility. Now, in truth, it had not occured to me until then that Lady Mildred had lost her heart to Jim, but as I could not bear to admit my stupidity, I made no direct reply, merely observing that there was a difference between what was attractive and what was interesting to study, and that bad people were more interesting to study than good ones because, as a rule, their motives of action were more obscure.

"I suppose so," agreed my mother absently. "Poor Jim!"

"Really," said I (because I was provoked with her for having seen what I had failed to detect), "I do not understand why you should pity him. All is for the best in the best of possible worlds, you know."

"I believe that all is ordered for our good," she answered simply, "though I fear that you do not. We must not presume to say that it would have been better for our friend to marry Mildred than Hilda, who, after all, has a great deal that is nice about her. Poor Jim!"

My dear mother permits herself a touch of dry humor at times which, I think, refreshes her. She glanced up at me half deprecatingly after this last ejaculation, and we had a little laugh together. I suppose she perceived as plainly as I did that there was trouble coming, but she did not choose to talk about it before it came, and probably she was quite right.

CHAPTER V.

I am but a poor equestrian and can only speak upon such subjects with the diffidence which beseems me, but I have always understood from those who ought to know that the hunting in our parts is of an inferior order. The covert shooting, on the other hand, is fairly good, and that belonging to the Staines Court property may almost be called famous. Now Lord Staines had left his coverts untouched until Christmas, being, as I verily believe, instigated to this act of self denial by a desire to please his heir, who at that time was one of the best shots in England. Great, therefore, must have been his surprise, and great also his disappointment on finding that Bracknell preferred to follow the hounds during his stay, and that he could not even be persuaded to take his gun out of its case on non-hunting days.

"It seems to me," the poor old gentleman declared in my hearing, "that he must have taken leave of his senses. I really can't account for his behavior in any other way."

I could have accounted for it; though I am not prepared to say that my explanation excluded the hypothesis of insanity. I could have told Lord Staines that, indifferent as the hunting was, there was a certain country gentleman in the neighborhood who was devoted to it, heart and soul; that this gentleman had recently presented a well broken saddle horse to his betrothed; and further, that when Bracknell was not out hunting with the couple aforesaid he was amusing himself in some other and perhaps less innocent fashion in the company of one of them. But I did not tell him this, partly because I was not asked and partly because I am constitutionally averse to being blown up sky high.

A few days before that on which the wedding had been appointed to take place, I was invited to luncheon at the rectory, it having been intimated to me that I should be expected to make myself useful subsequently in helping to move furniture and carry out other preparations for the feast at which Mr. Turner proposed to entertain his friends after the ceremony. When I arrived I found Jim and Mr. Sparks, the curate, seated in the drawing room, with our host, but Hilda was conspicuous by her absence. Her absence had become quite disagreeably conspicuous when the clock struck half past 2, by which time we were all very hungry, having reached the extreme limit of our subjects of conversation. In the course thereof it had transpired that Bracknell had come over in his dog cart two or three hours before, and had persuaded Hilda to go out for a drive with him. "But she assured me," said Mr. Turner, fidgeting about uneasily, "that she would be back very shortly, and I am altogether at a loss to account for this delay."

"Oh, they'll turn up all right," returned Jim composedly. "Bracknell never knows what time of day it is. I don't think they deserve that we should wait any longer for them, though."

Here the curate, a good natured but not very intelligent young man, judged it appropriate to remark, with a loud laugh, "Upon my word, Mr. Leigh, you will have to look after this young lady. It's early days for her to begin driving off with a gay bachelor and finding his company so agreeable that she forgets to come home to luncheon."

After this graceful sally on the part of Sparks, we went into the dining room and refreshed ourselves; but we listened in vain for the sound of Bracknell's chariot wheels, and at length Jim, whose lawyer was coming down from London to see him, was compelled to leave us. His composure remained undisturbed up to the last; but as soon as he was gone Mr. Turner confided to me that he, for his part, was becoming seriously alarmed.

"I would not mention it while James was here," he said, "but it struck me that Lord Bracknell was driving a somewhat restive animal, and I cannot help fearing that some accident has occurred."

If any accident had occurred within ten miles of us, we should certainly have heard of it by that time, and so I told him, but he was not convinced; and as the poor old fellow was evidently fretting himself into a fever, I could but offer to scour the country in search of the absentees. Accordingly I set out in one direction while the good-natured Sparks trudged away in another; and a very disagreeable walk I had of it through the rain, which began to come down immediately after I started. None of the people whom I met had seen Bracknell, upon whose head I did not invoke a blessing when I reached home after dark, drenched to the skin. I was perfectly sure that neither he nor Hilda had come to any physical harm; because persons of that kind very rarely get their necks broken (unless it be by the hand of the public executioner, and only if they happen to belong to the lower orders), but I did think that between them they were carrying impudence about as far as it could very well be carried. However, as I did not at that time foresee that I should ever write the history of these delinquents, I ceased to think about them as soon as I had finished my dinner, and, having made myself comfortable with a blazing fire and a cigar, set to work upon an article of which I hoped to have the skeleton completed before bedtime.

I was getting on quite nicely, and had scribbled down several epigrammatic sayings to be scattered carelessly over my composition and to cheer the persevering reader on his way through it, when I was informed that Mr. Turner was down stairs and wanted to see me "most particular." This announcement was speedily followed by the entrance of Mr. Turner himself, in an indescribable state of agitation. On seeing his pale face and rumpled hair, I naturally concluded that I had done Nemesis an injustice, and exclaimed, "Has there been an accident then after all?"

The Millionaire Humanitarian.

Another notable who is apt to be met on Broadway, even in this torrid season, is Henry Bergh, the millionaire humanitarian, who may be caught on a flying trip down from Saratoga. He has worked hard for the brute creation and years are piling high on his shoulders, so that it is no wonder if, as people say, he is less vigorous than he used to be. Of late there has been a marked decrease in his letters to the editors of the city papers, and the police justices who never succeeded in imposing sentences heavy enough to please him in cases of cruelty to animals are beginning to breathe a little easier.

But if Mr. Bergh is resting no one can say that it is because he is content. The sad and wearied expression of his impressive countenance truly reflects the sorrow he feels over the perversity of the worst of the brute creation, mankind. He feels so deeply that he actually seems to mourn for the republic, and not long ago he pointed out a place on Staten Island that he said "ought to be set apart for the American king." He explained that the king may not arrive in twenty or even fifty years, but come he will some day, "for this country has got to have a head sooner or later." Mr. Bergh is not what is called a popular man—men with one idea seldom are—but he is so much respected that he is spoken of as the one citizen now alive who is certain to get a monument when he dies.—Julian Ralph's Letter.

A Toadying Tailor.

The English tradesman is a toady I had some clothes being built at a tailor's, patronized principally by army officers. Being only an American civilian, he did not treat me with any extraordinary politeness. Indeed, he was very uncivil. When the major general called for me that day at the hotel, I told him I had to go to the tailor's to try on those clothes. "All right, I'll drive there and wait for you;" and away we went. "I'll just go in," he said, when we got there, "and see what your taste is in coats." The tailor simply fell down when he saw me walk in with the major general. He groveled, he cringed—so much so that I laughed at him, and when he got out I told the major general.

"Yes," he said, "it is rather contemptible for a man to get down and cringe, but I suppose it helps their business."

And when I went back alone the tailor couldn't get low enough to do me honor.—San Francisco Chronicle "Undertones."

Ingenious Plot Against Boys.

In a carpenter shop in West Fiftieth street the other day the boss was stowing a lot of little mahogany knobs in a basket, along with a brace and a three-quarter inch bit. The knobs were about the size of a walnut, and each had a stem two inches long and three-quarters of an inch thick.

"You could never guess what I'm going to do with these knobs," he said to a friend, "and so I'll tell you. I'm going over to one of the swellest houses in Fifth avenue, and after boring holes in the stair bannisters I'm going to stick these knobs into the holes and glue them fast. The owner has got three boys, and the oldest one has just learned how to ride down a stair rail. The house is four stories high above the basement, and the owner is afraid one of his kids will take a tumble instead of a slide, and so he's going to ruin that rail and the sliding at the same time."—New York Sun.

The "Parsee Chair."

The "Parsee chair" is announced as the successor of the hammock. A seashore correspondent who has seen one describes it as a sort of box or cradle of mahogany, with a high back and low sides. It is covered with Hindu rugs and has two large, soft pillows worked in Turkish embroidery. At each corner the chair is supported by ropes which depend from the roof and which run through hollow pieces of mahogany, making the supports seem like slender and flexible wooden columns. "In the Parsee chair," it seems, "a lady may lounge and swing in the most picturesque of attitudes, without suffering that curvature of the spine which the hammock entails."—Exchange.

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

The grain trade continues inactive, though, as far as America is concerned the stocks are light as compared with those carried at this time during 1886 and 1885. The visible supply of wheat stands now at 31,118,513, as compared with 39,820,852 for this time in 1886, and 41,244,599 in 1885. The low prices are due chiefly to the good European harvests. The English crop alone is computed to be 20,000,000 bushels greater than that of last year. The French crop is said to be decidedly satisfactory both as to quantity and quality. Reports from every European country, with the exception of Spain and Italy state that the crops have been exceptionally good.

Cheese.

The offer of cheese at Ingersol on Tuesday was 5,100 for the first half of August. The sales were 350 at 12½.

The Court House Park.

Mr. H. Nesbitt, gaoler and caretaker of the Court House grounds, has had the fence at the east of the Court House Park, in front of the Court House, removed and is making other changes in this part of the Park. A boulevard is being constructed, running straight in the centre and curving down at the ends. The street has been gravelled and water tables paved with stones will be constructed at each side. The changes will considerably improve the appearance of that part of the grounds.

A HORSE DICKER.

It Results in Gore Scene on Hunter Street.

Five hundred people crowded around a trio of combatants on Hunter street, near George street, at half past eleven o'clock to-day. It took about half an hour for the argument to develop into black eyes, but it developed in due time.

The history of the case is as follows:—Six weeks ago a man named Cummings sold to a young fellow named McDonald, a horse for the sum of $40, on the condition that the horse was to be the property of Cummings till it was paid for. The young fellow's mother said that they could pay five dollars a week, but Cummings says: "Its better to make the payments low; we'll put it at four a week." So four a week was agreed on before a witness, and if the payments were missed any one week Cummings was to take the horse back. The sum of $8 was paid down, and for the succeeding two weeks the payments were made. Since then Cummings got nothing. He went to a lawyer to see about it, and the lawyer told him to take the horse away if it could be taken without a fight.

With legal advice Cummings hied himself on Thursday night to McDonald's stable, near the Smith street bridge, and led the docile horse to his own stable.

The denoument occurred at 11.30 o'clock to-day. Cummings was out with the horse for a drive, and was jogging merrily down Hunter street. All at once the pale faced "young fellow" intercepted him. He grabbed the horse by the reins, and with surprising alacrity commenced unbuckling and unfastening the harness.

Cummings got out and protested that the horse was his till it was paid for, etc., etc., and the young fellow also protested a string of etc.'s. The upshot was, of course, a fight. Cummings did not want to fight. He simply held the "young fellow" off for a while. The young fellow took advantage of this amiability to put in several right handers. A new element here appeared on the scene in the person of the young fellow's mother. With tact that took the crowd she jerked off the harness and started off up street with the disputed property while the two were tumbling over each other in the dust. The young fellow had evidently got a pointer somewhere, for as soon as he got through he pushed his way through the crowd, and sped to a telegraph post where the horse was stationed. He mounted with the celerity of Jessie James and was out of sight in no time.

Scott Act.

Police Magistrate Edmison had three Scott Act cases to deal with in Ashburnham on Thursday:—Queen vs. Beckett, Queen vs. Young, and Queen vs. Calcutt. Fines of $50 and costs were imposed in each case.

Personal.

Mr. G. A. Sherin has left town to reside permanently in St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. J. A. Richardson, traveller for the Great Waubash Railroad, was in town yesterday. He says that the Peoria Railway, on which the terrible accident took place a short time ago, is virtually bankrupt. The estimated claims amounts to over a million dollars, which is more than the road is worth.

Obituary.

The people of Peterborough and the district at large will learn with sincere regret of the death of Mr. H. B. Weller, son of Judge Weller, of this town. A few weeks ago he contracted a severe cold, which developed into an alarming state—abcess of the brain. He was taken to Toronto and placed under the care of an eminent physician, but the treatment was futile. He expired on Thursday. The deceased was a young lawyer, with bright prospects of success before him. He was educated at Upper Canada College. He completed his law course with high credit, and has been practising his profession for the last five years in Millbrook. He leaves a young widow, a daughter of Dr. Herriman, formerly of Lindsay, to mourn for him.

An Outside Opinion.

The Belleville Intelligencer, after devoting nearly a column of its space to an account of the recent meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board, remarks:—"Right-minded men will support Mr. Warrington in his contention. The cheese was not good, and he would not receive it. Mr. Wrighton admits this when he says that ten were bad. Mr. Warrington bought the cheese at 11½c., and although the market had advanced and still had an upward tendency, Mr. Wrighton would not take the lot off Mr. Warrington's hands at the contract price, 11½c.—still another proof that they were not good. If the Peterborough salesmen want the Belleville buyers to frequent their Board, it will be to their interest to appoint an arbitrator who will not dealt unjustly with them. That the Peterborough cheesemen need the Belleville buyers is evident form the bids, as reported in the REVIEW." The whole of this commotion was caused by the refusal of Mr. Warrington to take ten cheese. There were forty cheese altogether. Mr. Warrington's representative said that he would take twenty. Mr. Wrighton judged that he should take thirty. The dispute thus arising should have been settled by the appointment of an arbitrator by the buyers. The rules of the Board gives the buyers power to appoint an arbitrator, and if the two cannot agree they are to appoint a third. The buyers had not appointed their arbitrator, but that was no reason why they should not have done so at Mr. Warrington's request at the time the dispute occurred. Without saying whether the cheese was fit to take or not, Mr. Wrighton may have refused to take it on account of its being a very small lot.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

False Alarm.

At about one o'clock this morning a man came to Mr. Edgecumbe's, George street, and made a great noise. Mr. Edgecumbe came down and the man asked for the key of the fire alarm box. As there was a window broken in the hall door Mr. Edgecumbe handed the key out without seeing the man. After a good deal of fuss the alarm was rung and the man returned with the key. Mr. Edgecumbe asked him where the fire was, but he threw the key through the broken pane of glass and hurried off without replying. A few minutes after the Fire Brigade were on the spot but no fire could be found. If caught and convicted of ringing an alarm without cause the guilty person may rest assured that he will be treated with severity at the hands of the Court.

Fuller-Rubidge.

At three o'clock this afternoon a Magistrate's Court was held at the Court House. The case before P. M. Edmison was Fuller vs. Rubidge, for assault. On the production of a doctor's certificate that the defendant was ill the case was adjourned till Wednesday.

Military Funeral.

The officers of the 57th Battalion, the Peterborough Troop of Cavalry and the Right Division of the Durham Field Battery are requested to attend the funeral of the late Capt. Weller, of "B," Cavalry Troop, which will take place at 3 o'clock to morrow afternoon.

P. C. McGinty Attacked.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning P. C. McGinty proceeded to stop some disorderly conduct at the corner of George and Murray streets, but instead of dispersing, the crowd attacked him. He did not succeed in making any arrests. A slight cut on the head was all the injury he sustained.

THE MELEE OF THE MILKY WAY.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I have just had placed in my hands a copy of the Peterborough Examiner of August 23rd, comprising an editorial with the above caption. It is not my intention to refer in detail or at length to the particulars of the assault made upon the gentleman who was its subject, but will confine myself, at present, to the assertion that the Examiner account of the transaction is, from beginning to end, a tissue of gross misrepresentations and unmitigated falsehoods; and this assertion, if I mistake not, will be verified by the evidence that will be brought before the magistrate who will shortly have to try the case. The article in question was evidently published with the intention to prejudice the matter, and is a weak attempt to elicit the sympathy of the public on behalf of the assailant.

I am, sir,

ONE ACQUAINTED WITH THE FACTS OF THE CASE.

August 25, 1887.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1887.

Now it is the San Francisco wheat gamblers who are demoralizing the market in the States, there having been a gigantic scheme in California to operate a corner on an unprecedented scale. How our Ontario farmers must long to be more closely connected with men who in their gambling knock the market for wheat up and down, more frequently down when the farmers have wheat to sell.

In referring to some abuse by Mr. Travis the Toronto Globe says:—

"Are we to be asked to disbelieve an oath from a man Sir John Macdonald thought worth to be made a judge?"

The truth is that Sir John Macdonald did not consider Mr. Travis worthy to be made a judge and did not make him a judge, so Mr. Travis is abusive.

OPPOSITION journals continue to advise the people of Manitoba to set the law courts at defiance, even if they have to resort to rebellion. These advisers can have very little confidence in the legality of the position which they would have supported by such means.

PARTY CONFERENCES.

Preparing for a Full Attendance—The Tories Harmonious.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Mr. Gladstone held a second conference with Mr. Arnold Morley, the Liberal whip, in the lobby of the House of Commons shortly before the beginning of yesterday's sitting. Their conversation was brief but earnest, and it is understood that Mr. Arnold Morley informed his chief that every arrangement had been perfected to secure a full attendance of the Gladstonian members on Friday evening. Some regret is expressed that Mr. John Morley is not likely to be present, but a sufficient number of opposition members will be in their seats to make his presence unnecessary to the success of the Gladstonian programme, though a vigorous speech from him would be more than welcome. When Mr. Gladstone entered the House he was greeted with a tremendously enthusiastic reception by the Liberal and Parnellite members on the floor. Rumors were in circulation that considerable discontent existed in the Liberal ranks over the action of the Gladstonian members joining the National League, and the expressed determination of others to follow their example. Careful and extended enquiry has shown, however, that the reports are baseless. Not only has there been no discontent manifested by any Liberal member, but, on the contrary, the members who openly avowed their sympathy with the principles and objects of the League, and proved their sincerity by joining its ranks, have received the full approval of those of their colleagues who have not as yet committed themselves absolutely to a "thick and thin" support of the condemned Irish organizations.

The Conservative conference held at the Carlton Club yesterday, was entirely harmonious, and no disposition was visible on the part of any of the Tory members to make any alteration whatsoever in the programme adopted by the Government for the conduct of parliamentary business or Irish affairs during the remainder of the session.

The arraignment of the Government by Mr. Gladstone and his followers in the House of Commons to-day promises to be a lively affair.

STARVATION AND CANNIBALISM.

A Horrid Story from the North-West—Whole Family Eaten.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—Letters have been received from Messrs. Colin Fraser and Charles Stewart, dated Fort Chipewyan, July 5th. They were thirty days getting there from Landing, about three times as long as they should have been, owing to lack of knowledge of the river, but by being careful they had no mishap. The flies were terrific. The country around Chipewyan is rock, sometimes covered with moss or timber. The starvation of last winter caused several cases of cannibalism. One old woman now at Chipewyan admits having killed and eaten her whole family last winter at Little Red River. Starvation and cannibalism are reported from Mackenzie River.

NORWOOD.

I. O. O. F.—A lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows will be established here this fall. There are quite a number of Oddfellows in the village, the majority of whom belong to Otonabee Lodge, Peterborough. Mr. R. Metcalfe is fitting up a hall in his new brick block on Colborne street, which, when completed, will be one of the finest society halls in the town.

A PROSPEROUS INDUSTRY.—The hub and spoke, bent stuff, etc., factory of Messrs. John Finlay & Son, of this place, is, we may safely say, one of the most prosperous manufacturing concerns in this part of the Province. Not a year passes that some addition or improvement is not made. This year the firm has erected buildings covering nearly half an acre on the opposite side of the street. The latest improvement was made last week and consists of a suspension bridge which connects the third storey of the main building with those on the other side of the street. On this is an iron track over which loaded cars are run. It will greatly facilitate the carrying of material between the two buildings. Messrs. Cumming & Son had charge of the construction of the bridge and performed the work in a highly satisfactory manner.—Register.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HOME FROM CAMP.—Six of our villagers arrived home here the latter part of last week, after having spent about three weeks camping at Birch Point, on Sturgeon Lake. There were fourteen in the party, consisting of the Rev. A. F. Tully and his family, of Mitchell; Mr. Robert Tully and his daughter, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. W. Hickson, Mr. D. W. Best, Miss Laura E. Best, Mrs. John McLean and Mr. George McLean, of Mount Pleasant. They spent a most enjoyable time, as the weather was all that could be desired for camping, and the fishing was very good. There were about forty nice lunge caught among the members of the party, but Mr. W. Hickson takes the lead for having caught the largest number of any one in the party. He took in a beauty that weighed 20 pounds.

PERSONAL.—Mr. John Saddler, of Toronto, who has had an attack of bilious fever of late, is spending a few days here to recouperate. We hope that the fresh air among the hills of this locality will produce the desired effect.

SUCCESSFUL AT THE EXAMS.—We are pleased to note that Messrs. D. W. Best and J. C. Mrdoch passed the second class teachers' examination, and L. Thexton the third class non-professional examination held in Lindsay on the first two weeks of July last. This is a good showing for our school, which also passed two at the teachers' examination last year.

BRIEFS.—School has opened again after the holidays with a very good attendance. Harvesting is about finished in this vicinity, and some of the farmers are commencing their fall ploughing.

SIR WILLIAM VERNON-HARCOURT

Vigorously Denounces the Government and the Unionist Leaders.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—An open air meeting was held at Westminster last evening, for the purpose of denouncing the Government's action in proclaiming the League. Mr. Biggar, Member of Parliament for West Cavan, delivered an address and was followed by Sir William Vernon-Harcourt. The latter quoted Mr. Chamberlain's statements of Saturday to the effect that Ireland was free from crime, and, continued the speaker, "Messrs. Chamberlain and Collings, who were opposed to coercion after the Phœnix Park murders, countenance coercion now when Ireland is tranquil, even without the local government. Mr. Chamberlain seems to like the principle, but not the application of coercion. I am glad there is so much old leaven left in him. He ought to have known that to give the Tories a cercion act with the advice not to use it, would be like putting a tiger in a cage with a man, and enjoining the tiger not to eat the man." Referring to the secession of Mr. Russell, the speaker said: "The history of the secession for loyal Ulsterites ought to be a frontispiece with a picture of the faithful Russell, who was trotted out at the Carlton Club by Lord Salisbury as the bright star of Ulster, and who was finally closeted by Mr. Smith. The Unionist party is perishing by the process of political mortification. The Government have repudiated their advice, and the country have repudiated their candidates." Referring to Lord Hartington, he said he very much regretted to learn that his absorption by the Tory party had already been arranged for, but he hoped that Lord Hartington would be warned in time by the sad fate of Mr. Goschen.

Mr. Gladstone, Sir George Trevelyan and sixty other Liberal members of Parliament have promised to attend a Liberal League demonstration at Alexandra Palace on September 5th.

THE BANK OF LONDON.

How the Late President Obtained a Loan of a Quarter of a Million.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 25.—The management of the Henry Taylor estate has been handed over to H. E. Nelles, as trustee, with a power of Attorney to wind up the estate. A meeting of the creditors is to be held on the 5th of September. A gentleman evidently familiar with the Bank of London affairs states that at the time of the run on the bank Henry Taylor went to Tyronto and was offered 200,000 on various stocks and subsequently secured a loan of $250,000. He was well supplied with stock of the Bank of London, City Gas Company, Bennett Furnishing Company and other concerns, which he hypothecated and secured American drafts. He gave as a reason why he wanted these funds that there was a little run on the Bank of London, which he wanted to tide over. The gentleman in question, however, thinks that Taylor at the time was preparing for his exodus. In the above connection it is known that Mr. Taylor, before he left London, settled a number of accounts with tradesmen for large amounts.

THE NEW HEBRIDES QUESTION.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—In spite of the very much modified tone of the French press, the friction between the Governments of England and France over the New Hebrides question increases. The ground upon which France blocks the way to an amicable settlement of the dispute is most trivial, and no one can doubt that England is amply justified in her attitude. Sooner or later France must yield the concessions she persistently and unwarrantably withholds.

THE LEAGUE PROCLAMATION.

Mr. Gladstone's Protesting Resolution—The Debate Adjourned.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Mr. Gladstone was greeted with cheers in the House of Commons this evening when he arose to move his resolution, that a humble address be presented to the Queen representing that the Viceroy of Ireland has proclaimed the National League as a dangerous association; that no information has been furnished to Parliament to justify the proclamation, by virtue of which Her Majesty's subjects are to be rendered liable to be punished as criminals without a judicial inquiry into the nature of their acts, and this House, in the absence of such information, prays that said proclamation shall not continue in force as to the association named and described therein. Mr. Gladstone said he had always contended that the Government were legislating against combinations apart from crime, and now was the time for the Government to show that he and his friends were wrong. But the Government shrank from the test and declined the challenge. The proclamation of the National League, Mr. Gladstone declared, was a near approach to a declaration of war on the Irish people. The people of Ireland generally sympathized with the league, because they believed that it had been their salvation. (Parnellite Cheers.) Nobody did anything for the tenants until the league was founded. The Government were pressing Ireland very hard, and it was evident that they intended to work and act by summary jurisdiction. The Government's action absolutely excluded the House from anything except an absurd and perfunctory operation in connection with the great duty devolving upon it. Under the statute the cognizance of this proclamation was reduced to a mere farce. There would be no jury, judge or resident magistrate, and no Parliament to control Ireland. There would be nothing but the absolute, unmitigated, arbitrary act of the Irish Executive, which was necessarily partisan. He hoped that the Irish would continue to bear the pressure. They would not have to suffer long. It was certain that they would not obey the law through fear—(cheers)—but from a strong, vivid, buoyant hope which, even at the last election, was not damaged, and which now was brighter and livelier. (Cheers.) The Irish believed that the Government's policy had not the sanction of the British nation. (Cheers.) The Government's foundation was slipping from under them and their action in reference to the proclamation of the League showed that their strength was failing. Ireland, seeing this, trusted the English nation to fulfil her reasonable wishes and was convinced that her expectations would not be disappointed. Mr. Gladstone then presented the petition amid prolonged cheers.

Mr. Balfour said that Mr. Gladstone would have been wiser had he rested his argument on the allegation that the House was ignorant of the grounds for the proclamation, rather than on a defence of the League. The Government's difficulty was not the finding of evidence to justify the proclamation, but the selecting of it from the enormous mass of evidence they possessed. There was sufficient foundation to justify the proclamation the columns of the Local newspaper without going into the Government's confidential reports. Mr. Balfour argued that when Gladstone proclaimed the Land League he did so when Mr. Parnell was imprisoned, when Parliament was not sitting, and that he afforded no information to anyone concerned. He quoted at length from documents to show that the Land League was guilty of boycotting, coercing and instigating infraction of the law.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt asked the speaker whether documents from which he quoted would be submitted to the House.

Mr. Balfour refused to submit the documents, and proceeding narrated other instances of the league's unlawful action.

Sir William asked the Speaker whether Mr. Balfour was bound to table the officia documents cited.

The Speaker replied that Mr. Balfour was not bound to table confidential documents, but the case was different with official papers which the House might want to verify. Although Mr. Balfour was justified in quoting from confidential documents, the autnority of such quotations was weakened because the documents had not been tabled.

Sir Vernon Harcourt: After the Speaker's ruling I expect that the papers will be tabled.

Mr. Balfour: I shall do nothing of the kind. My documents are of three sorts, public and confidential papers and my own notes. If the people realized the true nature and working of the league they would, regardless of creed or part, support the Government. (Ministerial cheers.) Mr. Balfour accused the Opposition, through Mr. Gladstone, of making themselves apologists for, and therefore accomplices in intimidation.

THE REVIEW BINDERY

Books, Magazines, and all kinds of printed work bound promptly and neatly.

The Daily Review

FRIDAY, AUGUST, 26, 1887.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

THE Detroit News, which is the most energetic and unscrupulous organ of the annexation agitators, makes no pretence at concealing their real aim. In its issue of Aug. 23rd, it appeals to its more cautious countrymen at great length in support of its filibustering projects. It gives the detailed history (illustrated by a map) of the various acquisitions of territory made by the United States since the declaration of independence, from France, Spain, Mexico and Russia, and urges that Great Britain should also be ousted from the continent. It concludes as follows:—

"In the light of history, who is there to question the wisdom of the policy which has added territory of incalculable value to the country's domain and preved of inestimable advantage from a political as well as a commercial point of view? To-day there is but one foreign power, instead of five, with a foothold upon the North American continent. It is not a wild prediction to make that within the lives of those now living that one will be removed by the wiping out of the artificial boundary line which separates the domain of Great Britain from that of the United States. And why should there remain this unnatural barrier between people of a common race, a common language and a common religion? In their ancestry, their traditions, their language, their industries and their commerce they are now practically one people. The political division which separates them has no longer reason for its being. The history of our own country shows that its wiping out would do no violence to the spirit of our institutions, and the experience of a century leaves no doubt of the advantages that would redound from the extension of our boundary line to the polar sea. The majority of the people of both countries would bless such a union, and only a timid sentiment of conservatism on one side and a false idea of loyalty on the other stand in the way of its consummation. The eyes of the people of the United States are upon Canada, and the Dominion is looking toward us. The people of both countries are rapidly coming to realize that a joining of the two under one government is but the logical event of history, and when their education is complete—as it must be before many years—no earthly power can stand in the way of their joining hands in a political union that will make the United States' possession of the North American continent practically complete."

It is well that the true object of this handful of greedy foreigners and unpatriotic Canadians should be thus plainly and authoritatively exposed. Those who have allowed themselves to be deluded by the sophistries of these schemers will draw back at the sight of the result that is to be attained by all this wire-pulling and falsification. To cut adrift from the British Empire, in order to join the United States, is not a programme that will be acceptable to true Canadians.

RESULTS OF A ZOLLVEREIN.

In its desperate efforts to promote commercial and political annexation to the United States the Toronto Mail sometimes shows its unpatriotic object too plainly for the success of its evil cause. It is now advancing an argument which with all thinking men will be fatal to its pretensions. For the space of a column and a half it argues that the German Zollverein has been a great success, and therefore that Canada should snatch at an American Zollverein.

Well the German Zollverein has been eminently successful in its object. It has consolidated the north German states into the German Empire, which is virtually Prussia, which again is the Emperor William and Bismarck. The smaller German "powers" are mere satellites of Prussia, with less voice in the management of affairs than the various States in the United States of America. The German Zollverein has converted Commercial Union into political union in its worst form, and because such has been the result the Mail and its new allies wish us to follow this ill-omened example.

Still urging from the case of Germany the Mail pretends that Canada need not fear that it will not have an equal voice with the United States in framing the joint tariff, because the terms of the German Zollverein provide that the Duchy of Brunswick for instance, should have an equal voice with the Kingdom of Prussia. And who does not know that the Duchy of Brunswick dare not lift a little finger if the German Empire, that is the Kingdom of Prussia, that is Bismarck, says "no." This is what a paper stipulation is worth with a powerful and unscrupulous ally. Those who wish that Canada should occupy the position towards the United States that Brunswick does towards Prussia and the German Empire may follow the lead of the Mail and its friends The people of Canada have not yet sunk into such degradation, nor do they yearn thus to degrade themselves.

PIETY WITHOUT DISPLAY.

Lesson IX of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Aug. 28. Text of the Lesson, Matt. vi, 1-15. Golden Text, I Samuel xvi, 17.

V. 1. This verse is a statement of the general principle which is illustrated in what follows. The Revised Version has properly introduced the word "righteousness" instead of "alms." The best critics are agreed in this change. Righteousness here is not the righteousness of Christ; it means rectitude, right doing, conformity to the will of God.

Vs. 2-4. Here we have the first illustration of the application of the principle to alms giving. The change from the plural ye to the singular thou individualizes the thought. Not sound a trumpet.—It is supposed that it was the custom of the Pharisees literally to sound a trumpet and so call together the poor; others think the reference is to the trumpet shaped money boxes and the shaking of the coin as it fell into them. But all these suppositions are far fetched. Hypocrites.—The word originally meant those who wore a mask and performed a part. This is is the classical usage. As the composition of the word suggests, they were dissemblers. In the synagogues.—Here religious assemblies were held at which offerings were made. In the streets.—Where beggars gathered and where gifts were bestowed. Have their reward.—Of course they have. Men generally get what they seek. Literally, this is their full reward.

V. 3. Left hand.—This doubtless was a proverb. The privacy was to be so great that one member of the body was not to know what another member did. This is as if the right hand slipped out its gift so quietly and quickly that the left hand was ignorant of the act.

V. 4. This verse indicates the true method; it gives the positive direction. In secret—in a secret place. God will see. Thy Father.—The individuality of the deed is still suggested by the statement regarding the reward.

Vs. 5-15. We now have the second illustration of the application of the general principle of doing good without ostentation. This is in regard to private prayer. The remarks made are not to be applied to common prayer or public worship.

V. 5. Hypocrites pray to be seen of men, but when ye pray there is to be another motive. Dr. Broadus calls attention to the fact that throughout this passage the plural is used in general injunctions and the singular in pointed applications. No criticism is here made on the standing posture in prayer. It is ostentation which is condemned. The corners of the streets.—The crowded thoroughfares, the broadways, this is the idea, were admirable places for such ostentatious display.

V. 6. Now comes the positive side of the teaching, the pointing out of the true method. Thou.—The singular form for the sake of a pointed personal application. Closet.—Literally, storeroom and so a place of privacy; an innermost apartment. In the Revised Version it is rendered "inner chamber," sometimes the upper chamber (Acts i, 13; ix, 37; xx, 8). By thy closet may be meant a place under one's own control. No Christian can be strong among men except he be often alone with God. Shut thy door.—Not only must the door be closed, but, as is implied, fastened; this suggests the greatest privacy. No rebuke is intended for family, social or more public prayer. Every man's own heart may be his closet. Openly is to be omitted.

Vs. 7-8. Ye.—Our Lord now comes to speak of prayer in its varied relations in life, and so uses the plural. Prayer is liable to other dangers than ostentatious display; another fault in prayer is vain repetition. One practice has been condemned—the pharisaical practice; the other is the heathen practice which is to be condemned. Vain repetitions.—The word so translated occurs nowhere else in the New Testament. Some have thought that it is derived from the name Battus, a Cyrenian king mentioned by Herodotus, who was noted for his stammering; others derive it from a poet of that name whose poetical effusions abounded in repetitions.

V. 9. Now we come to the model prayer; this is its true name. The true Lord's Prayer, our Lord's intercessory prayer, is found in John, 17th chapter. The prayer here is rather the disciples' prayer, although the common name is found as early as A. D. 250. For simplicity, comprehensiveness and spirituality, this prayer must ever be a model. There is nothing said of the mediatorial work of Christ, no asking in his name, but these elements could not be present at this stage in his life and teaching. The prayer is adapted to the time when it was uttered. It is not given as a form to be always and necessarily used; it is to serve as a specimen of acceptable prayer. In Luke we have it with important variations, showing that it was not intended as an invariable form. So far as we know Christ did not himself use this form, neither did the apostles. The prayer falls into two divisions of three petitions each. The first class of petitions—like the first table of the law—refers to God and our relations to him. The second—like the second table of the law—to ourselves and our relations to one another. We are to pray for God's glory before we pray for our own bread. Our Father.—The plural is used throughout the prayer, because the prayer is social rather than secret. God is our Father by creation, preservation, and especially so by adoption. Our shows the brotherhood of man, as well as the fatherhood of God. In heaven.—More accurately, in the heavens. This is a Hebrew usage very common in the New Testament. Hallowed.—This is an Anglo-Saxon word often used in translating the Old Testament, but only here and in Luke ii, 2, in the New Testament. It is a prayer that God's name may be regarded and treated as sacred, sanctified and revered alike by our works, words and thoughts.

V. 10. Thy kingdom come.—God's kingdom is his reign; the administration of Jesus Christ. To offer this petition aright is to labor and to give for the spread of the Gospel, for the conversion of the world. Thy will.—This includes all which God purposes and commands. Strictly, "be done" means to come to pass. The order in the Revised Version is worthy of notice. "As in heaven, so on earth." That is, as fully, joyously and universally as it is done by angels. Bengal notes that in the first three petitions we have thy, thy, thy, and in the others us, us, us.

V. 11. Daily bread.—With this verse the second division of the prayer begins, and petitions for us are now offered. Bread stands for food in general. To the Israelites God gave daily manna. This is a prayer primarily for the body. The man who is too lazy to work ought not to use this prayer.

V. 12. Debts—Our chief need is forgiveness of our sins. Our hearts ought to give their supreme love to God. They have failed to do this; God, therefore, has claims upon us. This obligation must be discharged by us or atonement be made by another. Our failure is our sin, and it is here represented as a debt.

V. 13. This is the sixth and last petition. Lead us not.—We need not simply forgiveness for past sins, but also preservation for the future. This word lead, or "bring," as in the Revised Version, has caused many serious questionings. Can God lead men into temptation? The prayer asks that God would so control our affairs that neither Satan nor any of his agents may lead us astray; and, as all things are under God's control, he may be said to lead us into temptation. Temptation, trial. This may be a test of one's character or faith or love; or the word may be used to mean a direct solicitation to sin. In this latter sense God tempts no man (James i, 13); but he does test, try, prove men as he did Abraham and others (Gen. xxii, 1; Ex. xv, 25; Deut. xiii, 3). Deliver.—This is the positive side of the former petition. Evil.—Is perhaps the evil one. This, however, cannot be absolutely determined; but as all evil comes from the evil one, the meaning is substantially the same.

V. 14. For, etc.—This petition of the prayer is taken up a second time and emphasized, showing the importance of forgiveness. Trespasses.—The figure of the 12th verse is here changed to that of a fall or a false step. Sin is a deviation from the straight line of right as well as a failure to meet our obligations to God.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. True religion avoids all ostentation. Its home is in the heart; its fruit in the life.
2. No man can long deceive God or men.
3. "For Jesus' sake" is the true motive in all benevolence.
4. Secret prayer is a necessity to a true life.
5. We must be willing to grant forgiveness to others if we would receive forgiveness from God.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

When I said as much to my other on the following morning, after giving her the full account which she always likes to have of what had taken place at the dinner party and after it, she shook her head. "Ah, my dear Harry," she sighed, "you are too ready to seek for bad motives and study bad people—that is, if poor Hilda is really bad. If I were you I should find it much more interesting to study Mildred. Is she too good to be attractive?"

"Are you suggesting that I should fall in love with Lady Mildred?" I inquired.

"My dear boy, no! What would Lord Staines say? Besides, I am afraid you would be a day too late. Have you really not discovered Mildred's secret, Harry?—you, who are so quick sighted?"

We all have our weaknesses; and amongst the many to which I should have to plead guilty, if placed upon my oath, is that of fancying that I can read the hearts and minds of my neighbors with some facility. Now, in truth, it had not occured to me until then that Lady Mildred had lost her heart to Jim, but as I could not bear to admit my stupidity, I made no direct reply, merely observing that there was a difference between what was attractive and what was interesting to study, and that bad people were more interesting to study than good ones because, as a rule, their motives of action were more obscure.

"I suppose so," agreed my mother absently. "Poor Jim!"

"Really," said I (because I was provoked with her for having seen what I had failed to detect), "I do not understand why you should pity him. All is for the best in the best of possible worlds, you know."

"I believe that all is ordered for our good," she answered simply, "though I fear that you do not. We must not presume to say that it would have been better for our friend to marry Mildred than Hilda, who, after all, has a great deal that is nice about her. Poor Jim!"

My dear mother permits herself a touch of dry humor at times which, I think, refreshes her. She glanced up at me half deprecatingly after this last ejaculation, and we had a little laugh together. I suppose she perceived as plainly as I did that there was trouble coming, but she did not choose to talk about it before it came, and probably she was quite right.

CHAPTER V.

I am but a poor equestrian and can only speak upon such subjects with the diffidence which beseems me, but I have always understood from those who ought to know that the hunting in our parts is of an inferior order. The covert shooting, on the other hand, is fairly good, and that belonging to the Staines Court property may almost be called famous. Now Lord Staines had left his coverts untouched until Christmas, being, as I verily believe, instigated to this act of self-denial by a desire to please his heir, who at that time was one of the best shots in England. Great, therefore, must have been his surprise, and great also his disappointment on finding that Bracknell preferred to follow the hounds during his stay, and that he could not even be persuaded to take his gun out of its case on non-hunting days.

"It seems to me," the poor old gentleman declared in my hearing, "that he must have taken leave of his senses. I really can't account for his behavior in any other way."

I could have accounted for it; though I am not prepared to say that my explanation excluded the hypothesis of insanity. I could have told Lord Staines that, indifferent as the hunting was, there was a certain country gentleman in the neighborhood who was devoted to it, heart and soul; that this gentleman had recently presented a well broken saddle horse to his betrothed; and, further, that when Bracknell was not out hunting with the couple aforesaid he was amusing himself in some other and perhaps less innocent fashion in the company of one of them. But I did not tell him this, partly because I was not asked and partly because I am constitutionally averse to being blown up sky high.

A few days before that on which the wedding had been appointed to take place, I was invited to luncheon at the rectory, having been intimated to me that I could be expected to make myself useful subsequently in helping to move furniture and carry out other preparations for the feast at which Mr. Turner proposed to entertain his friends after the ceremony. When I arrived I found Jim and Mr. Sparks, the curate, seated in the drawing room, with our host, but Hilda was conspicuous by her absence. Her absence had become quite disagreeably conspicuous when the clock struck half past 2, by which time we were all very hungry, having reached the extreme limit of our subjects of conversation. In the course thereof it had transpired that Bracknell had come over in his dog cart two or three hours before, and had persuaded Hilda to go out for a drive with him. "But she assured me," said Mr. Turner, fidgeting about uneasily, "that she would be back very shortly, and I am altogether at a loss to account for this delay."

"Oh, they'll turn up all right," returned Jim composedly. "Bracknell never knows what time of day it is. I don't think they deserve that we should wait any longer for them, though."

Here the curate, a good natured but not very intelligent young man, judged it appropriate to remark, with a loud laugh, "Upon my word, Mr. Leigh, you will have to look after this young lady. It's early days for her to begin driving off with a gay bachelor and finding his company so agreeable that she forgets to come home to luncheon."

After this graceful sally on the part of Sparks, we went into the dining room and refreshed ourselves; but we listened in vain for the sound of Bracknell's chariot wheels, and at length Jim, whose lawyer was coming down from London to see him, was compelled to leave us. His composure remained undisturbed up to the last; but as soon as he was gone Mr. Turner confided to me that he, for his part, was becoming seriously alarmed.

"I would not mention it while James was here," he said, "but it struck me that Lord Bracknell was driving a somewhat restive animal, and I cannot help fearing that some accident has occurred."

If any accident had occurred within ten miles of us, we should certainly have heard of it by that time, and so I told him, but he was not convinced; and as the poor old fellow was evidently fretting himself into a fever, I could but offer to scour the country in search of the absentees. Accordingly I set out in one direction while the good-natured Sparks trudged away in another; and a very disagreeable walk I had of it through the rain, which began to come down immediately after I started. None of the people whom I met had seen Bracknell, upon whose head I did not invoke a blessing when I reached home after dark, 'reniched' to the skin. I was perfectly sure that neither he nor Hilda had come to any physical harm; because persons of that kind very rarely get their necks broken (unless it be by the hand of the public executioner, and only if they happen to belong to the lower orders), but I did think that between them they were carrying impudence about as far as it could very well be carried. However, as I did not at that time foresee that I should ever write the history of these delinquents, I ceased to think about them as soon as I had finished my dinner, and, having made myself comfortable with a blazing fire and a cigar, set to work upon an article of which I hoped to have the skeleton completed before bedtime.

I was getting on quite nicely, and had scribbled down several epigrammatic sayings to be scattered carelessly over my composition and to cheer the persevering reader on his way through it, when I was informed that Mr. Turner was down stairs and wanted to see me "most particular." This announcement was speedily followed by the entrance of Mr. Turner himself, in an indescribable state of agitation. On seeing his pale face and rumpled hair, I naturally concluded that I had done Nemesis an injustice, and exclaimed, "Has there been an accident then after all?"

The Millionaire Humanitarian.

Another notable who is apt to be met on Broadway, even in this torrid season, is Henry Bergh, the millionaire humanitarian, who may be caught on a flying trip down from Saratoga. He has worked hard for the brute creation and years are piling high on his shoulders, so that it is no wonder if, as people say, he is less vigorous than he used to be. Of late there has been a marked decrease in his letters to the editors of the city papers, and the police justices who never succeeded in imposing sentences heavy enough to please him in cases of cruelty to animals are beginning to breathe a little easier.

But if Mr. Bergh is resting no one can say that it is because he is content. The sad and wearied expression of his impressive countenance truly reflects the sorrow he feels over the perversity of the worst of the brute creation, mankind. He feels so deeply that he actually seems to mourn for the republic, and not long ago he pointed out a place on Staten Island that he said "ought to be set apart for the American king." He explained that the king may not arrive in twenty or even fifty years, but come he will some day, "for this country has got to have a head sooner or later." Mr. Bergh is not what is called a popular man—men with one idea seldom are—but he is so much respected that he is spoken of as the one citizen now alive who is certain to get a monument when he dies.—Julian Ralph's Letter.

A Toadying Tailor.

The English tradesman is a toady I had some clothes being built at a tailor's, patronized principally by army officers. Being only an American civilian, he did not treat me with any extraordinary politeness. Indeed, he was very uncivil. When the major general called for me that day at the hotel, I told him I had to go to the tailor's to try on those clothes. "All right, I'll drive there and wait for you;" and away we went. "I'll just go in," he said, when we got there, "and see what your taste is in coats." The tailor simply fell down when he saw me walk in with the major general. He groveled, he cringed—so much so that I laughed at him, and when he got out I told the major general.

"Yes," he said, "it is rather contemptible for a man to get down and cringe, but I suppose it helps their business."

And when I went back alone the tailor couldn't get low enough to do me honor.—San Francisco Chronicle "Undertones."

Ingenious Plot Against Boys.

In a carpenter shop in West Fiftieth street the other day the boss was stowing a lot of little mahogany knobs in a basket, along with a brace and a three-quarter inch bit. The knobs were about the size of a walnut, and each had a stem two inches long and three-quarters of an inch thick.

"You could never guess what I'm going to do with these knobs," he said to a friend, "and so I'll tell you. I'm going over to one of the swellest houses in Fifth avenue, and after boring holes in the stair bannisters I'm going to stick these knobs into the holes and glue them fast. The owner has got three boys, and the oldest one has just learned how to ride down a stair rail. The house is four stories high above the basement, and the owner is afraid one of his kids will take a tumble instead of a slide, and so he's going to ruin that rail and the sliding at the same time."—New York Sun.

The "Parsee Chair."

The "Parsee chair" is announced as the successor of the hammock. A seashore correspondent who has seen one describes it as a sort of box or cradle of mahogany, with a high back and low sides. It is covered with Hindu rugs and has two large, soft pillows worked in Turkish embroidery. At each corner the chair is supported by ropes which depend from the roof and which run through hollow pieces of mahogany, making the supports seem like slender and flexible wooden columns. "In the Parsee chair," it seems, "a lady may lounge and swing in the most picturesque of attitudes, without suffering that curvature of the spine which the hammock entails."—Exchange.

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

The grain trade continues inactive, though, as far as America is concerned the stocks are light as compared with those carried at this time during 1886 and 1885. The visible supply of wheat stands now at 31,118,513, as compared with 39,820,852 for this time in 1886, and 41,244,599 in 1885. The low prices are due chiefly to the good European harvests. The English crop alone is computed to be 20,000,000 bushels greater than that of last year. The French crop is said to be decidedly satisfactory both as to quantity and quality. Reports from every European country, with the exception of Spain and Italy state that the crops have been exceptionally good.

The offer of cheese at Ingersol on Tuesday was 5,100 for the first half of August. The sales were 350 at 12½.

Opening of the Collegiate Institute.

The Collegiate Institute will reopen at 9 o'clock on Monday, the 29th instant. It is hoped there will be a full attendance, as examinations for grading the classes will be held without delay. 3d45

"Mull" on the Move.

Mr. Jas. Dolan, accompanied by Mr. Fred Armstrong, left town to-day to open a dry goods house in Port Perry for Messrs. T. Dolan & Co. "Jim" is the man to take charge of the business. He will make it go if he has to put prices to the lowest stratum.

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD'S new boot and shoe store.

Return Costumes.

Any persons having costumes in their possession since the cantata "Daniel" was given here under the auspices of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, are kindly requested to return them to the Lodge, or leave word at Mr. Nugent's store or Mr. G. C. Clark's store, and greatly oblige.

The Y. M. C. A. Secretaryship.

Mr. Geo. E. Williams has received a telegram from Mr. W. H. Stevens, at present Assistant Secretary of the Montreal Young Men's Christian Association, accepting the Secretaryship of the Peterborough Association. He expects to be here on September 22nd, in time for the Association anniversary.

The Lock Works.

An offer from Port Hope of inducements for the Peterborough Lock Company to remove their works to that town was considered this morning by the Directors, and was not accepted, as the terms were not held to be satisfactory.

The Court House Park.

Mr. H. Nesbitt, gaoler and caretaker of the Court House grounds, has had the fence at the east of the Court House Park, in front of the Court House, removed and is making other changes in this part of the Park. A boulevard is being constructed, running straight in the centre and curving down at the ends. The street has been gravelled and water tables paved with stones will be constructed at each side. The changes will considerably improve the appearance of that part of the grounds.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

The Toronto Convention.

The convention of Conservative young men will meet in Toronto on Sept. 13th at 10 o'clock a.m. The veteran Premier of the Dominion, Sir John A. Macdonald, is expected to be present and to address the convention on the first day. The programme for the two days, which has been prepared, will provide interesting work for the delegates. The convention will close with a banquet to Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues. The Peterborough Young Men's Conservative Association will meet on Tuesday evening next in their rooms over Mr. Stethem's store. A large attendance is requested.

A HORSE DICKER.

It Results in Gore Scene on Hunter Street.

Five hundred people crowded around a trio of combatants on Hunter street, near George street, at half past eleven o'clock to-day. It took about half an hour for the argument to develop into black eyes, but it developed in due time.

The history of the case is as follows:—Six weeks ago a man named Cummings sold to a young fellow named McDonald, a horse for the sum of $40, on the condition that the horse was to be the property of Cummings till it was paid for. The young fellow's mother said that they could pay five dollars a week, but Cummings says: "Its better to make the payments low; we'll put it at four a week." So four a week was agreed on before a witness, and if the payments were missed any one week Cummings was to take the horse back. The sum of $8 was paid down, and for the succeeding two weeks the payments were made. Since then Cummings got nothing. He went to a lawyer to see about it, and the lawyer told him to take the horse away if it could be taken without a fight.

With legal advice Cummings hied himself on Thursday night to McDonald's stable, near the Smith street bridge, and led the docile horse to his own stable.

The denoument occurred at 11.30 o'clock to-day. Cummings was out with the horse for a drive, and was jogging merrily down Hunter street. All at once the pale faced "young fellow" intercepted him. He grabbed the horse by the reins, and with surprising alacrity commenced unbuckling and unfastening the harness.

Cummings got out and protested that the horse was his till it was paid for, etc., etc., and the young fellow also protested a string of etc.'s. The upshot was, of course, a fight. Cumming did not want to fight. He simply held the "young fellow" off for a while. The young fellow took advantage of this amiability to put in several right handers. A new element here appeared on the scene in the person of the young fellow's mother. With tact that took the crowd she jerked off the harness and started off up street with the disputed property while the two were tumbling over each other in the dust. The young fellow had evidently got a pointer somewhere, for as soon as he got through he pushed his way through the crowd, and sped to a telegraph post where the horse was stationed. He mounted with the celerity of Jessie James and was out of sight in no time.

Scott Act.

Police Magistrate Edmison had three Scott Act cases to deal with in Ashburnham on Thursday:—Queen vs. Beckett, Queen vs. Young, and Queen vs. Calcutt. Fines of $50 and costs were imposed in each case.

Personal.

Mr. G. A. Sherin has left town to reside permanently in St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. J. A. Richardson, traveller for the Great Waubash Railroad, was in town yesterday. He says that the Peoria Railway, on which the terrible accident took place a short time ago, is virtually bankrupt. The estimated claims amount to over a million dollars, which is more than the road is worth.

Obituary.

The people of Peterborough and the district at large will learn with sincere regret of the death of Mr. H. B. Weller, son of Judge Weller, of this town. A few weeks ago he contracted a severe cold, which developed into an alarming state—abcess of the brain. He was taken to Toronto and placed under the care of an eminent physician, but the treatment was futile. He expired on Thursday. The deceased was a young lawyer, with bright prospects of success before him. He was educated at Upper Canada College. He completed his law course with high credit, and has been practising his profession for the last five years in Millbrook. He leaves a young widow, a daughter of Dr. Herriman, formerly of Lindsay, to mourn for him.

An Outside Opinion.

The Belleville Intelligencer, after devoting nearly a column of its space to an account of the recent meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board, remarks:—"Right-minded men will support Mr. Warrington in his contention. The cheese was not good, and he would not receive it. Mr. Wrighton admits this when he says that ten were bad. Mr. Warrington bought the cheese at 11½c., and although the market had advanced and still had an upward tendency. Mr. Wrighton would not take the lot off Mr. Warrington's hands at the contract price, 11½c. still another proof that they were not good. If the Peterborough salesmen want the Belleville buyers to frequent their Board, it will be to their interest to appoint an arbitrator who will not dealt unjustly with them. That the Peterborough cheesemen need the Belleville buyers is evident form the bids, as reported in the REVIEW." The whole of this commotion was caused by the refusal of Mr. Warrington to take ten cheese. There were forty cheese altogether. Mr. Warrington's representative said that he would take twenty. Mr. Wrighton judged that he should take thirty. The dispute thus arising should have been settled by the appointment of an arbitrator by the buyers. The rules of the Board gives the buyers power to appoint an arbitrator, and if the two cannot agree they are to appoint a third. The buyers had not appointed their arbitrator, but that was no reason why they should not have done so at Mr. Warrington's request at the time the dispute occurred. Without saying whether the cheese was fit to take or not, Mr. Wrighton may have refused to take it on account of its being a very small lot.

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

False Alarm.

At about one o'clock this morning a man came to Mr. Edgecumbe's, George street, and made a great noise. Mr. Edgecumbe came down and the man asked for the key of the fire alarm box. As there was a window broken in the hall door Mr. Edgecumbe handed the key out without seeing the man. After a good deal of fuss the alarm was rung and the man returned with the key. Mr. Edgecumbe asked him where the fire was, but he threw the key through the broken pane of glass and hurried off without replying. A few minutes after the Fire Brigade were on the spot but no fire could be found. If caught and convicted of ringing an alarm without cause the guilty person may rest assured that he will be treated with severity at the hands of the Court.

Fuller-Rubidge.

At three o'clock this afternoon a Magistrate's Court was held at the Court House. The case before P. M. Edmison was Fuller vs. Rubidge, for assault. On the production of a doctor's certificate that the defendant was ill the case was adjourned till Wednesday.

Military Funeral.

The officers of the 57th Battalion, the Peterborough Troop of Cavalry and the Right Division of the Durham Field Battery are requested to attend the funeral of the late Capt. Weller, of "B." Cavalry Troop, which will take place at 3 o'clock to morrow afternoon.

P. C. McGinty Attacked.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning P. C. McGinty proceeded to stop some disorderly conduct at the corner of George and Murray streets, but instead of dispersing, the crowd attacked him. He did not succeed in making any arrests. A slight cut on the head was all the injury he sustained.

THE MELEE OF THE MILKY WAY

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I have just had placed in my hands a copy of the Peterborough Examiner of August 25rd, comprising an editorial with the above caption. It is not my intention to refer in detail or at length to the particulars of the assault made upon the gentleman who was its subject, but will confine myself, at present, to the assertion that the Examiner account of the transaction is, from beginning to end, a tissue of gross misrepresentations and unmitigated falsehoods; and this assertion, if I mistake not, will be verified by the evidence that will be brought before the magistrate who will shortly have to try the case. The article in question was evidently published with the intention to prejudice the matter, and is a weak attempt to elicit the sympathy of the public on behalf of the assailant.

I am, sir,

ONE ACQUAINTED WITH THE FACTS OF THE CASE.

August 25, 1887.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

INSIDE AND OUT.

Scenes About the Parliament Building—Gen. Buller's Report.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—An enormous crowd congregated in the Palace Yard yesterday afternoon to await the arrival at the House of Commons of Mr. Gladstone, and when the Liberal leader came he received an ovation fit for a king. Nor did the enthusiastic greeting of the Grand Old Man stop here. His entrance into the House was the signal for a burst of cheering, hand clapping, hat tossing and handkerchief waving that lasted for several minutes. In marked contrast to the reception of Mr. Gladstone by the people assembled outside the Parliament House was that accorded by the populace to Lord Salisbury, Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. Goschen. As each of these gentlemen appeared in view a storm of groans, hoots and hisses arose and increased in volume until the object of the crowd's detestation disappeared from sight. The absence of Mr. John Morley from his seat was conspicuously noticeable and was the cause of much comment of varied character. The Tories claim that his failure to respond to the Liberal whip signifies his dissent from the recent tactics of the English Liberals against the National League, but this is not the case. Had Mr. Morley's voice or vote been essential to the success of Mr. Gladstone's object he most assuredly would have been in his seat this evening. The scene in the House when Mr. Gladstone arose to speak was highly exciting. He was tremendously cheered at the beginning of his speech and vociferously applauded at the end, and the howls and cat-calls of the younger Tories sank into insignificance beneath the weight of the avalanche of approving cries. Mr. Gladstone was in splendid form. His voice rang out with all its accustomed clearness and resonance, and the vigor of his gestures betokened excellent health. The arguments of Mr. Gladstone and his followers, as set forth in last night's debate, were to a great extent based upon the report of General Sir Redvers Buller, Under-Secretary for Ireland, which was exhaustively discussed at the conference of Liberal members held yesterday. Presuming that General Buller's sources of information as to the state of Ireland were ample and reliable, and that his report embodies the most damaging evidence against the National League that could be secured, the Liberals contend that by Gen. Buller's, and consequently the Government's own showing, the Ministry is proceeding against the League without warrant, in fact, or suspicion.

A Popular Young Bank Clerk.

A despatch from Cobourg says:—"Mr. Stuart Armour, who has been teller of the Bank of Toronto here, was presented last night with a purse of a few hundred dollars, on the occasion of his removal to Port Hope to fill a similar position in the agency of the bank there. A large party met in the parlors of the bank to witness the presentation, and to testify to the esteem in which Mr. Armour is held by the customers of the bank and citizens generally. It was the intention of Mr. Coulson, General Manager, to remove Mr. Armour to London had the negotiations with the recently defunct London Bank not broken down. Mr. Armour is a son of Mr. Justice Armour. He left today for the scene of his new duties, followed by the good wishes of a host of friends." Mr. Armour's friends in Peterborough will be pleased to learn of this evidence of the goodwill of the people among whom he lived towards him.

Ready to Spring.

The Port Hope Times says:—"Base ball in Port Hope is lying dormant, or perhaps better, couchant. Cobourg seems the only team that cares to split a lance with them Peterborough has been written several times but does not yearn for Port Hope's scalp. The printers will have to gird up their loins and awaken interest in the game."

Two Bandits Gaoled.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Aug. 26.—Lorenzo Villa, the notorious bandit who was recently captured, was brought back yesterday and gaoled in Matamoraso. This man and Bill Cruz, a noted half-breed from Austin, Texas, were the two who murdered Sheriff Martin and Collector Henry, of Starr County, several years ago, and for whom a reward of $1,500 was offered.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE

LORD SALISBURY'S GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED IN THE COMMONS.

Mr Gladstone's Resolution Defeated by Seventy-Eight Majority—The Debate in the House a Spirited One.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—In the debate on Mr. Gladstone's motion in the Commons last night, Mr. Timothy Harrington commented severely upon the character of the documents which Mr. Balfour had quoted, but had refused to lay upon the table, and declared them to be utterly worthless. He asserted that the plain duty of the League was to continue its work and not shrink from the consequences.

Mr. T. W. Russell, member for South Tyrone, after remarking that Mr. Gladstone had somewhat misconstrued some of his (Mr. Russell's) statements, protested against the coercion of the League, but said that, having supported the Crimes Bill, he could not consistently deny the right of the Government to the powers it demanded and secured by the passage of that act.

Mr. Bradlaugh asked why, if the Government's statements were true, the Ministry had not proclaimed the League before they did?

Mr. T. P. O'Connor said the effect of the proclamation would be to remove the partition between the tenantry and the evicting landlords. The Government could deal with cases of intimidation if there were any without proclaiming the League.

On motion of Sir George Otto Trevelyan, the debate was adjourned. Mr. Chamberlain was not present.

Lord Randolph Churchill returned to London yesterday and was in his seat last evening. He has no intention of taking part in the debate, but will vote with the Government. Lord Hartington will follow Sir George Trevelyan in to-night's debate.

The Daily News says that Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Mr. Jesse Collings and several other Unionist members will support Mr. Gladstone in to-night's division.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir George O. Trevelyan, one of the late Gladstonelte recruits, resumed the debate on Mr. Gladstone's motion for an address to the Queen praying for nullification of the Government's proclamation of the Irish National League. He said the late Government did not ask the House of Commons to pass the Irish Crimes Bill on heresay, but that they based their demands on Parliamentary returns of grave outrages. There had been committed 7788 outrages during the previous year, and 26 agrarian and political murders during the first half of the year. He contended that the House should have tabulated statistics of crime in Ireland, and that to mention one crime here and another there was not sufficient to justify such action as the Government were now taking against the Irish people. He denied that the general operations of the Irish National League increased crime in Ireland or led to the general non-payment of rent.

Sir R. E. Webster, Attorney-General, held that the reason why there were not more convictions of crime in Ireland was simply because of the terror of the League. He reminded the House that Earl Spencer's Government had repeatedly proclaimed the Land League meetings and that Sir G. O. Treyelyan had supported these proclamations on the grounds that the objects of the Land League were to put down landlordism and to effect a separation between Ireland and England. The object of the existing league, said the speaker, was the same.

Mr. Harrington, Nationalist, said that as one largely responsible for the League, he desired to reply to the calumnies that had been hurled at its character. He read letters from branches of the League condemning the practices which the Government declared the League promoted. The League repudiated every form of outrage. The League would go on doing what it had done in spite of proclamations which had no terrors for the Irish people. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wm. Redmond accused the Orange Society of worse intimidation than was ever charged to the League, which was a genuine national association. Under certain circumstances, he said, boycotting was justifiable and necessary. (Cheers from the Ministerial benches.)

Lord Hartington said he did not think the speech of Mr. Redmond would influence the House in favour of the constitutional and legitimate character of the League. He doubted whether if Sir Geo. O. Trevelyan's views upon the Crimes Act had been known in Bridgeton he would have got the support of the Irish electors. Now, as far as the act of an association was wholly political, it could not be condemned, but if the action of an association destroyed the liberty of the people and subverted order and good government, it did not matter what the supposed motives of the association were. It was enough that its action was hostile to social order. (Cheers.) The House had already decided that intimidation prevailed preventing persons from pursuing their lawful occupations. He contradicted the reports that he had disagreed with the Government upon the step proposed.

After further discussion the vote was taken, 194 voting in favour of Mr. Gladstone's motion and 272 against, giving a Government majority of 78 votes.

SERIOUS TROUBLES ANTICIPATED.

A Quarrel Between a Negro and a White Causes An Uprising.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 26.—Intense excitement prevails in the Southwestern part of Lonoke County over a rumored negro uprising. The trouble arose over a quarrel between a white man named Clarence Chapman and a negro named Hunt. Chapman refused to pay Hunt what he wanted for some work he had done for Chapman. A few days ago Hunt and four other armed negroes attacked Chapman, and he was shot through the hip. Three of the negroes were arrested, among them a justice of the peace. Since that time bands of armed negroes have been collecting and threatening vengeance on the whites. The sheriff of Lonoke has organized a formidable posse and has posted guards every four miles from Clear Lake to Lonoke, a distance of 18 miles. It is feared there will be serious troubles before the difficulty is settled.

MURDER IN TORONTO.

A Respectable Citizen Shot in the Head and Robbed.

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—Constable Smith was extinguishing the lamps on Dufferin street at the outskirts of the city this morning when he came across the body of a well dressed man lying on the sidewalk opposite the exhibition grounds. A bullet wound over the ear, on the left side of the head, indicated the immediate cause of death, and although the pistol, an ordinary six shooter, was found near the body, the fact that deceased was righthanded is taken as evidence that the fatal shot was not fired by his own hand. The pockets in the clothing were rifled of everything valuable, including a gold watch and a number of gold coins.

The remains were those of William Priestman, of Toronto, Agent of the Chicago Masonic Insurance Association. He left his house last evening about nine o'clock to visit some person on Queen street, and great surprise was experienced at his non-return.

Mr. Priestman was about 45 years of age. He leaves a widow and three young daughters.

Prof. Whitney Drowned.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 26.—Prof. H. S Whitney, of the Excelsior Academy on the shore of Lake Minnetonka was drowned in the lake yesterday. Three children were playing on a raft which went to pieces, and the Professor, swimming out to save them, became tangled in the weeds and was drowned. Two of the children were rescued, but the third was drowned.

The Comet.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Prof. Swift, director of the Warner Observatory, has received a telegram from Mr. William Brooks of the Redhouse Observatory, Phelps, N. Y. announcing the discovery of a suspected comet, yesterday morning, in right ascension eight hours thirty-three minutes, declension north twenty nine degrees, or near Lyra canori. This morning he sent the director another telegram confirming his suspicion. It is described as brightish and having a slow motion easterly. This entitles Mr. Brooks to still another comet prize of $100. It is not visible to the naked eye.

Peterborough College—Third Year.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of Bannell Sawyer & Co in this issue. The Peterborough Business College has rapidly and steadily developed, until to-day it enters its third year more hopeful than ever. Term after term, competent, qualified graduates have filed out into business, where many—very many—of them have showed how well and how thoroughly had been done their business education. As the college begins its third year, new office and college fixtures have been added, new text books authorized, and new methods adopted. We cannot help congratulating the proprietors on the success that has begun to follow in the wake of their efforts. d49

BRIGHT ON GLADSTONE.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Mr. John Bright, in a letter supporting the Crimes Act, says no government would risk the unpopularity arising from such a measure unless convinced that it was necessary. Referring to Mr. Gladstone he says: "No minister has done more for Ireland, and I am often almost ready to think that in despair he is willing to hand them over in future to the tender mercies of the men who gave him so much trouble during his tenure of office in 1881."

A MUNICIPAL MOVEMENT.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—A conflict is imminent immihent between the government and the municipal council. A decree was published yesterday annulling the latter's resolution inviting delegates from all the municipalities in France to a grand congress here, but the municipal committee had already issued invitations and a large number of towns are certain to respond. The government announces that it is determined to prevent the congress which will be the first step toward a federation of the communists.

A CABINET COUNCIL.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The Cabinet Council, which was in session two hours yesterday, devoted its time to discussing the National League question, and it is understood without reaching any other decision than the one arrived at when the Council last met. Evidence is rapidly accumulating that the Government keenly feel the peculiarly embarrassing position in which it is placed. It is afraid to go further forward and dare not go back. Threatened with the loss of popular support on the one hand, and the wrath of the Tory squires on the other, the Ministry know not which way to turn, and the probabilities are that the ultimate result will be a split in the Conservative party. Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour remained in conversation together for some time after the adjournment of the Council.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The Pays claims to have received news from London that an agreement has been reached on the New Hebrides question and is only waiting the signatures of the proper officials. SATURDAY, AUGUST, 27, 1887.

AN IRISH QUESTION.

SIR M. GRANT DUFF after an absence of six years from the Mother Country has been giving in the Nineteenth Century his views on the present position of the Irish question among others. In stating that his own opinions in regard to it have remained unchanged in that interval, he instances that he believed and still believes that the land of Ireland cannot support its present population, make what changes we will in the land laws.

This may be true as stated in these restricted terms, but it is certainly true that Ireland could support not only its present population but even greater numbers by means of other changes. If methods were devised for re-establing the old manufacturing industries of Ireland and for introducing others, means of livelihood would be afforded for myriads thus employed. At the same time those deriving their living directly from the land would have the benefit of a more profitable home market for their present produce, besides the still more important advantage of supplying garden stuff and other requisites for the manufacturing population, a species of agriculture which enables a smaller acreage to support a family.

The Irish question will not be solved as long as it is regarded as mainly a land question. Important as is the agricultural industry, no country can attain its full development or support a numerous population in prosperity unless manufacturing industries also flourish. Without them even the agriculturist must be at a manifest disadvantage. We recognize this truth in Canada and it is equally true in Ireland.

OUR CONSTITUTION.

IF the London Advertiser wishes to criticise the REVIEW it might at least refer to our own words, and not to the falsified version of the Ottawa Free Press. The REVIEW did not uphold an "arbitrary power to veto," but on the contrary deprecated the use of arbitrary power. Our question was whether in a case of difference between the Dominion and a Province, as to a general policy, the Dominion should have the right to veto or the Province the right to nullify. Our Constitution gives the Dominion the right to veto Provincial legislation in such circumstances, through the instrumentality of the Governor-General-in-Council, that is practically of the Administration, which is responsible to the people for its manner of exercising such power. The Opposition theory seems to be that by legislation, by administration, and by rebellion, if necessary, a Province has a right to nullify the general policy of the Dominion, if it can derive any special advantage from thus separating itself from the action of the rest of the country. The former plan is more in accordance with our Constitution, and it seems to us is better calculated to ensure the progress and stability of our Dominion. On the other theory we might have a diverse policy in every locality, and disagreement pushed to serious consequences.

MR. STEVENSON, the member for this Riding, is instanced by the Lindsay Post, on the strength of reported interviews, as being in favor of Commercial Union. If the interview with Mr. Stevenson is that reported in the Detroit News, we may inform the Post that Mr. Stevenson has flatly denied its accuracy, and asserts that he is opposed to Commercial Union, against which he pronounced himself as a member of the Toronto Board of Trade. If the Post has some other false report of the same character, Mr. Stevenson will simply have another correction to make. The advocates of Commercial Union seem chiefly to rely for success upon their slanders of loyal men.

THE Toronto News is now pretending that the Grand Trunk Railway is a party to its vile attempt to stir up rebellion in Manitoba by publishing a false statement that Sir John Macdonald threatened to procure Imperial troops to coerce the Province. Though the Grand Trunk people have been fierce opponents of the C. P. R., we do not for a moment believe that they would use such villainous means to carry on the conflict.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

GRATTAN AND PARNELL.

Curious Coincidences in the Lives of the Irish Leaders.

DUBLIN, Aug. 26,—Mr. E. Dwyer Gray, member of parliament and editor of the Freeman's Journal contributes editorially this remarkable comparison of the lives of Grattan and Parnell:—"Following are striking coincidences of date and fact:—Grattan was born in 1746; Parnell exactly a century later. Grattan entered the Irish parliament in 1775; Parnell took his seat in the House of Commons in 1875. In 1779 was established that body led by Grattan which enabled him to achive legislative independence, while in 1879 was founded that organization of which Parnell is leader, and which bids fair and enable him also to regain legislative independence. The freedom of Dublin was presented to Grattan, and exactly a century later the same compliment was conferred on Parnell. Both were Protestants. Grattan attached himself to Fox, who visited Ireland in 1778; Parnell to Gladstone, who visited Ireland in 1878. A golden tribute from a grateful people was presented to both. Grattan bought an estate in Queen's county, the stronghold of the Parnells, but chose his home in county Wicklow, whither Charles Stewart Parnell's grand-father had migrated and also fixed his residence—Grattan, at Tinnehinch, Parnell at Avondale. In 1780 Grattan's declaration of Irish rights was fiercely attacked by the government, and so also was Parnell's programme in 1880 by means of state prosecution. Both were intended for the bar in youth, but neither had a taste for the profession. A base effort was made to implicate Grattan in the treasonable plots of his time, and failed; the same remark applies to Parnell."

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S., says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

HARD TO DETERMINE.

No scheme which would give to Canada an equal voice in the determination of Federal taxation could be considered. She would have to accept the position of a State in the Union, with only such power in the determination of tax rates as her comparative population would entitle her to. How this could be affected without representation in Congress is a matter hard to determine.—Philadelphia Record.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

But he spread out his hands with a gesture of despair, and answered: "Ah, no! No accident, no accident! Design!" After which he became so incoherent and unintelligible that I had to seat him in my arm chair, and pour out a stiff brandy and soda for him. This he swallowed, throwing back his head and closing his eyes, as if it had been hemlock; and when he had drained the last drop of it, he felt in his pocket for a note, which he handed me.

"Read that, Harry," said he, tragically. "Read it, my dear young friend, and tell me, if you can, what is to be done. Because I am willing to confess to you that what to do I know not at all.

The note, which I perused with no small curiosity and astonishment, ran as follows:

"ROYAL HOTEL, STOCKINGHAM.

"DEAR PAPA—Lord Bracknell and I were married before the registrar here this morning. It is all quite legal and regular, of course; but we think we ought not to omit the religious ceremony, although circumstances have prevented us from going through it in the ordinary way; and so we propose to drive over early to-morrow morning and be married again quite privately by you. I am sure you will understand how advisable this is in order to prevent scandal, and I need not warn you that not a word must be said at Staines Court until it is all over and we have left again. Afterword you can break the news to Lord Staines. Bracknell thinks his father will not have been made uneasy by his non-appearance, as he often runs up to London without mentioning that he is going to do so. Please tell Sarah that I shall want all my things packed up, and that she must begin doing it at once, and sit up all night, if necessary, as there is no time to lose. I have engaged another maid to meet us in London, and shall not take Sarah with me. Do not distress yourself about this sudden resolution of ours; you will see that all will come right in the end. We shall be with you soon after 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

"Your affectionate daughter,
"HILDA BRACKNELL."

I can testify that the above is a strictly literal reproduction, because I wrote it down word for word, immediately after I had read it, thinking it worthy of remembrance as a curiosity in the way of epistolary composition. Never, I imagine, was a treacherous act avowed with more cynical effrontery. The writer seemed to have forgotten altogether that she had been engaged to be married in the course of a few days to an honest man who had the folly to adore her. One can't think of everything, and I suppose she was fully absorbed by the important considerations set forth in her letter. She was anxious to avoid unnecessary scandal; she did not wish to incur the discomfort of a stormy interview with Lord Staines, and she was determined not to part with her new clothes. If she had wandered away from these main points she might perhaps have confused her father's mind, which, to be sure, was not a very clear one.

I really could not see my way to offering that unlucky man much comfort. "If you wish for my opinion," I replied when he repeated his demand, "I should say that you had better read the marriage service over them and then pack them off with all dispatch. After that, it will be your pleasing duty to impart the good news to Lord Staines, keeping well out of the reach of his arm while you do so. I don't know that it is any business of mine, but in common charity I will undertake Jim.- May Heaven send us both a good deliverance!"

As soon as I had got rid of the Rev. Simeon, I went to bed. I could think of nothing but poor old Jim and the cruel blow which it would be my lot to strike him on the morrow.

CHAPTER VI.

As matters fell out, the task of enlightening Lord Staines was thrown upon my shoulders, in addition to that with which I had already saddled myself; for scarcely had I finished my breakfast when Mr. Turner arrived, trembling and breathless, to say that he really did not feel equal to encountering the brunt of his patron's wrath.

"Indeed," he added, with a ludicrous effort to regain his accustomed suave pomposity, "I am not sure that it would be right on my part to do so. I have not forgotten the very improper terms in which Lord Staines chose to address me when I called upon him once before on—er—a somewhat similar errand, and both for his sake and for my own, any repetition of such a scene is—er—to be deprecated. To you profanity of language would be less shocking—at least, I mean that you must be more accustomed to hearing it; and—er—in short"——

"In short," I interrupted, not over respectfully—for really the Rev. Simeon's aspect at that moment was not calculated to induce respect—"you want me to do your dirty work for you. Very well; I don't particularly mind; I may as well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb. Only I don't propose to prevent Lord Staines from going down to the rectory later in the day and shocking you with profane language. It may not be altogether your fault that your daughter has disgraced herself and inveigled Bracknell into disgracing himself with her, but you may as well be prepared to be told that it is. If I were in your place I should be a good deal more frightened of Jim Leigh than of Lord Staines."

"Gently, my dear young friend, gently!" returned Mr. Turner with dignity. "You are excited, and I do not blame you for it; but to say that my daughter has disgraced herself is to say too much—a great deal too much. That she did very wrong in engaging herself to James I allow, and he will not find me slow to express my sincere sorrow and sympathy; but we must bear in mind that her affections were given in the first place to Lord Bracknell. I will not say that the young people were justified in taking the law into their own hands; yet I may doubt whether Lord Staines' motives for forbidding them to marry were of the highest kind. Now do not answer me, I beg of you. I can see that you are not yet master of yourself. If you will allow me I will go up stairs and sit with your dear mother while you walk over to Staines Court."

Evidently Hilda had been talking to him, and it would be absurd to waste good indignation upon such hopeless ineptitude.

"Pray do so, Mr. Turner," I answered; "my mother will be very glad to see you. Only I hope you will kindly refrain from expounding your views with regard to your daughter's marriage to her, because she is rather subject to attacks of nausea."

With this valedictory shot I set out to perform the first and least painful of the duties which I had accepted. I found Lord Staines in his study, and apparently in a rather bad humor.

CAMPBELLFORD.

A NEW TOWER.—The Presbyterian congregation of this place are completing the tower on the south-west corner of their church, the brickwork of which is to be twenty feet high. When completed it will make a grand improvement upon the appearance of the church.

A NEW DAM.—Mr. James Dinwoodie has started the erection of a new dam which is to take the place of the old and dilapidated one. This dam has formed a millpond for the Dinwoodie mills, which are about a mile north of Campbellford on the east bank of the river, for a great number of years. The old dam is a considerable distance above the mills. The new one will be straight across from the north end of the grist mill. In it there will be three slides through which to run the logs and to let away water. The structure will cause the employment of a large gang of men this fall.—Herald.

BOBCAYGEON.

CAMP—The Methodist camp meeting, in the park, commences on Thursday, and promises to be a nice combination of religion and recreation.

LOST ON THE LAKE—Navigating the lakes at night, is not so easy as might be expected. A gentleman started the other evening late, for Crowley's Island, and he spent the night paddling around Big Island, bringing up at Red Rock by day break. He did not say much. He did not feel that he could do the subject justice.

THIS TAKES THE CAKE—Mr. Geo. Robinson went out angling the other day, just above Mr. Petrie's mill. He was enjoying himself with reasonably good sport, when suddenly a regular whaler of a bass made a scoot off with the bait. After considerable playing, he was brought near to the boat, when he gave a spiurge and snap went the line. Another hook and sinker were attached to the line, and Mr. Robinson had settled down to a discussion as to the probable weight of the fish, when the rod was nearly jerked from his hands. Up came the fish to the boat, and again the line snapped. With the solemn declaration that he would have that old sea dog out of that, or break another leg, Mr. Robinson fitted a trolling line to the rod. In less than five minutes there was a pull, and the smile smolled by the gentleman at the but end of the rod, was of a peculiar combination. The struggle was soon over, and a six pounder lay in the boat, with the two lost hooks in his mouth, the lines being bit off within an inch or two of his mouth.—Independent.

The Czar and his Daughter.

A letter from St. Petersburg to one of the Vienna papers says that the Czar is much absorbed just now by giving lessons on the pianoforte to his little daughter, the Grand Duchess Xenia, who has made marked progress under her father's instruction. His Magesty dislikes the classical composers and teaches his daughter exclusively dance music. The child has been promised a long-coveted bracelet if she learns a favorite waltz of the Czar's by next month.—London Telegraph.

Two Indians Shot.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—Two Indians have been shot by William Thompson, a settler near Calgary. The re[illegible] were attempting to steal his cattle [illegible] attacked Thomson, who shot them in self-defence.

SMASHING CONFEDERATION.

The Mail's leading articles are still devoted to the effort of fulfilling its threat to "smash Confederation into its original fragments." Its cynical counsel to the smaller Provinces to rebel or secede shows how sour the once sweet grapes at Ottawa have become. If the N. P. and C. P. R. be intolerable burdens, as the Mail alleges, it was the chief advocate of their imposition.—Toronto World.

TARIFF UNION.

If somebody were to propose that Ireland should form a tariff union with France, involving discrimination against Britain, the "trooly loil" Mail would arise upon its hind legs and howl like a yellow dog on a moonlit night.—Toronto World.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

The argument on the Browning injunction to prevent the construction of the Manitoba boundary railway was postponed on Wednesday for two weeks, the interim injunction being continued in the meantime. An application for another injunction, on behalf of a settler named Jennings, was filed on Wednesday.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Piano Tuning.

Mr. Geo. Gumpricht is in town for a few days only. Orders may be left at Mr. T. Menzies' bookstore, or Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's drugstore. d48

Big Eggs.

Mr. Osway Carver brought into the editorial sanctum two hen's eggs, weighing respectively 3¼ and 3¼ ounces. Mr. Carver's hens are no particular breed, but he thinks these eggs hard to beat.

Opening of the Collegiate Institute.

The Collegiate Institute will reopen at 9 o'clock on Monday, the 29th instant. It is hoped there will be a full attendance, as examinations for grading the classes will be held without delay. 3d45

Roofing.

Messrs. S. James & Co., whose card will be found in another column, have been awarded the contract for the roofing of Messrs. Hall & Innes' new store. The firm of James & Co. are favorably known in their line of business, and parties requiring roofing will find it to their advantage to interview them. 2d44

THE oldest men's club is the Masonic; the oldest women's club is the broomstick; and the best place to buy boots and shoes is at KIDD's new boot and shoe store.

Proceedings Threatened.

Mr. C. W. Sawers has served the Mayor, and Mr. Henry Sherwood, contractor for the stonework of the Simcoe street bridge, that the mode of building now being adopted will cause serious damage to his property, and that unless a change is made he will take legal proceedings to defend his interests.

Handsome Horses.

The Lindsay Post says:—"Mr. T. Cavanagh of Peterborough has been in Lindsay during the past few days in quest of a few find horses, and we believe he has secured the same. Among the animals purchased was a fine mare from Mr. Caughlin of Emily for $200; also an excellent mate for the same from Mr. Meynes of Fenelon at about the same price. Together they make one of the handsomest pairs that ever left Lindsay for some time."

The Band Officers.

A regular meeting of the Fire Brigade Band was held on Friday evening in the band room. The principal business before the meeting was the election of officers for the ensuing year, which was transacted in the most satisfactory manner. The names of the officers chosen are as follows:—

Hon. President—W. A. Sanderson.
President—E. McCabe.
Secretary—W. Beatty.
Treasurer—Joseph Crowe.

Rice Lake.

Parties wanting a pleasure sail cannot do better than take the steamer Golden Eye, which leaves the C.P.R. wharf at 7.30 a. m., and get landed at Jubilee Point, where there are tables for dining on, a spring of water, and the best of fishing. Those wishing to take a sail on the lake, can continue on to Idyl Wild. Meals are provided on the boat, or at Idyl Wild, for 25 cents. This beautiful trip can be enjoyed for 75 cents return tickets. Special arrangements for parties of 20 (twenty). d25

A Daisy Train.

The new train placed last week on the Haliburton division is, the Lindsay Post says, the "daisy" train of that line. The passenger coach, smoking and baggage cars are practically new, and have been painted a uniform color—the new Tuscan red—with trimmings of lemon, yellow and black. Engine 628 has been overhauled and put in first-class order, with Engineer G. Johnston at the throttle. Conductor Pym is the controlling "mogul" of the train, and the district speaks favorably of his uniform courtesy and thoroughness.

Camping.

Mr. J. Craig, of Craig & Mooney, has returned to town after spending a two weeks' holiday at Jubilee Park. He says there are still quite a number of camps in the vicinity, mostly occupied by Cobourg people. The fishing he describes as "simply immense." Jubilee Park promises to make a bold bid for public favor as a summer resort next season. It has only been opened about a month, but has during that time attracted a large number of pleasure seekers. Suitable buildings are being erected in the park.

An Open Air Christening.

The Dominion Churchman says:—"On Sunday morning, 14th inst., an open air service was held on Prssque'isle Point, Rev. R. H. Harris officiating. The infant daughter of Mr. J. L. Weller (of the Murray Canal staff of engineers), was christened. Mr. Sherwood, lighthouse keeper, lent his organ, and Miss Collengtte Harris, organist of St. Paul's church, Brighton, conducted the musical portion of the service. She was assisted by an impromptu choir. Altogether the service was most impressive. A large number of the campers came over to Brighton for the evening service on the previous Sunday."

WOMEN'S rights are incompatable with men's rights, but should turn the same way, and when mated with lefts and bought from R. J. KIDD, give both men and women complete satisfaction.

CRICKET AT WHITBY.

The Peterboroughs Defeat the Home Team by Six Wickets.

This match was played at Whitby on Friday, and although the Peterborough team took only eight men, one of them a junior, they were strong enough to defeat the Whitbys by six wickets. Three substitutes were found in Whitby, who rendered valuable service in the field, Snow especially. Whitby scored 52 and 72, of which Pelham got 23 and 8; Hatch, 3 and 18; C. Ray, 5 and 13; Greenwood, 10 and 4; Lawler, 3 and 12. "Cob" and H. Ray bowled splendidly, each scoring nine wickets at an expense of about 50 runs each. "Cob', made a magnificent left-hand catch in slips, Ross the victim, and "Baker" a very hot one at point.

Peterborough scored 72 in their first innings, Sam Ray with a very fine 24 being the chief contributor. In their second innings they got 71 runs for the loss of four wickets. Hugh Ray played well for 18, "Baker" 23, (the same score as he got last time at Whitby), the feature of the innings being the stand made by him and Sam Ray, the latter carrying his bat for a very fine 25.

The Whitby fielding, especially in the first inhings, was brilliant, and the bowling well on the spot. The wicket played very badly at first, but the rolling between innings improved it somewhat in the second innings.

In August, 1880, the Peterborough club visited Whitby with six men, five substitutes being played. On that occasion they succeeded in beating Whitby (then one of the strongest clubs in Canada) by 21 runs.

The score is as follows:—

Mission Services.

Mission services are to be commenced in St. Luke's Church on Wednesday Sept. 21st. Services will be held daily with special addresses on Sunday. There will be four services each day. The series of meetings will close on Oct. 2nd. The following is taken from a circular issued by the Rector:—

"You are earnestly and affectionately urged to attend the Mission, which is proposed to be held in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, from Wednesday, Sept. 21st, to Sunday, Oct. 2nd, both days inclusive.

"The objects of this Mission will be to awaken the careless, to soften the impenitent, to guide the doubting, to comfort and help the weak-hearted and to strengthen such as do stand.

"To effect these objects, special services will be held daily, under the direction of a Missioner, i. e., one, who by the gifts of nature and of the Holy Spirit, and by special training is fitted for this particular work.

"I make this announcement at this early date, because much must be done beforehand in making these services widely known, in exciting an interest in them, and in explaining to those who have never attended a mission, what are its objects and methods of working. I need scarcely say, therefore, that in this work I shall require the co-operation of all parishioners."

POLICE COURT.

A WAGES CASE.

SATURDAY, Aug. 27.—S. Angelsy was charged by Edmund Payton with the non-payment of $9 wages due him.

Mr. Angelsy made his statement to the effect that he went to Mr. Payton's house and hired the boy at $4 a week on the condition that the boy board himself.

The boy, his father and his brother denied that this condition was attached. There was nothing said about the board.

The MAGISTRATE said that he was compelled to take the testimony of three in preference to that of one. He would give judgment in favor of the complainant for full amount. Mr. Wood, for complainant; Mr. O'Meara, for defendant.

VAGRANCY.

Maud Davis was charged by P. C. Pidgeon with being a vagrant. The charge was proved and the prisoner sentenced to one month in gaol.

THE HORSE DICKER

Wm. Cummings appeared in Court this morning awaiting the advent of Mrs. McDonald and her son, who assaulted him at the corner of Hunter and George streets on Friday. He summoned them both to appear to answer the charge of assault, but neither appeared.

Mr. O'MEARA said that the summons for the son had been left at his usual place of abode, but that the son was not there nor had been there since it was left.

The case was enlarged till Thursday.

Mount Royal Meets.

The Montreal Witness says:—"Canton Mount Royal, No. 1, last evening held its first meeting since returning from Peterborough, a good number being in attendance. It was decided to accept the kind invitation of Beaver Lodge to its moonlight excursion on Sept. 1st. The Canton will attend in uniform. A letter of condolence was sent to Col. Slatter, of Toronto, on the death of Mrs. Slatter, and a letter was sent to Lieut.-General Underwood, acknowledging the honor conferred on Canton Mount Royal by the promotion of one of its members, Lieut. Col. Jackson, to the rank of Colonel and Aid-de-Camp on the Lieut.-General's staff. All the Chevaliers expressed themselves as highly delighted with their trip. The leader and members of the Victoria Rifles' Band say they never had such a good time on a trip before, and they will be glad to go anywhere with the 'Odds' whenever they are wanted. General Underwood expressed great admiration for that 'magnificent band,' and made a liberal offer to Canton Mount Royal and the band to attend the grand parade at Denver, Colorado, in September. As that meant a three weeks' trip, and as not many of the Canton are millionaires, this had to be regretfully declined. Chevalier Alexander Rough, late of 'B' Battery, was appointed drill instructor. The handsome flag presented to the Canton in Peterborough is now on exhibition in the window of Messrs. Paterson & Rolin, Notre Dame street."

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1887.

THE Toronto Globe quotes approvingly the assertion made by the Philadelphia Record that, under Commercial Union, on the question of determining the tariff, Canada would be allowed a voice equal to that of one State. It is well that Canada should thus know what the Commercial Annexationists of both countries consider to be Canada's "due share." As to withdrawing from the Union if it does not suit us, the Toronto Mail another annexationist organ, has shown us our probable fate in referring us to the example of the Duchy of Brunswick in the German Zollverein and now in the German Empire. Of course Canada will jump at the idea of becoming an American Brunswick.

THE Commercial Annexationists now admit that their proposed union would not give our farmers a better price for their beef or wheat. They had previously admitted that it would not give a better price for cheese. Next.

THE LONDON BANK.

The Ex-President Says he will Square Himself with Everybody.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 27.—Henry Taylor, ex-president of the London Bank, returned to London yesterday. His arrival was expected, and a large crowd assembled at the station to meet him. He says he has returned on his own account, and is going to square himself with everybody. At his house, in London South, Mr. Taylor was closeted with Mr. Barbeau, of the City and District Saving's Bank of Montreal, which is interested in the Ontario Investment Association. It is understood that the affairs of the Ontario Investment Association could not be settled without Mr. Taylor's aid, and explanation, and that he is protected from prosecution in the meantime. Mr. Taylor was inaccessible to reporters at his house, but from interested parties with whom he conversed the following items were gleaned:—The statement of the bank shows nothing worse than when the Bank of Toronto made their investigation. As soon as possible the immediately available assets of the London Bank will be applied to meeting the liabilities. When resumption will take place is a question of time, and whether the payment will be conducted by the Bank of London or some other institution is not settled. There is nothing to show that the depositors and creditors will not get one hundred cents on the dollar. The bank is secured for all that Mr. Taylor owes it, provided the collateral notes put in by him are good. The completed statement was expected to be presented to-day, but for some unexplained reason it has been detained.

ITALIAN IMMIGRANTS.

A Scheme to Settle them Comfortably in Canada.

MONTREAL, Aug. 27.—An extensive scheme toward improving the condition of the Italian population in Montreal, as well as in other cities of the Dominion, is in preparation. Some of the wealthy Italians of this province, after consulting as to the best plan have decided to ask the Government for the land grant for the purpose. The intention is to secure some hundred square miles of good land, divide it up in farms of 150 acres each and sell these farms to individual Italian immigrants. The stock company that is proposed will erect a house and a barn on each farm and give each tenant two horses and a number of head of cattle and implements enough to allow them to commence farm work.

Fish Die by Thousands.

GALENA, Ill., Aug. 27.—Within the past two or three days the fish in many of the streams in this section have died by the million. The banks of the Galena river are lined with dead fish. At Buncomb, Wis., the dead fish are so numerous on the banks that the stench arising from them is unbearable. At Lancaster, Wis., upwards of fifty waggon loads of dead fish are in sight. One theory as to the cause is that during the dry, hot weather the valleys and marshes above were filled with some poisonous growth that, with the recent floods, was carried into the streams and poisoned the water.

THE ENGLISH CROPS.

The London "Times" Reviews the Situation—Wheat the Best Crop.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Times publishes the following about the English crops:—Wheat comes out as the best crop of the year, as was to be expected. It is not so great a crop, however, as a few weeks ago a few enthusiasts were hoping for. The cold winter and spring and the absence of rain when the plant was young never [illegible] to have their effect, [illegible] pens that in a wheat [illegible] cruiser. crop though good, is not an [illegible] one. The land is not now in such a state of cultivation as it was in 1874 and 1886, when these wonderful crops were reaped. Those who have thought over the report of enquiry made on the drought of 1886 for the royal Agricultural Society, cannot fail to be struck with the fact that the high state of cultivation of land, the excellence of drainage and steam tillage had much to do with the production of the heaviest crops in that year. The quality of the crops will be high, and we may take it for granted that a crop of about thirty-two bushels of sixty pounds each will be gathered. We may put wheat as producing a crop of a little over 8,000,000 quarters gross, giving a crop to sell of a little over 7,000,000 quarters. This will leave us dependent on foreign supplies for at least 17,000,000 and probably 19,000,000 quarters, for it must not be forgotten that the shortness of the potato crop will cause a greater demand than usual for breadstuffs. The demand for corn for cattle feeding is also likely to be great, especially if low prices prevail. When we consider that the world is reducing its wheat area, and that there is not now a very large supply of corn on hand, we may reasonably expect that agriculturists will receive this year a more remunerative price for their wheat than for a few years past, the extraordinary doings recently in futures and options are merely matters of gambling, and reports based on them should be received with caution, as far as their effect on the future of the legitimate wheat trade is concerned.

Fire at Sussex, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 27.—The pretty town of Sussex, on the line of the International Railway, about forty miles from here, suffered severely by fire this morning It broke out in the Victoria Hotel owned by Wm. Holman, which was soon destroyed. The Masonic Hall, Geo. H. Whiter's building, dwelling and the saloon of Robert Kellie, Robert Morrison's dwelling house and shoe store, Mrs Wm. Quigley's residence and Albert Fenwick's dwelling and meat store were all consumed. Loss at least $20,000; insured for about half that amount.

A Murderer Arrested.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 27.—Some few weeks ago George Hogwood, aged 20, a resident of Ridgetown, came to his home intoxicated and severely beat and ill-used his mother. On Wednesday the police in Windsor were notified that Mrs. Hogwood had died from the injuries received, and to keep a sharp lookout for the son. Hogwood heard the police were after him, and eluded them until the morning, when he was arrested and locked up. The charge entered against him is intent to kill. The young man, who is not over bright looking, does not appear to realize his position.

Alleged Counterfeiter Arrested.

SAULT ST. MARIE, Aug. 27.—Counterfeit bills and silver have been largely circulating in the "Soo" in the part few weeks. The Bank of British North America five dollar notes and Dominion two dollar notes seem the most plentiful. The Canadian authorities yesterday arrested Joe. Lapierre and found four hundred dollars in his possession, nearly all counterfeit. It is believed there is a gang of counterfeiters here circulating the stuff. Canadian bills are accepted with considerable hesitancy on the American side.

A Fight with Indians.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The Herald has the following, dated Genwood Springs, Col., August 26: A battle has taken place between Sheriff Kendall's men and Colorow's band of Ute Indians. Deputy sheriff Jack Ward is killed and several are wounded. Several Indians are reported killed. Several were seen to fall and to be carried off. So far as known the fight was stopped by darkness, and it is thought it is almost certain to be resumed by daylight.

The Quebec Loan.

QUEBEC, Aug. 27.—It has just been made known that the $3,005,000 loaned from the Chemical Bank of New York has not yet been deposited. The cabinet has been unable to obtain by telegraph more particulars in this connection, and this morning at the special request of the Premier Hon Messrs. Shehyn and Ross left for New York to interview the authorities of that monetary institution.

THE SUGAR BOUNTIES.

NEWS comes from across the Atlantic that the majority of the nations of Europe, with only two or three exceptions, have agreed to join the conference for a mutual arrangement as to the sugar bounties. By a system of bounties on the manufacture of beet root sugar, several of these nations have so stimulated production at a great cost to the public revenue that they are ready to reconsider their policy, and desist from this competition against each other. So injurious has this unequal competition been to the sugar industry in Great Britain, closing many refineries and bringing all to the verge of ruin, that those who are thus deprived of employment have been agitating strongly for the imposition of countervailing import duties, and have made considerable impression on the authorities.

The British refiners being thus driven to the wall by foreign competitors, whose expenses are paid for them by their fellow-countrymen, are at their wit's end to dispose of their products on any terms. It is not surprising then that they have been willing to sell a few cargoes to Canadian wholesale grocers at a rate similar to the price that might be expected at a bankrupt sale. That this is the fair price of sugar no reasonable men would contend.

Every Canadian housekeeper knows that sugar is now both cheaper and better than it was before the N. P. reopened our closed refineries. Yet because the wholesale grocers have agreed not to sell at a price below what is only a fraction of a cent higher than the sugar obtained at this slaughter sale, an outcry is being raised of extortion, not only against them but also against the refiners who have not combined.

Now there is nothing wrong in a combination not to carry competition to a dishonest extent, and competition is dishonest when prices are made so low as to result either in defrauding creditors or in the necessity of making up the loss on the particular article by secretly charging customers an excessive profit on other goods. The combination is wrong when its object is to form a monopoly so as to obtain an exorbitant profit.

While sugar is as cheap and good as it is now and its refining affords a livelihood to a large number of Canadians, fair-minded men will not make accusations of extortion, or press for the destruction of the industry by the free admission of boused sugar from Europe, or sugar from the United States, favoured by an excessive drawback on exportation.

THE CATTLE TRADE.

MR. VALANCEY FULLER is one of the most prominent agitators for Commercial Union, and he is supposed by his friends to be an especial authority as to cattle. To show how utterly untrustworthy are his assertions and arguments we invite attention to the following extract from a letter which he has recently written. He says as to cattle:—

"Do you think your readers are so blind that they will overlook the fact that the English market will be as much open to them then as now, and that the Americans cannot compete with us on the English market owing to the necessity of their slaughtering their cattle, not from any desire on the part of Great Britain to place us on a better footing than the Americans in her market (as in fact she never does), but because we have no diseased animals in Canada, whereas the Americans have."

Mr. Fuller must know that if he succeeded in removing the custom houses between us and the United States the English market would not be as much open to our cattle as now. Canada has the valuable privilege, denied to the United States, of conveying cattle alive to their market instead of slaughtering them at the port. The day we adopt Commercial Union this privilege will be taken from us and we will be placed at the same disadvantage as our neighbors, for there would be no means of determining in Great Britain whether cattle imported from Montreal were Canadian or just brought over from the United States, so the disability must extend to all. And while our market in Great Britain would be thus injured, the United States market would not make amends, for they have a larger surplus to sell than we have, are exporting more to Great Britain than we are, and sell in their markets at a lower price than the Canadian quotations. Our farmers too would lose the custom of the smaller factories which the Commercial Unionists admit would be closed, and the United States farmers would gain the custom of those manufacturing in their country for us. The very point Mr. Fuller touches, of the compelled slaughtering of cattle is a strong argument against his agitation.

ONE COFFIN TOO MANY.

A CASE WHERE A SUPERSTITION SQUARED WITH THE FACTS.

A Story of the Time When Things Had Just Begun to Boom in the Old Tuolumne Camp—"One Coffin Short" at the Funeral.

"It was at the old Tuolumne camp when things had just begun to boom. A few rich strikes that some of the lucky ones had made had encouraged the rest of us to hang on. The Jumping Jehoshaphat claim had got in some of the new fangled powder and was blasting away for all that was out. Most of us looked askance at the new powder, and when Uncle Billy Grimes prophesied that the camp would be blown up with the stuff or get poisoned with its fumes, as his partner had at Red gulch, we made the Jumping Jehoshaphat boys move it out of harm's way. So when a blast went off one fine morning when nobody was expecting it, and four out five of the best men in the camp, who were all able to say, 'I told you so,' as we rushed up to the claim.

"The camp was intensely excited, for these were the first deaths since we came in, not counting two sluice robbers and a horse thief that we had hung for luck. We stood off a little bit, for no one but the five boys in the pit knew whether there were half a dozen more to go off. But we sailed in pretty soon and hauled out what was left of the boys, and it was a sight to make you sick. We were pretty badly cut up about it, and when we had cleaned them up and laid them out decently in their cabin we went down in front of Dutch Dave's saloon, and Si Hawkins called the meeting to order.

"'Boys,' he said, in a husky voice, 'we've got our first chance to start a graveyard and no town ever had a better. Them boys thar', and he jerked his thumb over his shoulder, 'would do any graveyard proud, and we ought to start 'em off in style. It's a rotten shame if we don't give 'em the best send off the market's got, and d—n the expense.'

"We cheered the sentiment, in spite of the occasion, and he continued: 'What we want to do is to send for coffins. Any man that's in favor of this sentiment, can just walk up here and plank down his dust.'

"No one could refuse this appeal, and the needed sum was soon raised. An order was written to the Simpsonville undertaker and given to the driver of the down stage, with the verbal message:

"'If they ain't here by to-morrer night a committee of ther boys'll be down thar ter find out why, an' they'll need their coffins ter hum.'

"About sunset next evening a wagon turned off the main road and came into camp. It brought the coffins. They were unloaded, one after the other, and shone with all the splendor that fresh varnish could give them.

"'Thar's style for ye," said Hawkins, with pardonable pride. "How the boys would enjoy 'em if they were here. By the Lord Harry!' he shouted, suddenly, 'there's six here. Who ordered six?'

"Jim Davis was the man that wrote the letter. He turned deathly pale and said: 'By ——, there's bad luck coming. There's a sixth man in this crowd. I ordered five coffins, an' that extra one hasn't come for nothing.'

"There was a sudden silence, and the most of the crowd turned as pale as Jim. It did look mighty plausible that that there coffin was looking for some one, and each man felt an uncomfortable suspicion that he was the one. The only one that was bold enough to resent the idea was Five Fingered Jack, who had been born with five fingers on his left hand, and had evened matters up by shooting off his thumb.

"'You're a good one, Jim,' he says, 'you're the scholard of the crowd, but you can't write straight yet.'

"'See here,' said Jim, getting riled, 'I an't no scholard, but I don't knuckle down to no man when it comes to orderin coffins. I kep' a copy of the letter, so't the undertaker don't cut any shines with us.' He pulled out the letter, and he had written 'five' as plain as life.

"'That coffin has come for one of us', he continued, 'an' it means business. It stands to reason that when a coffin travels twenty-five miles it's goin' to git its man.'

"We gathered round, looking about as solemn as we felt, and some of the boys kept a looking over their shoulders suspicious like to the cabin where the dead men lay, as though they were afraid the night might encourage 'em to come out an' pick their company for the next day's journey.

"Si Hawkins tried to pump the fellow that drove the team up to the camp, but he didn't know anything about it. The coffins had been loaded in by the undertaker, and he brought them' up as they were given to him. So Hawkins told us to come into Dutch Dave's, and the boys began to get their courage out of a bottle, in the natural way. As they got livened up they began to joke about their fears and recommend candidates for the vacant honor.

"'Mebbe it's after the feller what stole Simpson's horse,' said Five Fingered Jack, in a sort of bantering tone. 'Ef he's ketched he'll need it mighty bad.'

"The crowd laughed—all but Jim. He took it seriously and tried to argue the matter. 'He won't git no coffin,' he said. 'He'll be lucky ter git buried at all. Ye can laugh all yer want ter, but there's goin' to be six funerals to-morrow instid of five.'

"'Ther's a dead coyote a little ways up the gulch. Mebbe ye'd like ter plant him along with the boys,' continued Jack, mocking him.

"Jim began to get his back up. 'Thar! Hear that,' he said. It was only the hoot of the mountain owl, but it's enough to give a dead man the cold shivers if he's feeling a little off color. 'Hear that! Ef that doesn't mean bad luck I'm a Dutchman.'

"Some of the boys began to look nervous again.

"'Shet up, can't ye!' said Jack, contemptuously. Ye're wuss nor a hoot owl yerself. A scared fool like you is a regular Jonah in camp. Ye'd break it up in a week of ye had yer way.'

"'Who's a scared fool!' says Jim, firing up like a fighting cock.

"'You air,' says Jack.

"'Yer a liar,' says Jim.

"The boys began to climb behind boxes and anywhere else they could to get out of the way. There had been bad feeling between the two ever since they came into camp, and we knew it meant business when they began passing compliments like that. About as soon as you could say Jack Robinson the popping began. The two men walked toward each other firing as fast as you could count. Jim dropped to the floor. Five Fingered Jack wavered a moment and then fell across Jim's body.

"We crawled out of our hiding places to view the remains. Si Hawkins was the first to get to them, and he looked down mournfully as we gathered around.

"'Gad, boys,' he said, regretfully, 'we're one coffin short.'"—San Francisco Post.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Oh, how do you do, Maynard?" said he, looking up from the letter which he was writing. "Do you happen to know anything about that fellow Bracknell? When I was his age it used to be considered the civil thing just to let your father know when you proposed to leave his house or return to it, but nowadays the young men seem to think that they needn't take any notice of their fathers, except when they want money. Here is Bracknell gone off, nobody knows where, at the very moment when I am making business arrangements for which his signature is required. I told him about it two days ago, but of course my convenience counts for nothing when it is a question of going to some confounded steeplechase or other."

I thought there was nothing to be gained by putting off the evil moment. "I can't tell you where Lord Bracknell is, Lord Staines," I replied, "but I have come here to give you some very unpleasant news about him. He was married yesterday at the registrar's office at Stockingham to Hilda Turner."

Lord Staines started up, overturning his chair. A rush of blood made his cheeks crimson for a moment, and then ebbed slowly away, leaving them of a chalky whiteness. For a full minute he uttered never a word; then he advanced slowly toward me from behind the table, trembling a good deal. "Maynard, my dear fellow," said he, quite quietly, "it is not possible that you can be telling the truth. Somebody has played a foolish hoax upon you."

And when I shook my head, "My good sir," he went on, with rather more impatience, "I tell you that the thing is impossible! You will allow me to know something about my own son, I suppose. Bracknell is what you please—I never called him perfect, God knows!—but at least he is a man of honor. You don't seem to take in that no honorable man could act in the way that you describe."

"It is not altogether unprecedented," I ventured to observe.

"I don't care whether it's unprecedented or not; Bracknell never did it. If he had been determined to marry this—this lady, he would have defied me and done it in the light of day like a man, knowing very well what the consequences would be. But as for slinking off with her on the sly and betraying the confidence of his friend—pooh! don't tell me! If you brought the whole parish to swear to it, I wouldn't believe it."

I suppose he was really less incredulous than he professed to be, poor old fellow, for presently he added: "And pray, where did you get this precious piece of information from?"

And then I told him the whole story. It was one of the most unpleasant things that I have ever had to do in my life, and when I had said my say I wanted to go away and leave him; but he held me back, gripping my arm tightly. So far he had listened to me quietly enough, scarcely interrupting me, and only once or twice muttering under his breath a word or two which I could not catch, but now on a sudden his anger burst forth in a storm of disjointed, incoherent sentences.

"I'll never see his face again—never! You may tell him so from me. He has chosen to take his own way, and by the Lord he shall have it! Not another penny shall he have. I'll stop his allowance—a devilish handsome allowance, too!—and his debts, which I have paid again and again, by George, without so much as grumbling—a fool and his money—but he'll find that I'm not quite the fool he takes me for. Damn it all, sir! did you come up here with the idea that you were going to talk me over? You have got up this scheme among you—you and that girl and old Turner, a man who owes everything to me and thinks he can play me such a trick with impunity. But I'll very soon let him see his mistake. He shall resign the living, as sure as I stand here!"

"I think you forget, Lord Staines," I interrupted, "that I, at least, can have had no conceivable object in furthering Hilda's schemes. If I had known anything about them, or had had any power over them, I should have done my best to put a stop to them for poor Jim Leigh's sake."

"Yes, yes—I know," he answered, with a complete change of tone. "I beg your pardon, Maynard; don't mind what I say about you; I didn't mean it. I mean what I say about Bracknell, though—I'll never speak to him again. Oh, Harry, that boy has broken my heart! He knew it was essential that he should marry money—and then to ruin himself for the sake of such a girl as that. You needn't pity Jim Leigh; he's well rid of a bad bargain."

Very likely he was, but unfortunately there was no likelihood at all that he would take that view of the matter. I was beginning to say as much, but the words died away upon my lips; for at this moment the door was thrown open and Jim himself strode into the room. As soon as I saw his face I perceived that some one had been beforehand with me, and that there was no longer any occasion for me to consider in what words he might best be informed of Hilda's flight.

He glanced rapidly at each of us in turn. "It's true, then?" he exclaimed.

Lord Staines wheeled round upon him with an odd access of fury. "True!—yes, it's true enough. Why the devil shouldn't it be true? Did you make the mistake of supposing that my son was an honorable man? Why, what a simpleton you must be! I—I"——

He stopped abruptly, stared at us for an instant with fixed, glazing eyes, and then, swaying forward, would have fallen on his face if Jim had not caught him.

Between us we lifted him on to the sofa, and then the servants were called, and poor little Lady Mildred had to be sent for. I told her in as few words as possible what was the cause of her father's seizure, thinking it best that she should know the truth; and, so far as I could judge, she was not very greatly surprised. She kept her presence of mind admirably, displaying no agitation and doing what little could be done until the doctor came.

Later in the day a great London man was telegraphed for; but our local practitioner confided to me that he would not have considered this step necessary in the case of a patient of less exalted rank.

"Will he die, then?" I asked.

"Well, no," answered the doctor; "not this time. But he will never be the same again. I have told Lady Mildred that she may exercise her own judgment about telegraphing to Lord Bracknell, but that in my opinion he should not be allowed to see his father."

Jim and I left the house together. We had hardly exchanged a word as yet, and I did not like to begin; so that we walked in silence as far as the park gates, where our paths diverged; and there he came to a halt.

"Goodby, Harry," said he; "I'm going away to-morrow."

"The best thing you can do," I answered.

"Is it? I don't know. Anyhow, I can't stay here. I shall go to India, or Australia, or somewhere—it doesn't much matter. Harry, you are right; this world is peopled by a set of rascals and liars."

I said the world was bad enough, but that I had not brought quite so sweeping a charge as that against it.

"Oh, I thought you had. One thing I know; I will never trust man or woman again as long as I live. But it won't bear talking about, and, after all, what's the good of talking? Goodby, Harry."

He turned and walked away a few paces, then suddenly faced about and came back to me. "Some day or other we shall meet again, if I live," he said; "but when that will be I can't tell. Don't forget me, old chap; I'll write to you when I can."

And so we parted. I confess that I did not take his words quite literally, and fully expected that he would be over at our house on the following day. But I was disappointed. He left England, just as he had said that he would do; Elmhurst was shut up; its owner was lost sight of, if not absolutely forgotten, by his many friends, and it was years before I saw his honest, kindly face again.

OVER THE ROCKS.

A Woman's Adventure on the Margin of Lock Maree.

While Christina McIvor, a middle-aged woman belonging to the parish of Lochbroom, and locally known as Stiana Bheag, was on her way to Kinlochewe a few days ago she accidently stumbled and fell over one of the many precipices that skirt the margin of Lock Maree. A tree growing from a cleft in the rock miraculously intercepted her fall and prevented her from plunging into the deep waters beneath. To this the woman clung with the grip of despair until she had partially recovered from the stunning effects of her dreadful fall. Beneath her was a sheer rock washed by the dark waters of the lake; above, a rock impossible to climb; and to add to the misery of the poor women's situation she became painfully sensible of the fact that her right leg was broken below the knee. The place was miles away from the nearest house and her prospects of immediate held were therefore faint indeed. In this painful extremity she noticed a projecting ledge close by the tree, and by efforts which can be more easily emagined than described she managed to crawl or drag herself to this place of comparative safety The pain in the fractured limb, intensified by her efforts, was frightful. She lay quiet exhausted and exposed to the elements, having lost her shawl in the fall. In this perilous and exposed condition she remained from the Saturday till the following Monday afternoon—three days and two nights—without food or shelter of any kind, slaking her feverish thirst by water that trickled from the rocks overhead and which she caught in her boot. On Monday she noticed a boat passing, and, using her remaining strength, she managed to attract the attention of its occupants to her dangerous position. By skilful manœuvring on the part of the fishermen the poor woman was lowered into the boat, taken to Pooleewe and thence sent to Ullapool.—Leeds Mercury.

FOR INDIGESTION.

DR GEO. W. HALL, St. Louis, says: "I took it for indigestion and found it of decided advantage."

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Sugar Bounties.

Sir James Ferguson, Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office, stated in the English House of Commons that Austria, Hungary, Germany, Holland, Italy, Spain and Denmark had joined the conference proposed for the arrangement of a union among European nations concerning sugar bounties. France, Russia and Portugal, he added, had not yet answered the invitation to join the conference.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

A False Report.

It was reported that Mr. John Fanning of this town had been arrested in Stratford, being mistaken for McGarigle, the great boodler, but such is not correct. Messrs. Fanning and Mercer were on a holiday trip through Western Canada and Mr. Fanning was pointed out by some as a gentleman who looked very much like McGarigle. Mr. Fanning has arrived home safely and looks well after his few weeks outing.

Official Account.

P. C. McGinty gives the account of the attack upon him on Friday night in the following words:—"I heard a racket at the corner of George and Murray streets and went up to see what was the matter. I saw a crowd standing around and went up to them and told them to move on. I never thought that they would turn on me, and I didn't pull out my baton. All at once two fellows each seized one hand, while the whole crowd commenced kicking me. There were so many kicking that I didn't get kicked much myself. They then dropped my arms and put off as hard as they could go. I would have used my revolver only it was so dark that I couldn't see them a little distance away."

TEXT: "I AM THE DOOR."

SERMON PREACHED BY DR. BARNARDO, OF LONDON.

He Speaks of the Force Contained in the Words of the Text—An Appeal for Sinners to Turn from Their Ways.

There was a large congregation at St. Paul's Church on Sunday evening to hear Dr. Barnardo preach. He chose for his text from St. John, X, IX.—"I am the door."

He commented to the simplicity of the language of the text, and in addressing the people here this evening he wished to be just as plain. He did not wish to use words or ideas that would mystify or make difficult the way to life. Some time ago he had met a gentleman and they joined in a conversation. He found the gentleman outspoken in everything and especially so on the topic of religion. Said his friend "There are 385 religions in the world, which is the right one?' and then proceeded to argue against Christainity. It was all right for Christians to assert that their's was the right religion, but would he be right in accepting such an assertion. "The fact is," he concluded, "I have given it up altogether." The preacher said that he proceeded to make the very words of his friend an argument in favor of Christianity. The very fact of 385 religions being in existence showed that the people of the earth were groping after God. Their hearts were yearning for God. The longing after divine things was natural to human beings and their longing was fully satisfied in Christianity.

There were four words in the text; four simple words. And yet there was a depth of meaning in each one of these words. Take the first word, "I." How that word rebuked us! Many had searched for peace and happiness through a variety of avenues. Some would say, "If I only had the ecstatic feelings of Christian men and women all would be well." But Christ never said that "feelings" were the door. One says "I am an adherent of this place of worship, but have not become a member of the congregation. I do not think I am worthy. If I could only receive the Lord's Supper worthily then I might be happy." But Christ did not say that sacraments were the door, though thousands of people were making sacraments the door. They went to church regularly and partook of the sacraments without having Christ in their hearts. This was a delusion of the most dangerous sort. Jesus says: "I am the door." These people were making Jesus' gifts to the church the door. The church was not the door to Christ, but Christ was the door to the church. There were two things which kept us from Christ: 1st, sin; and 2nd, ignorance. And yet sin of itself kept no one from Christ. For the consciousness of sin is the signal for the sinner to flee to safety. But ignorance was a great barrier to prevent people seeing the way. He asked if they had ever heard with the hearing of the heart the words "Jesus loves you still." Some say "surely it must be a mistake. He can never love me after the life I have led." But there was no mistake about it. Jesus says "I am the door." "I will bring you back to the Father." The love of Jesus was not less than that of a mother who some time ago received back her erring daughter after three years of wicked life, and folded her to her bosom as one that was lost and that had been found. Jesus was ready to receive the sinner. The door was open. One single exercise of the heart's trust makes the change. He did not mean to say that this was all, but it was the beginning of everything. The moment he trusted in Christ, that moment was he identified with him. A short time ago a man in London got confused as to where he was going and was standing on a railway track. All at once an express train hove in sight and was bearing down with tremendous speed. On it came with a great red glare and terrible rush. The people near shouted and screamed. The man stepped off the track and the train whizzed by. He was saved. How? By one single step—from danger into safety. It was just like that in the acceptance of Christianity. The moment that the sinner trusted he was out of danger. All were invited to pass in at the open door.

He briefly spoke of the force of the second word in the text—"am." "I am, the door." He said that there were abundant promises for sinners who would turn from their ways, but there was not one promise for the sinner who, hearing the way of truth, delayed the acceptance of Christ till some more favorable time. Christ did not say, "I will be the door." The sinner might ask, "How can I go in?" By trusting, he would say. Trust was better than belief. Belief might be simply an intellectual conception, but trust signified a personal confidence, as well as belief. He warned those who put off the availing themselves of the promise. They should take care how they turned the grace of God into an occasion of their own ruin. By continuing in their sinful state they were shutting the door of the Gospel on their own faces.

WITH MILITARY HONORS.

The Funeral of the Late Capt. Weller Takes Place on Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock the funeral of the late Capt. Weller moved down Hunter street, from the residence of the father of the deceased. The cortege was a long one, and this as well as the crowded streets, attested the respect in which the late Capt. Weller was held. The funeral was conducted with military honors, the procession being formed as follows:—

Troopers of "C" Troop of 3rd Regiment of Cavalry on foot with Carabines reversed.
Troopers of "B" Troop of 3rd Regiment of Cavalry on foot with Carabines reversed, 57th Battalion Band.
Cannon drawn by four horses Sergt. Major Metheral, No. 1, Qt. M. Sergt. Snyder, Lead Driver, Dr. Lillico, Wheel Driver; coffin, helmet and sword upon the cannon spread with Union Jack.
The deceased's horse saddled, with boots in stirrups reversed, led by groom.
Lieut-Colonel Harry Rogers, officers of the 57th Battalion, Carriages.

The funeral marched to St. John's Church, the troops forming in a double line up the winding gravel walk. The coffin was borne from the cannon, Capt. Stapleton, Capt. Brown, Dr. Stevenson, V.S., of C Troop, Capt. Sanderson, Capt. Langford and Capt. Edwards, acting as pall bearers. At the church the Rev. J. W. R. Beck conducted the funeral service. The procession re-formed and proceeded along Hunter street to George street, and down George street en route to the Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. J. W. R. Beck conducted the service at the grave, which was followed by three volleys from the firing party.

The procession re-formed and marched back to town.

The officers in attendance at the funeral were: Lieut.-Col. Harry Rogers, in command; Dr. Turner, Surgeon of B Troop; Capt. Brown, of A Troop; Capt. Stapleton, of C Troop; Dr. Stephenson, V. S. of C Troop; Lieut. Fallis and Lieut. Sutton, of B Troop; Capt. Sanderson, of the Durham Field Battery; Capt. Edwards, Capt. Langford, Capt. Burke, Capt. Brennan, Capt. Rogers, Lieut. Lee, Lieut. Peck, Lieut. Dennistoun, Lieut. Mason, of the 57th Battalion, and Capt. Winslow, of the 46th Battalion.

The Millenium.

The Rev. Mr. Baxter, head of the Saved and Gospel Army, has been lecturing in England and his lectures appear to have attracted attention. The following despatch from London, dated Aug. 28th, shows that the lectures are those he delivered in Peterborough:—"Rev. Mr. Baxter, of the Church of England, has just delivered three prophetic lectures at Liverpool. There is nothing vague about this prophet. England is to be separated legislatively from Ireland, India and her colonies; Lucien Bonaparte is to become King of Syria and later on Emperor of France. Belgium and the Rhine Provinces are to be annexed to France in 1896. One hundred and forty-four thousand watchful Christians are to ascend from earth to heaven, and the millennium is to commence on April 11, 1901. The lecturer challenged any minister or individual to show that he had made any mistake. No one as yet has taken up the challenge, possibly because everyone is convinced that no mistake has been made, possibly for other reasons."

Great Fire.

At fifteen minutes after two o'clock this afternoon the Fire Brigade was called. It took just a minute and a half to get the aparatus out of the station. The fire was located at the Lock Works but it was so small that it could scarcely be seen without "specs." A spark from a chimney had fallen upon the dry shingles and it lay smouldering there. Engineer English strapped a babcock on his back and went up stairs to attack the "smoke" from in under, but when he got there the roof showed no flare and so he came down the stair. The boys outside run a ladder up and Jack Hayes whistled across to the hydrant to let him "have a little." After the shingles were raked off Jack gave the spot a splash and then turned around to the crowd and and announced that the fire was out. Damage, ten mills, fully covered by insurance.

The Schools.

This is a day of mourning to the bad boys that don't like school dicipline, and one of thanksgiving to mothers. The public schools opened this morning with a very large attendance, there being nine hundred and fifty pupils at the Central and Ward Schools at the opening. Classes were arranged and a half holiday given this afternoon. The Collegiate Institute opened to-day with an attendance of 138. Quite a number of pupils have come from outside the town. The staff is an excellent one as it is now constituted; and there is every prospect of abundant good work being done this term.

TURNBULL'S first shipment of Boy's Suits and Overcoats is now opened out. They are Special Value.

Town Council.

A meeting of the Town Council is called for this evening.

A FAILURE TO ORGANIZE.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The attempt to organized co-operation between the English Radical members of Parliament and the League has broken down. A resolution of sympathy was with difficulty voted or allowed to pass, and the meeting dispersed. Yet this assembly was convinced by Mr. Bradlaugh Mr. Labouchere, and other extreme men, and only extreme men attended. Individual Radicals will do as they please, but an official report says that no further effort will be made for concerted action.

PEOPLE PREPARED.

DUBLIN, Aug. 28.—The Freeman's Journal, commenting on the defeat of Mr. Gladstone's motion, says the division in the House of Commons will undoubtedly encourage the Government to carry on their warfare, and if they do we anticipate troublous times for them. The people were never better prepared to stubbornly resist tyranny than they are at the present time.

YOUNG Men! you can save $4 on $20 by ordering your Scotch Tweed Suits at TURNBULL'S for $16.

SEWERS.

THE year is rapidly advancing, winter will soon be upon us once more, and the question of sewerage has not even been considered. That, where there is a dense population, as in a town of any magnitude, an adequate system of sewers is absolutely essential to health and the prolongation of life, nobody seriously disputes. We all know that the day must come for us to adopt this ordinary sanitary measure, yet, though each year the necessity becomes more pressing, we carelessly defer action, thinking that we will risk neglect a little longer. It is not wise or prudent; indeed it is as dangerously improvident as if individually we deferred insuring our lives or our houses in the hope that fatal disease or destructive fire would not come just yet.

Besides the constant reasons for compliance with the well known requirements of sanitary science, there is an especial reason why we should not postpone this work indefinitely. Asiatic cholera is gradually creeping nearer. No man can venture to say that it will not invade Canada, or that, if so, Peterborough would be exempt from its ravages. If it came and found us unprepared, as at present, there would be a terrible calamity. It would be too late to take action on its arrival, for the digging of trenches, the disturbance of the soil would increase rather than diminish the danger.

There is another strong reason why this subject should be taken into consideration without delay. The work can be far more efficiently and economically effected if it is undertaken deliberately and in accordance with a carefully considered plan. It would be wise, therefore, to devise such a plan as speedily as possible and then to carry it out by degrees, executing and extending the work in accordance with it as may seem judicious.

POLICE COURT.

DISORDERLY.

TUESDAY, Aug. 30.—M. Wier was charged by P. C. Adams with having been disorderly on the streets of Peterborough on the evening of August 29th.

The circumstances were as follows:—The members of the force saw two young fellows at about half past seven o'clock driving up and down the streets, and goading the horse to do its utmost. They went over the Ashburnham bridge on the "sail" and came back again at the same gait. They did not get much farther, for when a spring and a dash P. C's. Adams and Pidgeon were on them. P. C. Pidgeon caught the horse by the head and P. C. Adams pulled one of the young fellows out while P. C. McGinty brought up the rear with the other. P. C. Pidgeon sported the horse and rig. The two were taken to the cells.

This morning at the court Wier did not remember having been shouting as he passed along the street.

FURIOUS DRIVING.

D. McFarlane, who was driving the rig was charged by P. C. Adams with furious driving. He said that the horse was going at the rate it usually went, but after reflection acknowledged that the pace was immoderate. He also acknowledged going over the bridge at a faster pace than a walk. He was fined $2 for furious driving $2 for trotting across the bridge and $3.50 costs, $7.50 altogether.

The MAGISTRATE, (to Wier) were you drunk?

WIER—I can't say I was, sir.

The MAGISTRATE—Did you see McFarlane strike the officer with the whip?

WIER—(Emphatically) No Sir, I did not.

The MAGISTRATE—Then you must have been awfully drunk. (Laughter).

His Worship said that if the charge had been laid for being drunk he would have imposed a fine. But as it was he could not tell with certainty who it was that was shouting. He would give Mr. Wier the benefit of the doubt and let let him off.

AN ARMED CAMP.

Excitement Over the Recent Acts of the Captain-General of Cuba.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 29.—A Key West special says: Advices received on Saturday night state that great excitement prevails in Havana, caused by the recent acts of Captain-General Marcia in taking possession of the Custom House and placing the officials under arrest. The city is in charge of regular troops, and the situation becomes daily more desperate. Recalling events attending the massacre of the medical students in 1861, a reign of terror prevails, and it is expected that Havana will be declared in a state of seige. Already several conflicts have occurred between the troops and civilians, resulting in the killing of some and the wounding of others. The Captain-General has issued a proclamation calling on the rioters to maintain order, otherwise severe measures will be adopted to uphold the law. Daily conferences are being held with his military chiefs, and measures will be adopted to prevent a general uprising, which is imminent. The colonels of all the volunteer regiments were called together and ordered to disarm their forces, otherwise they would be responsible for what might occur. The volunteers who are opposed to Captain-General Marcia, and, encouraged therein by political bodies, are desirous of his removal, have joined the rioters. Several meetings have been held where cheers of "Viva Salamanca" were given and cries of "Down with Marcia." The city is placarded with a call for a general meeting to-night, and requesting all to bring arms. The call is believed to emanate from the volunteers, and serious trouble is expected. So far the Captain-General controls the situation with the regular troops, which have been distributed throughout the city, prepared for any emergency. The artillery have been placed in commanding positions, while the troops stationed in the towns adjoining Havana are kept under arms ready to move at a moment's notice. Those in Havana also have been quartered in the barracks several days. The battalion of Isabel Secuina and the forces of the Queen's Regiment are under arms at the Cabanas and Castilla del Principe. Orderlies are hurrying in all directions, conveying secret orders. Troops are stationed in front of all public buildings throughout the city, and mounted police are patroling the principal streets. All confidence appears to be gone. Even the cable officials are suspected, and the military are in charge to prevent despatches being sent off of what is transpiring. All important despatches between the officials in Havana and the authorities in Madrid are brought here by special messengers for transmission, the replies being also sent to this office. Those acquainted with Marcia state that he will carry the police and purify the public service, regardless of the consequences, and already a feeling of uneasiness permeates every branch thereof.

HOME RULE SCHEME.

Sir Charles Gavin Duffy Outlines a Plan for Ireland.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—With the reducing majority of the Salisbury Government come various schemes for Irish Home Rule. Sir Charles Gavin Duffy contributes to the September number of the Contemporary Review the outline of a plan for a House of Commons and a Senate. The House is to be composed of 105 members, and the Senate of 54. The appointment of the judiciary is to be upon the lines laid down in Mr. Gladstone's measure in the last parliament. Sir Charles Gavin Duffy intimates that Mr. Gladstone is open to conviction upon the question of having Irish representation at Westminster in addition to the local parliament. It is known that Mr. Gladstone was willing to make concessions on this point toward the close of the last session.

Construction of the Red River Road a Matter for Federal Action.

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—Sir G. Stephen, Sir D. Smith, M.P., and Mr. VanHorne have just returned from a visit to the North-West, and report the crops as being in splendid condition. Mr. VanHorne says that the Canadian Pacific Railway will not interfere with the construction of the Red River Valley Railway, as the matter rests entirely with the Federal and Manitoba Governments. He regards the construction of the road as an unwarranted attack on his Company and injurious to the interests of Canada, and says the promoters are in favor of annexation. When the road is finished the next move will be to have the custom house removed.

Motion of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Law Association held on Saturday forenoon the the following motion was passed and has since be engrossed and forwarded to His Honor Judge Weller and Mrs. H. B. Weller:—The members of the Peterborough Law Association desire to offer to the respected Judge of the County Court of Peterborough their sympathy at this time of sore affliction The lamented death of his son, Mr. H. B Weller, barrister, has elicited universal expressions of regret. His kind and genial character, associated with a brave and manly spirit, endeared him to all, and especially to us his brothers in the profession who were brought into more immediate contact with him. This association tenders to Judge Weller and to Mrs. Weller and to the bereaved widow, their heartfelt sympathy and condolence and commends them to Him who alone can comfort in the hour of sorrow.

Another Heavy Break in San Francisco —Mackay Repudiates.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—There was a large and excited crowd in the call-board room, at 11 o'clock this morning, the official hour for the beginning of trading. One sale of 100 tons was made at $1.24, a decline of 11 cents from the latest official sales on Friday.

John W. Mackay, in an interview this morning, repudiated the statements made a few days ago that he was a large holder of wheat. He said the Nevada Bank had loaned a large amount of money on wheat, but that neither the Bank nor its officials were directly interested in the deal, and he was willing to throw open all his books to show this to be a fact.

EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO.

Several Severe Shocks—An Arcade Partly Demolished.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 29.—A brisk earthquake shock was felt here about 7 o'clock a. m. In some streets the people ran out and fell on their knees praying, but the shock was not severe, and was most felt in the outlying portion of the city. The direction of the quake was from north to south, and its duration here was eight seconds. In the capital of the State of Guerrero two arches of the arcade in the main square were thrown down. The duration of the shock there was fifteen seconds. Shocks were felt at Orizaba, Tolalpa and Otumba at seven o'clock.

A BURNED BRIDGE.

Three Cars Drop Nearly Fifty Feet—The Fireman Fatally Injured.

CAMBRIDGE, O., Aug. 29.—This morning as a freight train on the Cleveland and Marietta railway neared Oldham's trestle the bridge was seen to be on fire. The engineer called for the brakes, but as the train hands thought it was too late to save the train several of them jumped. Fireman Adams was probably fatally injured. The engine and all the train except three cars passed over the trestle, sixty feet of which fell with the last three cars, dropping them forty-seven feet. The cause of the fire is unknown.

FIGHT WITH THE UTES.

Five Whites Killed and Four Wounded in Thursday's Encounter.

DENVER, Aug. 29.—A telegram from Meeker, by way of Glenwood, says information has been received that at Thursday's battle with Colorow there were five whites killed instead of two, and four wounded. Seven Indians and two squaws were killed and five wounded. There has been no fighting since Thursday, but over 600 Indians are ready to fight at the least provocation. The loss of 30 ponies and their squaws has made them wild, and they are ready for revenge.

Railway Disallowance.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Sir Henry Holland, the Colonial Secretary, to-day read in the Commons a communication from Lord Lansdowne relative to the Manitoba Railway. It denied the report about Sir John Macdonald threatening to apply for Imperial troops. It added:—"The Provincial Act for the construction of the Red River Railway was disallowed by me on the advice of my responsible advisers, on the ground that it would tap the Canadian Pacific railway, which is not yet fully established, and would seriously injure the interest of the whole country, which had submitted to large sacrifices in order to unite the provinces by a national road. The Provincial Government are proceeding with the line under the Public Works Act, but an injunction has been obtained by the Canadian Pacific railway. My Government have not interfered except by disallowance."—Mail.

Heavy Damages Claimed.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., August 29.—Mr. S. Froine, of this city, has entered an action for damages against the Grand Trunk railway company for $15,000 for the death of his wife in the late disaster. A. B. Rewy, jeweller, claims damages of $2,000 for injuries sustained in rescuing passengers from the cars, and W. Westlake, of London has entered an action for $5,000 damages for injuries sustained.

A WOMAN'S JEALOUSLY.

VIENNA, Aug. 29.—In 1881, an inn keeper named Jellinck, of Brezina, Bohemia, was sentenced to servitude for life for an alleged attempt to poison his wife with arsenic. The sentence was afterwards commuted to sixteen years. The wife emigrated to America. Recently she swore out an affidavit before an Austrian Consul stating she poisoned her own food and then accused her husband. Her motive was jealousy. Jellinck has just been re-tried and discharged.

THE "TIMES" ON AMERICA.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Times has begun the publication of a series of articles describing the visit of its correspondent to America. In an editorial the statement is made that such an experience as that of the writer is the most wonderful that can happen to man A full account will first be given of that prodigy of cities, New York. The great cities westward will then be described.

A BONAPARTIST MANIFEST.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Prince Victor, son of Prince Jerome Bonaparte, has issued a manifesto at Brussels in which he condemns the Conservative party of France for supporting the opportist Cabinet. He describes the present condition of his party, and expresses his views as to the proper course to be pursued to accomplish the end in view, the restoration of the Empire. The manifesto is remarkable in its failure to make any mention of Paul de Cassagnac, the whilom champion of Bonapartism.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Two secretaries of Gen. Ferron, Minister of War, have been arrested for disclosing to the Figaro the plan for carrying out the mobilization scheme, and thus allowing its publication contrary to the Government's wishes. The charge against them is high treason.

THE IRISH POLICE FORCE.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—In the House of Commons this evening, on a motion to grant £762,315 for the purpose of completing the credit for the Irish police service, Mr. Dillon protested against the constant increase of the expenses of the police in Ireland. Although the population had decreased 200,000 since 1880, the cost of the police service had increased £250,000. This waste of the public money was not due to crime. A monstrous and corrupt police force was kept up to evade the provisions of the Mutiny Act by maintaining a larger military force than was sanctioned by Parliament. The law was not enforced and rents were not collected, and the only effect of employing the police was to create widespread disaffection and to exasperate the people. Mr. Balfour said he would not deny that the cost of the police force in Ireland was largely in excess of that of England. He asserted that the responsibility for this state of affairs rested on those who were doing their best to foment discontent in Ireland.

THE DOMINION AUTHORITY.

In an article on "The Manitoba Railway Embroglio," in which it takes in the main the correct view of the matter, the Monetary Times says: "Sir John Macdonald once said that, on a question of this kind, the Dominion authority could not check Manitoba." In a question of this importance our contemporary should be careful not to give any encouragement by careless assertions to those who are setting the law at defiance. Sir John made no such unwarrantable declaration. Speaking in the House of Commons, addressing the Speaker, and referring to a bill then before the House, he said, "We," that is, the Dominion Parliament, "cannot check Manitoba." The measure referred to was to check the Territories over which the House had jurisdiction, which it has not over Provincial legislation. But Sir John never committed the absurdity of saying that the Dominion authority could not check Manitoba, for he knew that it could do so through the Governor General in Council, as the Mackenzie-Blake administration had done more than once. This distinction is not one of mere words, and it is of importance, not only at the present juncture as showing that Manitoba is acting in an unconstitutional, illegal and revolutionary manner, but also for the future of our country, as showing it is not allowable in the Dominion any more than in the United States for a Province to nullify the general policy of the country. It should be remembered that on this very question the representatives of the people in the Parliament of Canada at its last session pronounced in favour of this use of the Executive power, as they had a right to do, though under our constitution they had no right to legislate in the matter. It is a pity that people do not make themselves acquainted with the laws of their country and observe them.

DIRECT TAXATION.

THE Montreal Witness which supports the agitation for Commercial Annexation, in discussing the effect upon our revenue of putting goods from the United States upon our free list, says:—

"If it were found, however, that by relieving the people of the taxation on American goods the revenue was found to be insufficient, the dificiency could be supplied by forcing the Provinces to raise their own revenues, and a serious evil would be by this removed from the constitution."

Here we learn that the Commercial Annexationists, who pretend not to go so far as political annexation, are already prepared for a further great stride in that direction. Even if it be true that it is a serious evil in our constitution that the Provincial revenues should come from the Dominion Treasury, and also true that the United States constitution is far preferable in that it compels the several States to raise their own revenues by direct taxation, we beg to submit that any change in our constitution should be made on its merits after mature consideration, and not as a mere incident of our Commercial Annexation to the United States and consequent assimilation to that country.

We would ask our farmers what they think of this admitted consequence of Commercial Annexation. Are they prepared to welcome the call of the Provincial tax-gatherer asking for so much on the dollar direct taxation on the value of their property, as in the United States? Would all the gain they might make on their barley, potatoes and one or two other products compensate for paying by direct taxation the amount required for the Provincial Treasury?

THE meeting at Detroit of the chief wire-pullers of the Commercial Annexation agitators had nothing very remarkable about it, but there are two facts concerning it that should be noticed. One is that there was an outspoken advocacy of political annexation. The other is that instead of the arguments used by these schemers when in Canada, that our people would gain enormously by the market thrown open to them, they changed their tune in the United States and dwelt upon the immense field opened to their hearers at the expense of the overwhelmed Canadians.

Explosion of Dualin.

KINGSTON, Aug. 29.—On Saturday at the Wilbur Iron mine, there was an explosion, of about sixty pounds of dualin. Fire was communicated to it from sawdust on the plain upon which a spark seems to have fallen from some workman's head light. One building was wrecked and several had the glass in the windows broken. A piece of timber fell upon one J. Dinnie, breaking his leg and otherwise injuring him.

SERIOUS HUMORISTS.

THE MISFORTUNES THAT BEFELL SAXE, BURDETTE AND BAILY.

Many of Our Most Popular Humorists Write from a Heart Full of Sorrow—Saxe's Sad Lot—Burdette's Wife—Bailey's Heroic Devotion.

I have been impressed with the curious fact that many of our most popular humorists write from a heart full of sorrow. They are often men who have uncommon domestic afflictions to bear, such trials and troubles as sometimes drive other men to drink, and not a few to suicide. But the genuine humorist, like Goldsmith, or Tom Hood, or the late John G. Saxe, or the unfortunate Artemus Ward, is usually a man of many sorrows, who smiles in spite of himself while looking upon the dark side of life. I once lived in New York in the same house in which Artemus Ward boarded. It was very near what was then known as St. John's park, but which is now the great Hudson River freight depot. Poor Ward, after giving a brilliant lecture up town, would return to his temporary home, his pockets stuffed with money. He would usually come home intoxicated and throw himself upon the bed, after emptying his pockets and scattering their contents over the room. "I don't care for money," he would say. "I don't care for fame! I am the most miserable and unhappy of men!"

A POET'S SAD LOT.

The world knows of the misfortunes which overwhelmed John G. Saxe, and how he lived for years a prey to melancholy, the wreck of a railway accident, and almost the only survivor of his once large and interesting family. I remember him well in his prime, when he resided in a pretty brick cottage on Union street, in the lovely little city of Burlington, Vt. Then he had a charming wife and a large family of children. He was in the best of health, of perfect physical build, as tall and handsome a fellow as one could wish to see. He was at the height of his fame as a poet and a lecturer, and had nothing to do but travel over the country and "scoop in the dollars," as Eli Perkins does nowadays. It seemed as if fortune smiled upon Saxe, and as if his days of joy and sunshine would never end. I was a student in college then, and I remember how I used to envy him his happy lot. The years flew swiftly by, and time wrought sad havoc with the Saxe family, as well as with the genial poet himself. His wife died, and all of the children, save one, followed her to the grave, victims of consumption. I was at the wedding of one of Mr Saxe's sons, in New York city, when he married a daughter of the late Judge Sutherland. In a few years both bride and groom had passed away, and the parents on both sides are now dead. Of the poet's recent death and its sad circumstances it is unnecessary to speak.

POOR BURDETTE'S WIFE.

The saddest case I have heard of recently is that of Bob Burdette. His young and handsome wife became a dreadful sufferer from rheumatism. Nothing gave her relief and she daily grew worse. Finally the disease reached such a stage that she became terribly deformed, and was really a frightful object to behold. The skin was drawn tightly over the bones of her face, and the flesh so fell away, she looked as if she had been burned, and a dreadful scar was the result. Her face showed the bones as prominently as does Cardinal Manning's today. Her hands grew like bird's claws, and she was unable to walk. In time she became almost helpless, and could only feed herself with the greatest difficulty. This state of things continued for years. All this time poor Burdette was the most patient, loving and devoted of husbands. His affections seemed to increase with his wife's distress. He always spoke of her as "her serene highness," and called their little boy "the prince." He used to dress his wife, comb and arrange her hair, put a bit of lace about her neck, put on her lace mits, etc., and then take her up in his arms and carry her wherever she wished to go. At the table he cut her food, helped her feed herself, and held the cup or glass while she drank. He never seemed to notice her deformities, and was always loving, kind and attentive. If they passed the summer at the sea shore, he would take her to the beach, find a shady and retired place, put her in a chair, arrange her comfortably, and then, throwing himself upon the sand, read to her for hours. And so he continued to love and cherish his wife, until they were parted by death. Many of the brightest and most laughable of his contributions to the press were written at the bedside of his wife.

THE DANBURY NEWS MAN.

J. M. Bailey, known as The Danbury (Conn.) News man, is another example of a humorist who has more than his share of trials. He is a large, handsome man, with black eyes and dark hair, now plentifully sprinkled with gray. He lives very quietly in Danbury, Conn., and is either always at his little office on Main street, or at his modern residence, with its pretty green lawns and bed of flowers. He never spends an evening away from home, and has not been outside of Danbury for years. His poor wife has lost her reason and demands all of his attention. She thinks nobody in the world can do anything for her except her husband. He must dress her and arrange her hair, and attend to all her wants. She is like a child, and he gives her all of his affection, time and attention. His devotion is something heroic and beautiful. Upon one occasion, so the people of Danbury say, she went to his office and asked him to do up her hair. It had fallen down. He arranged it for her in the pleasantest manner possible, did all she asked without the least annoyance, and then took her home. Such are the facts concerning some of our well known humorists. Many more about others might be given, but we have enough to show that there is a dark as well as a bright side to the life of those who afford the public so much amusement.—Fuller Walker in Kansas City Journal.

Fifteen American Inventions.

The fifteen great American inventions of world wide adoption are: 1, the cotton gin; 2, the planing machine; 3, the grass mower and reaper; 4, the rotary printing press; 5, navigation by steam; 6, the hot air engine; 7, the sewing machine; 8, the India rubber industry; 9, the machine manufacture of horseshoes; 10, the sand blast for carving; 11, the gauge lathe; 12, the grain elevator; 13, artificial ice making on a large scale; 14, the electric magnet and its practical application; and 15, the telephone.—Frank Leslie's.

The Ways of Thieves.

"Negroes have a certain way of stealing dogs that I never heard explained. They can steal the most vicious kind of brutes. I never believed that until a negro thief here named Tom Goabout stole a ferocious mastiff on a bet with the owner, who was boasting that nobody could get into his yard while the dog was there. A nigger thief will steal clothes all the time. If he fell into a room full of silverware, he might take something, but he'd hunt around and get clothes before he left. He wants women's clothes especially, and in one instance I remember a colored man was arrested at night with a stolen bustle under his coat tails. Another fellow, years ago, broke into a house and stole a pair of hoops, and when he was going down stairs they fell from under his arm, and he tripped on them and went headforemost to the bottom and was arrested. The safe burglar who was busy at his work and forgot himself and began whistling a jig and brought the cops on him was another sample of 'chump.'

"There was a story of a New York burglar who broke into a house one Christmas Eve and put his jimmy in a little girl's stocking, and left his candle on the mantel and left the house. I don't know how true it is, but I heard it. The musical burglar who broke into a musician's house and picked up a cornet, and couldn't resist the temptation to blow it once, and then had to jump through a window, was another funny fellow."—Globe-Democrat.

Physician for a Millionaire.

Since Phil Armour got his first twinge of rheumatic pain his physician has had a very rich thing of it. Every day for months, as regular as everybody else in the Armour employ, Dr. Horsey has called around at the La Salle street office to see his rich patient. He takes a seat and watches Armour at his work. It isn't his invariable custom to interrupt him at his work. He often leaves without having any interview at all. If he wants to have a talk they go into the "box" together, as the little private office in that establishment is called. This one patient is said to be worth $10,000 a year to the handsome doctor, not an extravagant figure, either, when it is remembered that he has dropped his general practice for a month or more at a time, and given his whole attention to this one big patient. When Armour is ailing he wants to get well in a great hurry. He does not want his doctor scattering. If a good round fee will get all his time, the fee is ready. He wants to get a doctor just as he'd get a superintendent for a packing house. He wants the doctor to charge a good fee, and, the fee being paid, there's the mischief to pay if the doctor doesn't do what he's set at work to do—just as there'd be if the packing house superintendent didn't do what he was hired for.—Chicago Herald.

New Form of Building Association.

Quite recently there has come into existence in this country a society which proposes to unite the life insurance feature with the co-operative practice of the building association. In brief, its objects are that members can purchase homes by making monthly or quarterly payments for a term of from five to twenty years, payments being graded according to the age of the person when becoming a member and the length of time the payments are to run. Should a member die before the full number of installments are paid the mortgage is canceled and the house becomes the property of the heirs, free and clear of all claims, in lieu of a fixed amount of insurance money. In the plan of this society there are no assessments upon surviving members, the fund for the cancellation of mortgages at members' death being created by the regular amount of money each member is paying for this insurance feature.

This society is thought by its originators to be an improvement upon the building association. Its plans are somewhat novel and quite different in many respects from the latter. But the objects to be gained are similar in both, and a consideration of one makes a comparison with the other necessary. —Brooklyn Eagle.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER VII.

The hero of this narrative is, of course, Jim Leigh. It is true that Jim is not and never has been a particularly heroic personage; still, so far as heroic writers and readers are concerned, he stands, for the time being, in that proud position, and must abide by the consequences of it. One of these is necessarily the occurrence of a considerable hiatus in the record of his career; for what is an unfortunate writer to do when his hero disappears into the interior of Abyssinia, or the least frequented provinces of India, and will give no account of himself for months together? If I only knew something of the circumstances under which, during all those years, Jim slaughtered lions, tigers and elephants and bears in the happy hunting grounds of three continents, I should doubtless have many a thrilling adventure to chronicle; but I could never get anything but the most bald and meager recital of his performances out of him; nor do I dare to draw upon my imagination, for my own sporting experiences do not extend beyond the shooting of partridges and pheasants, and even those I am very apt to miss when flurried.

Unfortunately, too, Jim is one of the worst correspondents I have ever had to deal with. I did indeed receive letters from him with tolerable regularity; but for any information of interest that they contained, they might as well have been written upon the back of a postal card. "It is awfully hot here, but I have got accustomed to it and don't mind. Yesterday we were very lucky, killing two fine tigers; but our average so far has been hardly up to the mark." And so forth, and so forth. That is scarcely the kind of thing that one wants to hear from a man who has quitted his native land in a state of bitter disenchantment and misanthropy, and who at the end of six years ought surely to be much better or much worse than when he started.

Jim never alluded to his misfortunes, nor made any inquiry as to the fate of those who had caused them. I generously gave him a few items of intelligence without having been asked; but he did not refer to them in his replies, and in like manner he ignored my representations that owners of landed property ought not to be absentees for an indefinite period. Once or twice he spoke vaguely of coming home, but something always occurred to make him postpone his return, until, as I have said, he had been wandering about the world for no less than six consecutive years.

Now it came to pass that one hot afternoon in the height of the London season I had returned to my chambers, physically and mentally exhausted, after an intellectual luncheon party, and was saying to myself—with very great truth and justice—that of all forms of social cruelty luncheon parties are the most wantonly malignant, when a loud rat-rat, as from a heavy stick, made me glance at the door, through which, after an instant of delay, there strode into my presence a tall, broad shouldered, bronzed individual, who had Jim Leigh's eyes and nose, surmounting a black mustache and beard entirely unknown to me. The nose, however, was enough to swear by; and I don't know when in the course of my life I have been more delighted to behold a familiar and prominent feature. I welcomed him with a warmth which I hope was as agreeable to him as it was sincere on my part, and he smiled all over his face, quite like the Jim of old; so that I freely forgave him his beard.

"And now that you have come back at last, you mean to stay at home, like a respectable English country gentleman, I trust," said I, after I had made him comfortable with an arm chair and a cigar and something cold to drink.

"Well—I suppose so," he answered, with a shade of hesitation. "To tell you the truth, I'm utterly sick and tired of foreign lands, and I should like nothing better than to settle down at Elmhurst for the rest of my days."

"What should prevent you from doing as you like? You can't mean that you haven't got over the trouble that drove you away yet?" said I, for I thought we had better come to the point at once.

"I believe I have got over it, I don't know for certain," he answered slowly. "Let us talk about something else. Tell me all about yourself."

So I told him all about myself, and his observations upon my literary achievements were flattering and discriminating, though I think he was a little bit nervous lest I should ask him whether he had read my works. Then he went on to speak of friends of former years.

"Poor old Lord Staines is still alive, I hear," he remarked.

"He is still alive," I replied, "and not likely to die, so far as I know; but you would hardly recognize him. On sunny mornings one meets him in a bath chair in the park, with Lady Mildred walking beside him. He doesn't talk much nowadays, but he likes to see people, and he seems to be quite happy when he is allowed to have his little grandson with him. I told you that he was reconciled with the Bracknells long ago?"

Jim nodded. "And how do they get on?" he inquired, asking the question with something of an effort.

"Many people are curious to know," I answered. "That is, if you mean, how do they manage to pay their way? They are said to get on together rather indifferently. On the other hand, they have got on in society with a success which leaves nothing, or very little, to be desired. Lady Bracknell has climbed to the very top of the tree, and sits there in a graceful attitude to be gaped at by a multitude of admirers. She likes admiration, as you will remember, and takes some pains to obtain it. She is very accessible, too, in spite of her brilliant position, and if you will go and call upon her in Wilton place I am sure she will be glad to see you, and will begin exercising her fascinations upon you without loss of time."

"Don't!" said Jim.

But I went on all the same. "You had better call upon her; I don't think she will fascinate you, my dear Jim. Her hair has changed color; it is a lovely bronze now, but her complexion requires no aid from art. She dresses exquisitely; she is addicted to private theatricals, and once or twice in the season she makes her father-in-law give a ball and receives his guests for him, so that Lady Mildred may be free to remain by his side in case he should want anything. When he snubs her, as he does every now and again, she won't allow him to see little Lord Sunning for a day or two. That brings him to his bearings, and he has to go round to Wilton place in his bath chair and apologize."

"I don't want to hear about her," said Jim. He added presently: "I suppose you sometimes see Bracknell, don't you?"

I replied that I did. As a matter of fact, I had latterly been a good deal in Wilton place, because I am credited with a certain facility for drilling amateur actors, and Lady Bracknell had found me useful in helping her to arrange the plays with which she was wont to entertain distinguished audiences from time to time.

"I wonder," said Jim, "whether he ever feels sorry for having treated me as he did. We used to be friends, you know, and—and I don't think he can quite have realized what an injury he was doing me."

That seemed likely enough; but I was unable to say that I had observed any signs of an awakened conscience in Bracknell. "I know exactly what will happen," I remarked. "You will be as great friends as ever by the end of the week; and before a fortnight is over he will have borrowed a sum of money from you which may probably be represented by four figures. What is the use of your trying to bear malice, Jim? You ought to have thrashed Bracknell six years ago. You could have thrashed him without any great difficulty; the process would have been consolatory to you and salutary to him. But instead of doing that, you chose to expend your wrath slowly upon unoffending lions and tigers, and the consequence is that you haven't a spark of it left for home consumption. You are dying to shake hands with your enemy now—you know you are."

"I don't know that I am particularly anxious to shake hands with him," said Jim consideringly; "I would rather not think of him as a traitor, that's all. You see, it does make a difference if a man says he is sorry."

I was beginning to point out that expressions of sorrow must be taken for what they are worth, and that, although it may be right to pardon a man who has shamefully deceived you, it is extremely foolish to put faith in him again, when I was interrupted by the entrance of a second visitor, and who should this prove to be but Bracknell himself!

It was an odd coincidence that brought him to my chambers on that afternoon of all others; for he had never so far honored me before; but he had evidently not come with any idea of meeting Jim, whom he glanced at with an impatient frown and did not recognize. Jim was certainly altered, but Bracknell was perhaps even more so. He had lost his good looks to a great extent and carried more superfluous flesh than he was entitled to at his age. His constitution was a fine one, but I believe he mixed his liquors in an appalling manner, and one can't sit up all night and every night, playing cards, without exhibiting traces of fatigue.

Jim stared at him in a sort of consternation; no doubt the change in his former friend was more apparent to him than it was to me. As he did not see fit to declare himself, the duty of making him known devolved upon me, and I watched with some interest the demeanor of the two men who were thus unexpectedly brought face to face once more. Jim got up slowly, looking very grave, and said, "How do you do, Bracknell?" But Bracknell burst into a laugh and seized his old school fellow by the hand.

Dead Indians Are Honest.

"The debts of dead Indians are paid by their relatives," said an ex-merchant on Main street, Monday. "When Anderson and Bernhardt," he continued, "killed an indian several years ago he owed me $345. Since that time $330 of this amount have been paid me by his relatives. Kentucky died the other day owing me $50. Already his relatives have approached me on the subject and made arrangements to pay the amount. It is a law with them to pay the debts of their dead relatives and they never break it. I am sure of getting my money if an indian dies owing me, but if a white man dies leaving no property, no matter how rich his relatives are, I never expect to get a cent. There is a great deal of good about a dead Indian, anyhow," said the ex-merchant, as he closed his conversation and walked away.—The Oregonian.

The negotiations between Montreal Seminary authorities and the representatives of the Oka Indians have closed for the present, no progress having been made towards settling the difficulty.

A Freak of Nature.

Mr. Stone, of the Rochester Fruit Store, brought to the REVIEW office to-day a very curious specimen of Horticulture. It was an ordinary crook necked squash vine, but by some influence unknown it had, instead of spreading out, grown all tog ther into a flat mass. The vine which is about three feet long, terminates with myriads of blossoms and partly developed squash. Mr. Stone prizes the curiousity very much.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

Councillor MCNEIL submitted the following:—

To the Mayor and Council:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report that they have considered the petition of the Rev. E. F. Torrance and 11 others, and find that it has already been acted upon.

We recommend on the petition of William Metheral and 25 others, asking for an electric light on the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets, that the same be granted.

That 4 gas lamps be removed from the following places, and the Gas Company notified of the same:—One on the corner of Brock and Aylmer streets, one on the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets, and two on Murray street, between George and Aylmer streets.

That gas lamps be placed in the following locations:—One on the corner of Park and Charlotte, one on the corner of Aylmer and Lake, one on the corner of Perry and Lock, and one on Weller street.

On the petition of D. B. Gardner and 50 others, asking for additional electric lights on George street, Your Committee regret having to refuse the same.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

A. MCNEIL, Chairman.

Councillor MCNEIL moved the adoption of the report.

Councillor DOUGLASS moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor MOORE,—That the Gas Company put two gas lamps on Weller street in place of one.

Councillor HARTLEY didn't believe in having all the gas lamps placed in one spot. He knew places in No. 4 Ward as dark as pitch. He would move in amendment that one be placed on George street north and one on Water street north.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON wanted gas posts for No. 1 Ward. He instanced several groceries in No. 1 where there were no lamps. It wasn't justice, sir.

Councillor KELLY called a halt. It would be better to allow the people in these localities to petition. The Council would no doubt deal fairly with all.

Several Councillors all joined in a discussion for more light.

Councillor MOORE complained that the Mayor wasn't keeping order. Three or four Councillors had talked three or four times.

The MAYOR called the Council to order.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON—Mr. Moore, if there's anybody out of order I think you are.

Councillor MOORE (Who can't resist getting off a pun)—I was never ordered out of the Chamber anyway.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON declared that the newspapers had given him away. If it had been Mr. Moore or other high toned members of the Council they wouldn't have done it. But he would get even yet. He then went on to show that No. 1 Ward had not a fair distribution of the gas lamps.

The gas lamp discussion was continued by representatives of other wards.

Councillor MCNEIL was among those whom Councillor Moore said were talking too often, Councillor McNeil resented the accusation and stated that he hadn't spoken at all. He said that Councillor Moore had made a dirty insinuation, but he retracted the expression subsequently. He defended the report of the committee, by stating that the expenditure this year on this committees account was large and that the members of the committee were animated with a desire of economy. They wished to deal fairly with all, and tried to do so.

Councillor MOORE acknowledged that the committee were endeavouring to spend their money to the best advantage, but he did not favor false economy. He urged the putting of gas lamps on Elm and Bonaccord streets.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON moved seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—That a gas lamp be placed on the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets.

The report was carried as amended, and the motions of Councillors Moore and McNaughton were referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

COBBLE PAVING.

Councillor KELLY moved, seconded by Councillor MCNEIL—That the Street and Bridge Committee be instructed to advertise for tenders for cobble-paving of George street from Brock to Charlotte street, in accordance with a resolution of this Council recommending the same.

The motion was lost on the following division, after a prolonged debate:—

YEAS—Councillors Kelly and McNeil.

NAYS—Councillors Davidson, McNaughton, Stenson, Yelland, Moore, Douglass, Menzies and Hartley.

CALLED TO ORDER.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON—Mr. Mayor, I wish to draw attention to a very bad sidewalk down—

Councillor MCNEIL—Is there anything before the Council, Mr. Mayor?

The MAYOR—No.

Councillor MCNEIL moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to repair the sidewalk in front of Mr. Halpin's residence on Lake street.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON's breath was taken away. He objected, however. There should be a new sidewalk.

The motion was carried.

ANOTHER SIDEWALK.

Councillor HARTLEY moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That a sidewalk on Stewart street, near Mr. R. H. Smith's, on Bethune street, near Mr. Howden's residence, Smithtown hill, be repaired.—Carried.

STILL ANOTHER.

Councillor KELLY moved, seconded by Councillor MCNEIL,—That a new sidewalk be laid on Simcoe street, from Snowden's Hotel to Dr. Crevier's office.

Councillor DOUGLASS called a point of order on the expenditure of money.

COAL.

Councillor YELLAND moved a motion to instruct the Clerk to call for tenders for the supplying of coal to the town offices.

It was not put as the coal had already been supplied.

ADJOURNED.

Councillor STENSON moved a motion for the putting down of a sidewalk on Simcoe street, between Rubidge and Reid streets, and Councillor McNeil moved that the annual grant be made to the Mechanics' Institute, but both were presented after a motion for adjournment, when the Council had broken up.

The Council adjourned for one week.

Bridge Building.

The old iron which formerly constituted a bridge in Middlesex county arrived in town for the Central Bridge and Iron Works on Saturday. This was the first bridge ever built by the old Toronto Bridge Company. It was taken off its abutments and piers last spring and carried down the river by the ice for nearly a mile. On the melting of the ice it went all to pieces. The old iron was a consideration in the selling the county a new bridge by Mr. Law.

In the Shade.

The people of Edinburgh street and Ashburnham who thought they were growing tall corn may now consider themselves squelched. They may fold up their tents and steal away; they may be silent and be heard (on the corn topic) no more forever. Their stories of tall corn fade in the shadow of the fact that now stands in front of the REVIEW office. This morning Mr. Wm. Pearson, of North Monaghan, conveyed to this office a healthy stock of corn which reaches the great altitude of eleven feet seven inches (11 feet 7). It is a healthy looking specimen and carries a fully developed cob as high up the stock as an ordinary man can reach. Mr. Pearson may now blow his own bugle without fear of being called in question by anybody.

LAKEFIELD'S HOLIDAY.

A DAY OF SPORTS AND AMUSEMENTS IN THE VILLAGE.

Cricket and Baseball Matches—Field Sports and a Regatta—Illumination in the Evening.

Tuesday, Aug. 30th, was Lakefield's civic holiday. The events which celebrated the day were hurriedly arranged, but the committees were competent and energetic, and carried out a well conceived programme in a very creditable manner. Business was suspended and the villagers took a holiday, being joined in the sports by visitors from the neighborhood and from town.

BASEBALL.

The first event of the day was a baseball match between two local teams, captained by Mr. S. Henderson and Mr. W. Arnott. Only two innings were played and Mr. Henderson's team won the most runs. The score was:—Henderson's team, 4 and 8, total 12; Arnott's team, 3 and 4, total 7.

CRICKET.

At twelve o'clock the wickets were pitched for a cricket match. The players were the Lakefield team and "Wrighton's Lambs," representing the Peterborough club. The "Lambs," owing to Mr. Wrighton being indisposed, had to go without their shepherd which they greatly regretted, but they were ably captained by Hugh Ray. The "Lambs" proved to be lions on this occasion, as they won the match by a score of 66 to 24, one innings each being played. For the "Lambs" Hugh Ray topped the score with 21, and Giroux and Minore piled up 15 and 14 respectively. T. Watson was the only one of the home team who made a double score. Sabine and Ray did good bowling for the "Lambs," and J. Watson and Cooper bowled for the Lakefields, the former doing good work. The following is the score:—

The match was concluded at about 2.30, and the "lambs" enjoyed themselves during the afternoon canoeing and seeing the sports. One of them won a joint of beef in the sports, throwing the cricket ball.

THE FIELD SPORTS.

The field sports were under the management of Messrs. G. Cochrane, A. L Wright and J. Clarin. There was a good programme and it was well carried out. The following were the prize winners:—

The regatta was held on Lake Katchewanooka under the management of Messrs. W. H. Casement, W. Eastland and R. C Strickland.

The following are the events and prize winners:—

SINGLE SKIFF—1st Dr. Douglas, 2nd Alex. Strickland.

The sailing race was postponed until Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

There were several entries for the trotting race, which was won by T. Pettit's horse.

THE EVENING.

In the evening the market square was brightly illuminated with Chinese lanterns strung on wires and other devices. The Lakefield band, which had been on the grounds during the day and furnished good music, took up a position in the band stand in the evening and further enlivened the proceedings. A tug-of-war between ten men from the saw mill and an equal number of other men was exciting. It was won by the opponents of the mill men. The physlog procession was very successful and created considerable amusement.

The committee in charge of the celebration are to be congratulated on its success. They were favored with fine weather, the attendance at the amusements was large, and altogether it was a very successful celebration.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Influence of the Establishment of the New Line of Steamers in Japan.

A London, Eng, despatch says:—The opening of the Canadian Pacific and the establishment of a line of steamers from Vancouver to Yokohama and Hong Kong is creating extraordinary interests in Japanese political and commercial circles. The native journals are actively discussing the probable effects of the developement of the new route on the commercial position of Japan, which, they think, may be completely revolutionized by it. If, they say, goods for China and other countries in the East are conveyed by this route, Japan would have in the East a position corresponding to that of Great Britain in the West as a commercial and banking centre. At present, while Suez canal is the main route, Japan stands alone at the extreme end of the chain of communications. With the Canadian Pacific steamship and railway lines in active operation Japan should be the centre of the Eastern trade, and accordingly Japanese merchants are urged to be up and doing. It is suggested that the native steamship companies connect Aong Kong and Singapore with Yokohama, and possibly extend the line to Australia later, thus increasing the number of feeders of the Canadian Pacific. Whatever the result may be, the officials of the Canadian Pacific have succeeded in arousing to a very high degree Japanese commercial energy and ambition.

Personal.

Mr. John Sullivan, of the Peterborough House, has returned to town after a three months' absence. He landed at Liverpool about twelve days after his departure from Peterborough, and sailed from there to the "Emerald Isle" He has spent a very happy time with the friends of his youth, and among other things mowed hay on the same field he swung the scythe on forty-two years ago.

Mr. Henry Denne has returned home. He was called away a few weeks ago by a cablegram stating that his brother in England was seriously ill. He sailed immediately on the receipt of the message, and arrived in time to spend a week with him before he died.

Mr. W. H. Morley, of Ingersol, is in town on a business trip. He interests himself in lacrosse as much as ever.

Capt. Sam. Hughes, of the Lindsay Warder, has been distinguishing himself at the Dominion Rifle Association matches at Ottawa. Capt. Hughes belongs to the 45th.

More Pleasing Words.

The Dominion Oddfellow of Aug. 26th returns to the subject of the recent Grand Lodge meeting, commencing by saying that "the session of the Grand Lodge held in Peterborough will be long remembered by those who were present as one of the most enjoyable meetings held for years." It describes the decorations, illuminations, etc., and the special features at length, and is profuse with words of commendation and praise.

HIS TROUBLES BEGIN.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Prince Ferdinand, for the moment Prince of Bulgaria, is getting uneasy, and the fact that the Powers are divided upon the question of his remaining at Sofia in such a way as to cause a virtual deadlock is what worries him The support he expected has not been forthcoming and the state of uncertainly into which he is now plunged has narrowed the scope and number of questions for him to consider until he has but one left, the exact or approximate date of his enforced departure from the scenes of his tentative rulership. However the Bulgarian question may be ultimately settled, one thing is certain, Ferdinand must go, and it is equally certain that he would better take his departure without delay if he would escape the experience of his predecessor.

The captain's proposition was flatly refused, and the work of eviction must begin to-day. A force of one hundred soldiers and five hundred policemen are encamped at Herbertstown in readiness to protect the bailiffs. The tenants have strongly barricaded their houses, and will offer formidable resistance to the evictors.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY. AUGUST, 31, 1887.

DRIVE THEM TO THE WALL.

At one of the recent meetings by which the Commercial Annexationists are conducting their agitation, Mr. Cloyes, the Liberal M.P. for Missisquoi, is reported by an annexation organ as saying:—

"He would frankly admit that it might injure a great many manufacturers; but any manufacturing establishment that could not hold its own in competition with a similar establishment in the United States and muleted the people out of thirty to thirty-five per cent. deserved to go to the wall."

This admission, made repeatedly by the Commercial Annexationists, that a great many of our manufactures would be ruined, should be noted, for it is of the utmost importance. Looking at it only from the Canadian farmer's point of view, how would he be effected by this confessed consequence of Commercial Union? His best and most remunerative market, and that which can be most favourably influenced by an increase of population and prosperity, is that to be found in his neighbouring city or town. Yet these agitators ask the farmer's support while confessing that they are striving to deprive him of the profit of supplying those gaining their living directly or indirectly from the neighbouring factory, in order that they may hand over this profitable custom to some farmer in the United States. Every farmer knows that the nearer, the more populous and the more prosperous is his neighbouring town, the more valuable and remunerative is his farm. The agitators confess that they are aiming at stripping him of this advantage and conferring it upon foreigners. More than nine-tenths of the products of Canadian farms are consumed in Canada and less than one-tenth abroad, yet our farmers are invited to injure their own important home market in the fallacious hope of obtaining compensation by an improvement of his foreign market, so far less important and profitable.

We would call attention briefly to the language Mr. Cloyes uses as to manufacturers "mulcting the people out of 30 to 35 per cent.," and elsewhere in the same speech he terms it "taxing the farmer 30 or 35 per cent. for the benefit of the manufacturer." Why does he not confess that he is asking us to annex ourselves, at least commercially, to a country where people are mulcted or taxed 40 and 50 and 40 per cent? If our customs duties are rightly thus described, so are the higher customs duties of the United States. If manufacturers who cannot exist without protection should go to the wall, as Mr. Cloyes so charitably says, why is he asking us Canadians to give our custom to the protected manufacturers of the United States and to refuse it to the manufacturers of the Mother Country, who are not protected?

Such dishonest arguments show plainly that these agitators are only seeking some selfish personal advantage and not the good of the country.

KOUMISSINE

The Commercial Annexationists while repeadly admitting that their proposed Zollverein would ruin a great number of Canadian manufactories, claim that on the other hand a great number of United States manufacturers would rush over to Canada to establish their industries. Mr. Valancey E. Fuller, one of their chief agitators, completely exposes the fallacy of this contention. It seems that Mr. Fuller makes koumiss or rather not koumiss exactly, which is a preparation of mares' milk, but a sort of bogus koumiss or koumissine. As to this koumissine Mr. Fuller says:—

"We entered into a contract to supply the Oaklands koumiss for the New York market. In attempting to fill that contract from Canada we would have to pay $25 per day duty or $7 825 per year. As a consequence we have had to cease filling this contract from here, and are about to erect a koumiss factory near New York. With Commercial Union we could manufacture our koumiss here, spend the money in Hamilton or on our farm in producing the milk, in the purchase of bottles, wire, corks, labels and wages, all of which will now be spent in the United States."

Well Mr. Fuller has blundered upon a truth, but it quite knocks the ground from under the pretence of the annexationists that their Zollverein will induce foreigners to come here to manufacture. It is protection that has that effect; it is protection that has caused the establishment in Peterborough of two flourishing industries by gentlemen from the other side of the line, and so it is elsewhere. Protection, if not counteracted by the efforts of agitators like Mr. Fuller and his friends, would continue to have this effect, while with free admission to our markets foreign manufacturers would stay away and manufacture at home like Mr. Fuller with his koumissine. Mr. Fuller shows the value of home manufactures and how can he hope to persuade Canadians that the closing of our factories would be compensated by his having a larger market for his koumissine or even for his Jersey calves. The fact is that Mr. Fuller's agitation is as bogus as his koumissine.

The dishonesty of the methods adopted by the annexationist press of Toronto is again exposed by their publication of a speech which they falsely pretend was delivered by Mr. Butterworth at the recent meeting in Detroit. Mr. Butterworth did not deliver this speech, nor indeed any speech at the meeting. Neither was the speech delivered by anyone else.

THE PEOPLE LIKED IT.

MUSIC, FLOWERS, FRUITS. FINE ART—A LARGE ASSEMBLAGE.

At Bradburn's Opera House—A Successful Exhibition of Horticultural Products.

The stair cases leading to Bradburn's Opera House were thronged on Tuesday evening with people coming to and going from the Horticultural Show.

The scene in the hall was a stirring one. The seats were removed and on the large floor surface were tables laden with the luscious product of tree and vine, together with flowers of myriad tints and hues. A collection of paintings, pencil drawings and pen work, and a department filled with fancy work, the result of the deft fingers of the ladies, added interest to the display.

During the evening the Fire Brigade band, half ensconced behind the art collection, gave forth soft melodies, while the busy throng below wandered among the flowers, longed for the fruit, and chatted.

Each department contained fine specimens of exhibits. Admiring comment was heard on all sides. The exhibition was closed at 10 o'clock, everyone being well satisfied with it.

The names of the judges were as follows:—Of fruits and vegetables, Messrs. M. T. Ostrom and Peter Connal; of fruits and flowers, Messrs. Connal and Sabine; of fine art, Messrs. T. Workman and D. W. Dumble; of ladies' fancy work, Miss Stevenson and Mrs. D. Edwards.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Jim Leigh, as I'm a living sinner!" he exclaimed. "Dear old Jim! Where on earth have you been concealing yourself for the last hundred years? Didn't somebody tell me you were going in for big game in central Africa or somewhere? I wish I had been going with you! Let me know when you start off again, and I'll see if I can't get out of this for a few months. By Jove! what a relief it would be!"

It was so evident that he had completely forgotten the trifling circumstance of his having once robbed Jim of a wife that I was shaken by internal laughter, and had to turn away to conceal my emotion; but Jim, I dare say, saw nothing to laugh at in such callousness.

"I don't think I am likely to be making any more expeditions of the kind yet awhile," he answered coldly. "I have stayed away from England too long as it is."

"Have you?" said Bracknell, whose attention was already beginning to wander.

"Well, I don't know; England's a beastly country to live in, unless one has about £30,000 a year, clear. You don't mind my smoking, do you, Maynard?"

I said I did not; and he added, lowering his voice slightly, "I want just to have a word or two with you presently, if you're not busy."

Jim took this rather broad hint and put on his hat. After I had ascertained his address and had arranged a meeting with him for the following day, he turned to go; but Bracknell, starting out of a fit of abstraction, caught him suddenly by the elbow with renewed cordiality.

"Going to stay in London for a bit?" he asked. "You must look us up in Wilton place, old chap. You know my wife?"

"I had the pleasure of being rather intimately acquainted with Lady Bracknell some years ago," replied Jim, grimly.

"Oh, yes, of course. Well, she'll be very glad to see you again. Come and dine with us some evening. I expect we're pretty deeply engaged just now, but I'll drop you a line."

When Jim had departed, I could not help remarking, "It must be very convenient to have such a bad memory as yours."

Bracknell was apparently preoccupied. "Bad memory? How do you mean?" he asked. "Oh, I see! But it would be more to the purpose to pity Leigh for having such a confoundedly good one, wouldn't it? He looked as sulky as a bear. I say, Maynard, will you do me a small favor?"

"That depends on what it may be," I answered.

"Oh, it isn't much of a one. You know the editor of The Piccadilly Gazette, don't you? Well, just run your eye over this paragraph that he has put into his scurrilous paper."

He drew a newspaper from his pocket and pointed to the following oracular announcement:

"A certain noble earl is not quite so enfeebled in intelligence as is sometimes supposed. Not satisfied with knowing that his son is heir presumptive to a vast estate, he is moving heaven and earth to get his daughter married to the present holder thereof; so that, in case of the advent of an heir apparent upon the scene, the property may at least remain in the family. And yet the heir presumptive is not happy, they say."

"I don't want Alf Beauchamp to read that sort of thing, you know," said Bracknell.

"I can well believe that you don't," I answered; "but how do you propose to prevent him from reading it, since it is already in print?"

"Oh, that's nothing. Very likely he won't see it; and if he does see it, the odds are that he won't understand. What I want is to stop this newspaper brute from speaking more plainly. You might be a good fellow and manage it for me. Tell him we'll invite him to dinner if he likes, and if that won't do, find out what will do. I suppose he has his price."

"Very likely he has," I answered, "and I am much flattered by your intrusting me with this delicate mission. But I am like the editor—I demand my quid pro quo, and if I do this for you, you will have to do something for me."

"With all the pleasure in life; but it isn't much that I can do for any man, except ask him to dinner."

"You can do a little more for Jim Leigh, whom I think you will admit that you have treated rather badly. First of all, you can beg his pardon. Is that too bitter a pill for you to swallow?"

"Oh, I'll beg his pardon, if it will make him any happier," answered Bracknell, laughing.

"Secondly, you must promise that you will neither ask him to play cards with you nor borrow money of him."

Bracknell opened his eyes. "Do you know, Maynard," said he, "that that is not very far removed from being an impertinent request?"

I replied that I might have said much the same thing of the request which he had addressed to me. Anyhow, I must have his promise, or I should not go to the office of The Piccadilly Gazette.

So he laughed again and gave the required pledge, and went his way, leaving me somewhat reassured as to Jim's future. Lady Bracknell, I knew, would try to make him fall in love with her again; but I was not much afraid of her succeeding. Clever as she was, she was not quite clever enough to understand that the surest way of disgusting Jim would be to show him that she was no more true to the husband whom she had chosen than she had been in days gone by to himself.

CHAPTER VIII.

One morning not long after this, Jim did me the honor to breakfast with me, and gave me an account of his first interview with Lady Bracknell, which amused me very much and contrasted favorably in point of style with his epistolary efforts.

"I thought," said he, "that I had better call and get it over; so I went to Wilton place about 6 o'clock in the afternoon, hoping that she would be in the park and that I might leave my card and retire. But as she was at home, I had to march into the drawing room, feeling a little shy and awkward, don't you know, as one does after spending such a long time out of reach of civilization. I dare say I got rather red in the face, and I was horribly conscious that my boots squeaked. There were a lot of men in the room, young fellows with bouquets in their buttonholes and very high collars—I hear you call them 'mashers' nowadays—and they all opened their eyes and mouths at me, which was like their impudence. I confess that they made me uncomfortable at first; but after a bit I recollected that if I had ordered the eldest of them to run up to the Brocas for me eight or nine years ago he would have put his best leg foremost, and that set me more at my ease. Besides, I almost forgot them from the moment that Hilda began to talk to me. My dear Harry, what an extraordinary—what a miraculous change! You never prepared me for anything of the sort."

"I told you that her hair had become debased from gold to copper," I remarked. "If I didn't prepare you for any more startling change, it was because I must own that I can't detect any."

"Can't detect any! Do you mean to tell me that Lady Bracknell is the same woman as Hilda Turner? Oh, I know what you are grinning at; you think the change is in me, and that there never was any such person as the Hilda whom I was in love with. Perhaps you are right; but for all that, she has transformed herself into something very unlike what she used to be. She doesn't look a day older, and speaking impartially—as I can now—I should say that she is prettier, if anything; but oh, dear! I didn't like her ways of going on at all. She is quite the modern great lady; she has all the fashionable slang at the tip of her tongue; and she said things which—which—well, I hate to hear ladies say such things. And it struck me that the mashers were anything but respectful to her. As I listened to her, I wondered how I could ever have been such an idiot—but no matter! You said she wouldn't fascinate me, and most certainly she didn't. I am quite cured, Harry, and I suppose I ought to be very glad, but when one has nursed a complaint for years, it makes one feel rather queer to lose it all of a sudden. The sensation is something like having a double tooth out. It's a good riddance, of course; but it seems to leave an enormous gap behind it. Well, those young swells took themselves off, one by one, until she and I were left alone, and then—do you know what she did then?"

"To be sure I do," I replied. "She drew her chair close up to yours, put her head a little on one side, gazed pensively at you, and presently gave you to understand that you were the only man whom she had ever loved with pure affection."

"Oh, no; she didn't go quite that length; though I must say— However, perhaps I ought not to tell you."

"I do not see the use of having a tried and trusted friend if he is not to be let into your confidence. I think you decidedly ought to tell me what she did," said I. For I wanted to know.

Sunday in London.

If London is the dullest city in Europe Sunday the country surrounding it and the river cannot be called quiet on that day. The greater part of the middle class people of London make it a point to get out of the city on some kind of a frolic every pleasant Sunday during the summer. Every place of amusement in London is closed Sunday, and extra price is charged at the Zoological gardens, and everything made as dismal as it is possible. To the very great number of London drunkards, however, a concession is made. After church is over in the morning every liquor saloon, or public, as they call them, is open until midnight. So by the time evening comes about the only persons to be seen on the streets are either drunk or well on the way to being so. This kind of a crowd naturally drives respectable people to the suburbs, and the favorite picnic places are Maidenhead and Richmond, both of which have good facilities for boating.—London Cor. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1887.

THE SANDY POINT ROW.

THE CASE BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE AT LAKEFIELD.

Charles Fuller Charged with Assaulting Tom. S. Rubidge—A Variety of Versions of the Affair—A Fine.

The Sandy Point affray came before Mr. John Hull, J. P.at Lakefield on Tuesday, having been adjourned from the previous Wednesday. Mr. John W. Moore, J. P., also occupied a seat on the bench. Charles Fuller was charged with having assaulted Tom. S. Rubidge on Sunday, August 21st. The Court was held in Mr. Hull's office in his mill. Mr. E. B. Edwards appeared on behalf of Mr. Rubidge, and Mr. John Burnham for Mr. Fuller.

In spite of the civic holiday attractions elsewhere a number showed interest in the trial by crowding into the little room where the Court was held.

Mr. EDWARDS said that the complainant wished the Magistrate to dispose of the case summarily.

The evidence for the prosecution was then heard, the first witness being one of the principals in the encounter.

TOM. S. RUBIDGE was sworn. He remembered Sunday, Aug. 21st. He said:—The assault occurred on my property in the township of Smith in the evening, between six and seven. I saw a man and a boy passing along a path on my property, which I had forbidden people to use as a thoroughfare. I warned them that they could not pass that way. They continued, going towards Fuller's, and refused to stop. I whistled then for assistance. Toker Barlee and Peter Phelan came. They had come up before I saw the defendant. We followed the boy and the man in the direction of Fuller's house. In following the man we came to a dry brook, and just beyond that the boy and man were coming back. I ordered them back, telling them they must go back by the other way, as the path was not a thoroughfare. They stopped and seemed undecided. While they were stopping I reasoned with the man and tried to turn him round to show him the direction. Then Fuller came, walking fast. He told the man to go on and not to mind me, and I warned them and him to go back. I held my stick across the path. Fuller made a rush at me and forced me back into the brook, and struck me at the same time in the face with his fist. We both fell. I went down on my back on the stones. He threw himself or fell on top of me. He continued to strike me on the head with his fists, kneeling on me and holding me down. He struck me a dozen times after I was down. I was struck on the right side of the face, on the same side of the head, raising a lump, on the lips and on the left side of the head, which cut and partially stunned me. I feel the effect of the blows on my head yet. I was partially unconscious till helped up. Then the first thing I remember was seeing Fuller kick mydog, which made me angry. I raised my stick close to him and called him a treacherous scoundrel and a coward, or something of that sort. My stick was bent by Fuller when he rushed against me at first. I insisted on them going out. When we got in sight of the bars at Fuller' shouse there were people standing outside. Fuller waved his hands and said "I've put my mark on him, madam," and said something about wishing he had blown my brains out. I and Toker Barlee went further and saw Peter Phelan go with the man to the bars leading to the Burleigh road. Fuller went to his place and I returned. I have reason to fear violence from him again from threats he had made, and from others, his associates.

CROSS-EXAMINED — That is the whole affair, as far as I remember. The blow on my head I believe was dope with some hard substance, as a stone with a jagged edge. I further believe if Toker Barlee had not come to my assistance he would have murdered me. I did not see him have a jagged stone or anything like that. I was not watching for the men coming on the path. Mr. Fuller is a tenant of mine and has been for three years.

Mr. BURNHAM—Had he been in the habit of using the path?

Mr. EDWARDS objected to the question. It made no difference whose property the assault occured on.

Mr BURNHAM said he did not question the ownership. Mr. Rubidge had said that he had warned people from using the path and he wanted to find out about it.

The question was allowed and Mr. Rubidge continued:—I have seen Mr. Fuller use the path. I did not warn Fuller not to go on it, but I gave directions for him to be warned. I had not warned the people that I stopped. I warned Mr. Aylmer not to use it on June 20th. I also warned Mr. Belcher at the same time. When I leased the place to Mr. Fuller nothing was said about the way of getting in or out. He could get out southerly by a road. He would have to go over my property to get out, but on one side it was not enclosed. The man was carrying a pail when I stopped him. I had never seen the man going over the path before. My family had seen men, and drunken men on the roads, which was why I wished to close them. When I met the man and boy I did not speak angrily. I told them to go back, and the man replied that they were told that that was the road. I told them not to come back that way. In about ten minutes they came back. It has been arranged that if I saw anyone trespassing I would whistle for Peter Phelan.

Mr. BURNHAM—Did Phelan have a revolver?

Mr. EDWARDS objected that the question was not pertinent and was calculated to irritate.

Mr. BURNHAM argued that the question was proper.

Mr. RUBIDGE continued:—Phelan was not armed by my orders or to my knowledge. I only had my stick. Toker Barlee came with Phelan. I told Peter Phelan to stop them from using that road. I met the man with the pail at the creek. I put my hand on him and turned him, showing him the way he should go. Fuller appeared and told the man to go on. I told Fuller to go back. I don't know what Fuller replied, but he made a cursory remark and came towards me. I held my stick out, as a bar, holding it by both ends. I did not put my hand on Mr. Fuller or strike him with the cane. Fuller threw his body on me and broke the cane. I thought he had hold of the cane when he struck me. He struck me on the right cheek first. I do not know how many times he struck me. I don't know where the dozen blows fell. I know certainly of three blows on the head, one on the neck and others on the body. When I got up I was bleeding from one wound. I did not strike Fuller. I decline to say who are Fuller's associates that I fear.

The MAGISTRATE said he did not think Mr. Rubidge need tell that.

The cross-examination continued:—I walked home with Toker Barlee. I went down to a spring and bathed my head till it stopped bleeding. When I went home Barlee bound ice on my head and I went to bed. On Monday, I am told, I was delirious. It was from the effects of the blows, nothing else. I don't think I got up on Tuesday. I was up on Tuesday evening. On Wednesday I was in bed part of the day. The doctor was called in on Monday.

RE-EXAMINED—There is still a scar on my head from a blow. I don't think it would be possible for the wound to have been made with the fist alone. Before Fuller came I heard him shouting, "If he stops you give him a good thrashing."

Dr. CALDWELL was sworn and said:—I attended Mr. Rubidge on Monday, Tuesday and Friday. He was in bed. He had an injury on the head and on the lip. I did not see signs of blows on the face. He complained of pain on the right side of the head. On Tuesday he was in bed and on Friday he was dressed and lying down. The skin was broken on the left side of the head, but it was not a deep cut. It did not look like a blow from a fist. It might be done by being chaffed with a stone, but not from a direct blow with one. He complained of his head aching His nerves were excited, and I thought it best to keep him quiet.

CROSS-EXAMINED—On Monday before I left the room Mr. Rubidge told he had been assaulted. His condition was hysterical. On Tuesday he was quieter. The assault was the only cause I know of for his indisposition.

ONE OF THE ASSISTANTS.

TOKER BARLEE was sworn and said that when the man with the pail returned from Fuller's he said that Fuller told him he had a right of way over the path. When Fuller came he said he had a right to use the path. This witness gave a similar account of the assault. He ran forward and caught Fuller by the throat to pull him off Rubidge. Peter Phelan helped, and the other man tried to hold Phelan, but they got Fuller off. He heard Fuller say to some people "I've made my mark on the old man and I'll try to make another." He heard Fuller say he wished he had blown Rubidge's brains out at the time they had the rifles. He said this to Mr. Rubidge. Mr. Rubidge mentioned the other affair about the rifles, and Fuller replied, "I wish I had blown your brains out." Mr. Rubidge was confined to the house until Sunday afternoon.

CROSS-EXAMINED—the witness said he was visiting at Mr. Rubidge's. Fuller put Mr. Rubidge down, but he did not know how. He did not see a blow struck then. Mr. Rubidge fell on his back. His head may have been turned. He fell among stones. He did not see anything in Fuller's hand when he struck Mr. Rubidge. Saw Fuller strike two blows. Mr. Rubidge had not retired when witness went to bed about 10 30. He heard Mr. Rubidge groaning about 4 o'clock He went into his room and found him suffering.

THE MAN WHISTLED FOR.

PETER PHELAN was sworn. He said that when Mr. Fuller appeared Mr. Rubidge ordered him back. Fuller came on and Rubidge put up his stick and pushed him back. Fuller struck Rubidge and clinched him and they scuffled about. Witness took hold of Fuller and the other man caught him. When he turned around Fuller was striking Rubidge, who was down with Fuller on him. He pulled Fuller off. He did not hear Fuller make any threats.

CROSS-EXAMINED—Mr. Rubidge got a little angry because they would not go back. Mr. Fuller struck Mr. Rubidge and clinched him. When he saw them again they were down. They were lying sideways. Rubidge was trying to get up. Fuller struck Rubidge twice. He did not see Barlee while the scuffle was going on. Mr. Fuller usually went out on the road in question. Sometimes the people taking milk went that way. He made the road for Mr. Rubidge. Mr. Fuller could not get out without going on Mr. Rubidge's property. He had known Mr. Fuller for a long time. He was not a quarrelsome man.

RE-EXAMINED—The witness said that he did not hear Mr. Fuller say anything to Mrs. Aylmer. Mr. Rubidge said to Fuller after the affair was over, "Don't think it is like the time you brought the rifle out to shoot people," and Mr. Fuller replied, "I wish I had blown your d—d brains out." The road the man was on would lead in a straight line passed the front of Mr. Rubidge's house, but there were three branches before they got to the house. They could get out by another road by Duggan's shanty. It would be the shortest way to the main road.

CROSS-EXAMINED—Going from Fuller's to Biddy McManus by Duggan's would be a mile and a half further than going passed Rubidge's.

Mr. RUBIDGE, re-called, said he had never forbidden any one to use the road by Duggan's.

OBJECTIONS.

Mr. BURNHAM raised the objection that the information was not sworn to. Also that the information did not ask to have the case tried summarily.

The objections were noted.

Mr. BURNHAM further objected that a question of title was involved and that it was beyond the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

Mr. EDWARDS argued that he had given notice to Mr. Burnham that they would ask for summary trial and they had asked for it. The question of title need not be raised in this case, as it was not necessary to know who owned the land.

The objection was over-ruled.

THE OTHER SIDE.

The evidence for the defence was then taken.

CHARLES FULLER, the defendant, was sworn and said:—I am a tenant of Mr. Rubidge. The land outside of what I occupy is claimed by Mr. Rubidge. I travel a road which goes behind Mr. Rubidge's house. I used to go sometimes in front of the house, but not this year To go by Duggan's shanty I would go three miles out of my way to get to my work. I was never forbidden the use of the road. The milk came from Biddy McManus' and the boy brought it by the road I used passed Rubidge's house. The boy, Wm. Gardner, came with the milk on Sunday, Aug. 21st. He told me Mr. Rubidge had told him not to go by that road. The boy went back the same road. He came back again and said he did not know what to do as Mr. Rubidge would not let him go on that road. I told him to come down and we would see about it. He went on ahead of me. I heard Mr. Rubidge ordering him off in loud tones. I walked down to where they were. Gardner was there and a little boy about 7 years old. Mr. Rubidge was there and Phelan a little behind him. I did not see Barlee. Mr. Rubidge said he ordered the boy off. I said, "Surely you can let the boy go the road he came." Mr. Rubidge got very excited and began pushing me with his stick. I said, "Don't do such nonsense as that." He ordered me off and I refused to go. Holding the stick in his hand he again pushed me. Then the stick came down on my shoulder. I stepped back and hit him and he fell down. He got up and came at me with the stick pointing at my face. I caught the stick and broke it between my legs. I gave him another chuck and Phelan prevented him from falling by pushing him forward. Barlee jumped on my back and bore me down on Mr. Rubidge. I did not strike him when down. There is too much John Bull in me for such gouging. Barlee was still on my back. We were only in that position a few seconds. I called to take the young cub off me. Phelan pulled me up. I dropped my glasses and while looking for them Mr. Rubidge called me a scoundrel for striking an old man like him. I said he should keep a civil tongue in his head. I saw then my dog and Rubidge's fighting. I put out my foot and rolled Rubidge's dog over. Then Rubidge began abusing me like a pickpocket. He said something to me about pointing a rifle at a man, and I said it was a pity I had not blown his (Rubidge's) brains out. I went back to my house. The others had gone on while I was looking for my glasses. I heard Rubidge complaining to Phelan because he had not helped him.

CROSS-EXAMINED—I went down to ask Mr. Rubidge to let the boy pass, not to force a way through. I did not shout to the boy to force his way or to thrash Rubidge. Peter Phelan was standing behind Rubidge. I did not touch Mr. Rubidge until he struck me with the cane. He raised it and brought it down on my shoulder. I am 54 years old. I was used to athletic exercise until my left arm was injured. I can't raise it higher than my shoulder. I did not say I had made my mark on him. I did not hold Mr. Rubidge down. I was trying to get up. Mr. Rubidge had not recovered his footing till I fell over him.

RE-EXAMINED—I had nothing in my hand. I have gone out the same way since Aug. 21st.

THE "MAN" WITH THE PAIL.

WM. GARDNER was sworn. He said he was 21 years old and continued:—Every night since the 2nd of August I have taken milk to Fuller's. I went on Sunday, the 21st. The road I went down is behind Mr. Rubidge's. I saw Mr. Rubidge in front of Mr. Aylmer's. He blew his whistle, waved his cane and called for Peter, but said nothing to me. Mr. Rubidge followed me to the creek, where he called on me to come back. I told him I was going to Fuller's with milk and that I had been instructed to go that way. He threatened to have me arrested, and told me not to come back that way. I asked Mr. Fuller at the house if it was proper for me to come down that road and he said it was. I started back again. At the creek, after passing Phelan, Mr. Rubidge held the stick up and stopped me and pushed me on the shoulder. Mr. Fuller came then. Mr. Rubidge shoved him and struck him with the cane. Mr. Fuller struck Mr. Rubidge and he went partly down. Fuller took hold of Rubidge to lift him up. Toker Barlee jumped on Fuller's back and bore him down on Rubidge. Rubidge called for Peter, but I kept him back. The parties got up. Fuller did not strike Rubidge when down. He could not if he had wanted to. I only saw Fuller strike once. I take milk to Fuller's since and go the old way.

CROSS-EXAMINED—Mr. Fuller only struck one blow. I was in a position to see, only when I put back Phelan. Fuller was helping Mr. Rubidge up and he told Phelan that Everytime I saw Mr. Rubidge with the stick he had hold of the small end. The first time Mr. Rubidge struck Mr. Fuller the latter caught the stick and broke it. Mr. Rubidge shoved Mr. Fuller with one hand and struck with the other. When Mr. Rubidge struck the second time with the stick he did not hit. Fuller then hit him. Fuller had not struck Rubidge before the stick was broken. Mr. Fuller put his arms around Mr. Rubidge under his arms to lift him up. I am positive the stick was broken after Mr. Rubidge struck with it first. It was done by Fuller and Rubidge both having a hold of it in the air. Peter Phelan did not help Mr. Rubidge up or hold him up. I kept him out. Mr. Fuller told me to go for them if they did not let me go back that way.

RE-EXAMINED—Mr. Rubidge struck the first blow with the stick.

TO THE MAGISTRATE—I was only once at Mr. Fuller's that evening.

The counsel then addressed the Court, and the Magistrate gave judgment, imposing a fine of $12 on Mr. Fuller. The fine and costs amounted to $18 50. Mr. Fuller was also bound over to keep the peace, himself giving bonds for $100 and two sureties for $50 each.

The case commenced at 11 o'clock and lasted, with a short intermission until 7 in the evening. Notice of appeal was given.

Cordial Appreciation.

It will be remembered that at the recent annual meeting in our town of the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows, in the election of officers, Dr. R. W. Bell, a prominent member of Otonabee Lodge, and the uccessful candidate for the high office of Grand Warden, was nominated to that important position in very complimentary and appreciative terms by Mr. W. Macdiarmid, Past Grand Master and Grand Reprcsentative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, a leading barrister of Lucan. At the following meeting of Otonabee Lodge a resolution was passed acknowledging the compliment thus paid to one of its leading members, and therefore indirectly to the Lodge itself. On receipt of a copy of this resolution Mr. Macdiarmid sent a reply, from which we have been permitted to make the following extract, as being of interest to the general public:—

"In accepting those thanks so courteously tendered by your Lodge, and so undeserved by me, permit me to congratulate not only Otonabee Lodge, but the whole Order in Peterborough, on Dr. Bell's election to a position the duties of which he is so eminently qualified to discharge. The contest was close and keen, as might have been expected with such a number of able, popular candidates in the field; and I am thoroughly satisfied that the choice of the Grand Lodge has fallen upon one who will do honor to the office.

"I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without stating that the Peterborough session was the most pleasant and comfortable session that I have attended during my ten years' connection with the Grand Lodge. The arrangements perfected by your several committees for the reception and accommodation of the representatives, and for the transaction of business, were admirable; while the successful efforts of the Peterborough brethren and citizens to make our short stay among them as delightful as possible cannot soon be forgotten.

"Fraternally and thankfully yours,
"W. MACDIARMID."

The people of Peterborough will thus see that their efforts to welcome their visitors were highly appreciated by them.

THE FISHERY COMMISSION.

What is Said of Mr. Chamberlain's Appointment.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The Telegraph says: "Mr. Chamberlain's Board of Trade experience will prove valuable to him in his capacity as a member of the board of control of the fisheries, and he is pre-eminently the man to unravel the technicalties of the matter and advise a reasonable settlement of the fisheries question, if such a thing is possible."

The Standard says that the fisheries commission is to include a member of the Canadian Government.

The News says: "The appointment of a commission is an important fact, but that of the commissioner eclipses it in interest. That the Government had an eye to its own advantage is a perfectly safe calculation. It was obviously desirable to have him out of their way. We congratulate him and the country and felicitate him upon his clever escape from the toils of the Tories."

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain expects to go to America at the close of the present session of Parliament, and has decided to abandon his proposed visit to Ulster.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The World says:—"The appointment of Mr. Chamberlain as the principal member of the Royal Commission to represent British interests in the North American Fisheries convention will be received with satisfaction by the people on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Chamberlain, who for many years past has been the acknowledged leader of the Radical party in Great Britain, is a shrewd, level-headed business man, of singularly enlightened views, and with the most profound contempt for red tape in every form. While it is certain that British interests will not be allowed to suffer at his hands, on the other hand we may safely predict that the United States delegates will not find in Mr. Chamberlain a man who will turn a deaf ear to the common sense aspects of the question."

THE CZAR'S PERIL.

A Report That He is Suffering from the Bullet of a Nihilist.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The report from Copenhagen that the Czar is ill and carries his arm in a sling because of the pain arising from his rheumatism is not generally believed here, but rather it is suspected that he is suffering from the effects of a wound received from the pistol of the Nihilist who, disguised as an officer of the Guards, fired at the Emperor as he was journeying from St. Petersburg to Krasnoe-Selo a few days ago. The guarded despatch announcing the occurrence admitted that one bullet perforated the Imperial coat, and the inference is that it also pierced the cuticle if not the flesh of the Czar of all the Russias, since Russian despatches relating to important state matters or the movements, health and safety of the Czar are usually constituted of one part truth and ninety-nine of fiction, mystery and unadulterated falsehood.

AN INDIAN WAR AVERTED.

What Dr. Jukes Says Regarding the Fall of Batoche.

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.—Dr. Jukes, chief surgeon of the North-West mounted police, is now in the city. He says that the taking of Batoche averted one of the most dreadful Indian wars. The North-West Indians, their American allies as far down as the Missouri River, and the Indians of British Columbia were united against the common enemy. It was to be the last struggle of the Red man against the invader. He says that the news of Batoche's fall was spread among the Indians as quickly as the whites heard it by telegraph.

A Firm Slaughtered.

SANTA FE, N.M., Aug. 31.—Albert A. Meade had an altercation with his partner in regard to the possession of certain papers and moneys, which resulted in the shooting of three of them named Hands, Harvey Meade, and Joe Downing, killing them. Finally another partner named Fred. Meade, arrived on the scene and shot Albert, killing him. The coroner's jury acquitted Fred.

THE PRESIDENCY.

Mr. Lincoln Does not Think he will Receive the Nomination.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 31.—The Blade has interviewed Mr. Robert Lincoln in regard to the Vice-Presidential and Presidential possibilities. Mr. Lincoln says he would not, on any account, take the nomination for second place on the National ticket. In regard to being a nominee for President, he said: "While I am gratified by the kind tone of the references to myself as independent in the matter, I regret the use of my name in connection with any public office whatever. I have seen too much of the wear and tear of office life to ever have a desire to re-enter it. I do not think there is any likelihood of my receiving the nomination. The men who make the ticket would hardly do so without exacting certain pledges, and these pledges I would not give. I think that would soon end all talk of myself."

IN A STEAM YACHT.

Daring Escape of two Convicts—Give Their Gaolers the Slip:

KINGSTON, Aug. 30 —This afternoon two convicts made a daring escape from the Penitentiary. Their names are W. Scoones and J. Kelly, of Toronto. The warden's steam yacht, which had been used twice during the day, was lying at the wharf, and the convicts named were in the habit of looking after her, as it was thought they had no desire to escape. Kelly looked after the engine and piloted the officers about the harbour when they were for a sail, and Scoones, who was a ship carpenter, kept her in repair, and recently he rebuilt her. Consequently they went to and from her as they pleased. At four o'clock they were on board and a few seconds later she was sliding along the side of the dock. The gas man raised the alarm and four shots were fired by the guards on the walls, and it is supposed the bullets hit the boat. The convicts could be seen lying down to avoid the balls. Word was sent to the city, but before the tug Chieftain had got up steam and started in pursuit the convicts had an hour, or nearly ten miles, start and were making straight for the American shores, 24 miles distant. At the time of writing the tug had not returned. The general opinion is that they will not be captured, as Kelly knows these parts thoroughly, being an old sailor. Scoones was a ten year man and had seven years to serve. He was sentenced for manslaughter, he having been implicated in the death of women in a bagnio. He was a most respected convict in the institution, and no one thought he would attempt to escape. Both men applied recently for a pardon, but were refused.

HASTINGS.

CHEESE.—The cheese of the Hastings factory for August, September and October, has been contracted for at 13c per pound.

ROBBERY.—Following the late robbery at Merchant Tailor Wilson's establishment, we have now to record further losses by thefts during the last week. J. Cobain is minus a pair of blankets; even the widows are not exempt, as Mrs. Cassidy's clothes line was stripped, and Charles Mills' house at the west end of the town was entered and looted—the occupants being away.—Star.

The Fisheries Commission.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Assistant-Secretary of State Porter said to day that negotiation relating to the fisheries have long been pending, but what the character of the negotiations is it would not be proper to state. The object is to secure a satisfactory adjustment of the differences which have arisen between Great Britain and the United States on this subject. No conclusion of any kind has been reached, nor can it be stated when, if at all, one will be reached. Under the present laws the Department has no power to create a commission or to appoint a commission, etc. All that the Department could do would be to arrange a basis of adjustment and determine the details, and in making negotiations of that sort the regular agents of the Department would be used.

A Very Big Theft.

SACO, Me., Aug. 31.—Frank McNulty, clerk in the Saco and Biddeford Savings Bank here, was left in charge of the bank by the treasurer, Mr. H. Kelly, while the latter went to Kennebunk on Monday. McNulty is 19 years old. He made up the cash, and, having the combination of the safe, took a large amount of money and about $250,000 in bonds. The bonds are registered and will be of no use to him. McNulty left for Boston on Monday night and took the boat for Yarmouth, N. S., it is supposed. His brother Harry has gone to Montreal in search of him and detectives are on his tracks.

Attempted Assassination.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Aug. 31.—Last night about 9 o'clock as George Arnett, a wealthy farmer living about ten miles northeast of here, started from his house to walk down to his meadow, he was accosted by an individual who wanted to know if Boone Howard still lived with him. On receiving a negative answer it is said he commenced firing with a thirty-two caliber revolver at Arnett who turned back toward the house. Arnett received three wounds in the body, but will probably recover. There were two of them and both escaped. What their object was is not known.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The statement appears that Mr. Healy, in consequence of the proclamation of the League, has cancelled his lecturing engagements in America. He was offered $10,000, all his expenses and a share of the profits, but he prefers to stay and take his chance of arrest and imprisonment. Threats have already been heard in the House of Commons that Mr. O'Brien's conviction, if obtained, will be followed by numerous challenges to the Government. The Irish idea is that they can make the policy of suppressing the League odious by compelling the Lord Lieutenant to arrest a large number of members of Parliament, thirty or forty of whom are said to be ready for martyrdom. English candidates also are prepared to volunteer, but not many.

EXECUTION OF PRANZINI.

PARIS, Aug. 31.—Pranzini, the murderer of Maria Regnault, her servant and the latter's little girl, was guillotined this morning. At 5 o'clock the executioner was seen issuing from the prison gate. Behind him came Pranzini, ghastly pale, led by four of the executioner's assistants. As he neared the scaffold he faltered for a moment, then, turning with a smile of agony, he kissed the crucifix and walked forward. The next instant the knife fell and Pranzini has expiated his crime. Twenty thousand people surrounded the prison.

WAR WITH ABYSSINIA.

ROME, Aug. 31.—It is reported that the English mediation in Abyssinia has failed. JOINT FISHERY COMMISSION.

It appears from the news telegraphed across the Atlantic that the firmness of Canada, supported by the Imperial authorities, in maintaining our territorial rights to our fisheries, has brought the United States to terms. The statement that a Joint Commission has been appointed to consider the points in controversy, is a wholesome advance upon the present position of the United States claiming to do just what they please, with Canadian cruisers enforcing the law.

Besides the settlement of the immediate difficulty, it may be hoped that other points of interest to the two countries may be settled by this commission. The bargain that is arrived at may include such reciprocal trade as we have long offered even with the sanction of a Dominion statute, and which the United States have so far contemptuously rejected. Of course any proposal to annex us commercially to the United States, or to protect their manufacturers against those of the Mother Country, would be rejected by the commissioners, as they would be by any men who are not scheming political adventurers.

In conducting the negotiations there are two points that should be carefully observed by our representatives on the Joint Commission. We should not consent to tie ourselves in any way, even temporarily, until the United States Senate has spoken, for we have learned by experience that it is quite ready to repudiate any pledge made on the good faith of the Executive at Washington. Again, if under any arrangement there is to be a joint enjoyment of the right to fish in our waters, it should be clearly provided that the fishermen of both countries must be amenable to proper regulations for the conservation of the fisheries. Otherwise the fishermen of New England, having recklessly destroyed their own fisheries, would proceed to destroy ours, thus inflicting lasting injury, for which no temporary peaceful agreement would compensate. This proviso should extend not only to the Atlantic fisheries, but also to those of Hudson Bay and the Pacific. The seal fishery in the Northern Pacific and Behring Sea is in a somewhat peculiar position, the question not being one of territorial right, but of the law of nations. Of course the piracy on the high seas, to which our neighbors have resorted to our injury, must be suppressed, but the chief maritime nations might possibly by treaty bind their respective subjects to such regulations as may prevent this valuable fishery from being exhausted by shortsighted destruction.

We trust that this Joint Commission will be able to arrive at some reasonable and amicable settlement, such as may be worthy of two friendly and neighboring nations. To facilitate such a result those Canadians who to make political capital have been so busy belittling and decrying their country should desist at least for a time in thus thwarting its progress and prosperity.

TO BE FOUND IN CANADA.

Every now and then we obtain from their more outspoken journals an inkling of what it really is that our neighbors on the other side of the line want from Canada.

The Rochester Post-Express says:—

"Again the cry is heard that the Adirondack forests are fast disappearing. Never mind; we'll find them in Canada when we want them."

That is, in a nutshell, what the present agitation means. Our neighbors by improvident methods have destroyed their fisheries, but what care they when they can find fish in Canada, so they proceed to "annex" our fisheries. They have wastefully depleted their forests, but why need they mind when they can find others in Canada, so they intend to "annex" our forests. Their manufacturers have pushed on to over production and have glutted their own markets, but what care they if they can find a slaughter market in Canada, so they agitate to "annex" our markets.

That is the Commercial Annexation view among our neighbors; they have wasted their substance, so they would annex Canada and waste our also.

In an article on the new Joint Fishery Commission the Toronto Mail says:—

"When the Washington Treaty was under consideration, neither the Canadian people nor their representatives in the House were consulted until all was over, and then we learned that the Fenian raid claims had been thrown out and other sacrifices made at our expense at the instance of the Imperial authorities."

If any Canadian did not know that the Fenian raid claims were not submitted to the Joint Commission he must have been strangely ignorant. People of ordinary information knew from the time the Commission was agreed upon, that damages for the Fenian raids were as absolutely excluded from the consideration of the Commission as damages for the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Gladstone either through culpable ignorance or utter indifference to our interests allowed the United States to fix a time limit to the scope of the Commission which expressly excluded our claims against the United States. The Joint Commissioners had no more power to consider the Fenian raids than our police magistrate has to try a man for murder. Let any blame be placed on the right shoulders.

The fact that the name of Mr. C. W. Bunting was struck out of the report of the annexationist meeting at Detroit, "annexed" by the Toronto Mail and News from the Detroit News, seems to show that Mr. Bunting is ashamed to have it known that he was one of the active wire pullers on that occasion.

The Kingston Whig says:—

"A pot of $400,000, (Canada's duty bill) is a mere bagatelle. The combination has millions in the pool and plays to win at the expense of the American as well as the Canadian consumers."

Just so. Canada's duty bill was a mere bagatelle to the Pennsylvania combination, so they were quite willing to pay it, since it enabled them to get rid of any troublesome gluts in their highly remunerative home market, and at the same time to secure a less but sufficient profit in Ontario while shuting out Nova Scotia coal. In such a big game $400,000 was a mere bagatelle so they paid it, but we have made them a present of it, and still give as much as before for our coal.

REVIEWS.

The Canadian Methodist Magazine.—The first article in the September number of this magazine, "In the Spice Islands," by Sir J. Wedderburn, is a reprint from the Contemporary Review, and gives, with copious illustration, a very interesting account of the Dutch possessions in Java and its dependencies, which are seldom brought under the notice of Canadian readers. Lady Brassey's charming papers on her adventures in the West Indies suffer no diminution of interest, and the illustrations are unsurpassed specimens of the engraver's art. Miss May Tweedy, an accomplished young lady of Nova Scotia, contributes a very interesting article "Her Majesty's Mail," describing its remarkable development from small beginnings, with an account of what may be called the humors and curiosities of the Post-office. The Rev. T. W. Jolliffe recounts the strange story of the eccentric Cornish Vicar of Morwenstow. The Rev. J. McLean, of Blood Reserve, who makes a specialty of Indian topics, pays a just tribute to the celebrated missionary, Las Casas. J. Macdonald Oxley writes a graphic sketch of a prison service at Ottawa. A paper of permanent value is that by Cannon Farrar on the present aspects of the missionary problem. A resume of the progress of the Methodist reunion movement in England and other religious intelligence are given.

Harper's Monthly.—The September number of Harper has for its frontispiece a pleasing illustration by A. Parsons of Wordsworth's sonnet on "The River Duddon." The opening article is descriptive of "Riding in New York," the lively account being accompanied by characteristic woodcuts. Howard Pyle continues his account of the wild life and reckless exploits of the "Buccaneers and Marooners of the Spanish Main." R. Wheatley illustrates one of the questions of the day by a description of "Home Rule" in the Isle of Man. Under the title of "The South American Yankee," W. E. Curtis depicts the Chilians and their fine country. Very different are "The Sons of the Steepe," as introduced to us by Dr. Lansdell. Still another variety of humanity is presented to our notice by Mrs. Davis in her continuation of "Here and there in the South." The serial stories "Narka" by Miss O'Mears and "April Hopes" by W. D. Howells are certainly not diminishing in interest, and the number is especially rich in lively short tales. The editorial miscellanies are as usual a most important and pleasing feature in this foremost of American magazines.

THE ANNEXATION PRESS.

The Tricks of the Globe, Mail and News Special Reports.

The reports in the Toronto papers of the Detroit Commercial Union meeting on Saturday night illustrated a new phase of modern journalism and one that will not commend the newspaper advocates of annexation to the Canadian people. Here was a meeting to be held in a large and important centre, to discuss a subject of the deepest interest to Canada, and which may have an important bearing on our future. Here was a city perhaps more deeply interested than any other part of Canada, because commercial union would destroy our manufacturing interests, our importing interests, our wholesale dealing interests, our banking interests very largely and cut us off from the trade of the whole of Western Ontario. Here were three papers, the Globe, the Mail, and the News, devoted to futrthering the cause of annexation and one paper, the World, devoted to upholding Canada and Canadian nationality. The World sent a representative to Detroit to report actually what occurred, from an unprejudiced point of view—and the World was the only paper that did.

How then did the other papers get their reports? Easily enough. The Detroit papers issue Sunday editions. The Mail took the Sunday Free Press in one hand and a pair of scissors in the other. A couple of vigorous "snips" and the report was ready. For proof compare the two papers.

They made one change though. They marked out from among the distinguished persons present at the meeting the name of C. W. Bunting. And, by the way, they cut out the greater part of Prof. Goldwin Smith's Annexation talk.

The fact that the Free Press report was written from an American standpoint made no difference to the Mail. Why should it? Is not the Mail an American paper? Why then should it not publish an American report?

The News also went to The Detroit Sunday Free Press. It cut out Mr. Bunting's name, as in duty bound in Prof. Goldwin Smith's address, shortened the speech slightly and let 'er go. Compared the reports in yesterday's Mail and News just for the fun of the thing. Note also. The News report is marked "special." Of course it was," special by scissors and pastepot" to the minor Toronto American organ. Why not? Is not a Detroit American report good enough for a Toronto American paper?

The Globe worked the thing a little differently. The public must understand that Mr. William's speeches are printed before they are delivered. The Dun, Wiman mercantile agency has a big printing office in New York. Mr. Wiman writes his speech, and has it put in type in advance. The Globe, of course, received a copy and gave it large space, several columns in fact. From that out, it used the Free Press report even admitting Prof. Goldwin Smith's annexation theories. Compare the last two speeches in the Globe with the Mail and News.—Toronto World.

OTONABEE.

Disastrous Fire.—A fire occured on Monday evening on the premises of Wm. Leary, Otonabee. The fire broke out in the afternoon in the barn containing this season's crops. From this it spread to the house and other barns, totally destroying them and all the grain and implements. One of Mr. Leary's daughters would have been consumed in the flames but for the presence of mind of Mr. D. Garvey. Miss Leary was going up stairs to try and save some things when the roof broke in. Mr. Garvey seeing the danger, rushed up stairs and got her out before she was seriously hurt. Mr. Wm. Leary is at present in Michigan. His loss will amount to about $2,500, of which 1,000 is covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have been caused by lightning, as there was a thunderstorm in the vicinity and there were no fires around the place.

PORT HOPE.

Died in the Car.—At the Grand Trunk train approached Port Hope on Tuesday night a Frenchman who, with his brother, was travelling from Chicago to their father's home at St. Geomain, Quebec, expired in the car. He was unwell when he started and the fatigue was too much for him. He was taken into the station and a coffin was procured. The next train took the dead man and the brother east.

Search for a Sister.—On Tuesday Alban Jones, who works at Port Britain, received a letter from his parents in Shropshire, England, asking about his sister, who, they said, had sailed for Canada in June, intending to meet her brother in Port Hope. Jones has not seen her and did not know she had sailed. The sister's name is Emma Jones. He has written to learn on what steamer she took passage. Meanwhile he would be grateful for any information that will assist him in his search for his sister.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Well," Jim continued, "she began by abusing Bracknell—said he was a drunkard and a spendthrift, and that he ill treated her, and I don't know what all. Fancy a woman speaking about her husband like that!"

Evidently this was a new and distasteful experience to Jim. "Perhaps it was true, though," I suggested.

"If it was, she ought to have been the last person to say so," returned that hard hearted Jim. "But, between ourselves, I don't believe it was true. She has told me untruths before now, and why shouldn't she tell them again? I tried to stop her; but it wasn't a bit of good. She went on about her marriage having been a mistake, and about her having been drawn into it and having repented when it was too late, and so forth. Do you suppose she says that sort of thing to everybody?"

I replied that I really didn't know; but that probably she endeavored to suit her conversation to her auditor.

"Her conversation didn't suit me, at all events," returned Jim, emphatically. And then he told me how Bracknell had begged his pardon in a very frank and manly way for the wrong that he had done him six years before.

"I went to call at Portman square the next day," he continued. "Poor old Lord Staines was always kind to me when I was a boy, and I think it amused him to hear all about my adventures. He wanted to know whether I had seen little Sunning yet, and began to brag about the boy and his pluck and his beauty very much as he used to brag about Bracknell long ago. Poor old fellow! It was rather sad to hear him. He said, 'I hope you and Bracknell have made it up,' and when I told him that we had, he muttered, 'That's right—that's right. Old friends oughtn't to quarrel about a woman. Women aren't worth quarreling about.' After which he pushed his chair back and made a little bow to Lady Mildred. 'I don't mean you, my dear,' he said; 'you're worth your weight in gold, as everybody knows.' I remember your mother used always to be telling me that Lady Mildred was perfection, but somehow I never noticed in those days how pretty she was. I suppose I had only eyes for one person then. Ah! well, times are changed. I'd very much rather talk to Lady Mildred than to Lady Bracknell now. I had a long chat with her while her father dozed over the newspaper. It was pleasant to find that she hadn't forgotten me at all, though she said she would hardly have known me with my beard, which she didn't consider an improvement."

"Is that why you have shaved it off?" I inquired; for indeed Jim's long thin face had been deprived of that ornament.

"Oh, well, one doesn't want to look more like a backwoodsman than one can help, you know," he answered. "As I was saying, Lady Mildred and I had a good talk and discussed you all, and enjoyed ourselves very much, until one of Lady Bracknell's mashers came in and interrupted us. A fellow called Beauchamp; do you know anything of him?"

"Alfred Beauchamp," I replied, "is a young man whom everybody knows something about, by reason of his being quite in the front rank of eligible bachelors. His rent roll is said to exceed £40,000 a year; also he has coal mines, which, I believe, are expected to go on increasing in value. He is the only surviving son of the late Lady Staines' brother, and in the event of his dying without issue, the whole of his property would pass to Bracknell. As it would be dangerous to count upon his doing anything so obliging as that, the family have decided to marry him to Lady Mildred; only I imagine they haven't ventured to tell him so, because, of course, he is his own master, and he might insist upon his right to choose a wife for himself. Did Lady Mildred receive him well?"

"I don't know what you call receiving him well," answered Jim, looking a little displeased. "She was civil to him, but I didn't stay long after he came in. I must say he struck me as being rather a young fool and certainly not good enough for her. Do you suppose that she wants to marry him?"

"Lady Mildred is a dutiful daughter," I replied, "and Lord Staines is notoriously in embarrassed circumstances I can't say for certain what she may want, but I think I can form a pretty shrewd guess at what she will have to do. She is not so very much to be pitied, after all. There are very few girls in London who would refuse Alfred Beauchamp, I can tell you."

"Ah, you're just what you used to be!" exclaimed Jim, impatiently. "Why should you always take such a delight in representing that everybody is selfish and sordid?"

I pointed out that I had made no such general arraignment, and that so far as Lady Mildred was concerned, I had meant to imply that, if she married her cousin, she would probably do so from motives of filial and disinterested affection; but Jim did not seem disposed to listen to me.

"I dare say you know more about it than I do," he interrupted. "Anyhow, it's no business of mine."

I did not tell him that I had reason to doubt whether poor Lady Mildred would be happy with Beauchamp. My mother still maintained that the girl's heart had been given past recalling to Jim; but it would have been a pity to hint at such a state of things; because he was evidently a little smitten with her, and it was quite certain that she could not now accept him, whether he wore a beard or not. So I agreed with him that these projected marriages in high life did not concern humble individuals like ourselves, and suggested, by way of changing the subject, that we should drive up to Lord's to see the Eton and Harrow match, as we had previously arranged to do.

Jim and I threaded our way, grumbling, through the deep fringe of spectators, whose persons and vehicles effectually prevented us from catching a glimpse of the game, and, having been provided with tickets by a member, were about to turn these to account when we were arrested by hearing our names called out a high, clear voice, which was familiar both of us. It was the open carriage in which she was sitting, surrounded, as usual, by fashionable youths, Lady Bracknell beckoned us to approach, and we could not do otherwise than obey her orders. Her ladyship was clad in Eton blue from the crown of her head to the sole of her foot, and very becoming the color was to her. She attacked Jim at once.

"Come and talk to me," she said; "I have a thousand things to ask you. You don't want to look at that stupid cricket, do you?"

Jim, with a self assertion for which I should not have given him credit, replied, "Well, I came here for that purpose." But probably the reluctance of the fly acts as an agreeable stimulus upon the spider.

"You shall go and look at it presently," Hilda said, and signed to him to get in the carriage beside her.

So I left them together and strolled on, feeling truly sorry for poor Jim, because I am sure that it must be a most unpleasant thing to be obliged to talk to a woman with whom you have once been madly in love and whom you love no longer.

I had not proceeded very far before I came upon the Staines party—old Lord Staines lying back in his carriage, propped up by cushions which kept slipping down and demanded careful watching on the part of Lady Mildred; little Lord Sunning, standing upon his grandfather's knee to get a better view of the game; and Alfred Beauchamp, leaning over the carriage door and blowing cigarette smoke into his cousin's face.

I stopped to speak to them, and Lord Staines said, "So your friend Leigh is back again at last, is he?—back at last, eh? Stupid fellow! if he had stayed at home, he'd have got over his disappointment sooner and thanked Heaven for it. I see more than that young woman fancies—more than she fancies by a long way."

The old gentleman had contracted a disquieting habit of thinking aloud. He went on muttering to himself now, and I dare say that if his remarks had been audible, they would have been found to be uncomplimentary to his daughter-in-law, whom he detested; but who, nevertheless, had reduced him to a state of tolerably complete subjection. Lady Mildred looked a little nervous, I thought, and went on talking very fast to Beauchamp, a fair complexioned young man, whose conversational powers were not brilliant, yet who was by no means such a fool as Jim had hastily assumed him to be. It struck me that he was bringing his mind to bear upon the thought that it might be a good thing if he were to marry his cousin and that he was succeeding very fairly well.

(To be Continued.)

LINCOLN AS AN ORATOR.

His Unusual Power of "Putting Things." How He Acquired It.

More interesting, however, than the experiences of those who listened to him are the comments of Lincoln himself on the methods by which he acquired his powers as an orator. A clergyman who was among his auditors on one of these occasions has recorded the following as among his statements in a conversation he held with him in a railroad car:

"'Ah! that reminds me,' he said, 'of a most extraordinary circumstance which occurred in New Haven the other day. They told me that the professor of rhetoric in Yale college—a very learned man, isn't he? 'Yes, sir, and a very fine critic too.' 'Well, I suppose so; he ought to be at any rate—they told me that he came to hear me, and took notes of my speech, and gave a lecture on it to his class the next day; and, not satisfied with that, he followed me up to Meriden the next evening, and heard me again for the same purpose. Now, if this is so, it is to my mind very extraordinary. I have been sufficiently astonished at my success in the west. It has been most unexpected. But I had no thought of any marked success at the east and, least of all, that I should draw out such commendations from literary and learned men!'

"'That suggests, Mr. Lincoln, an inquiry which has several times been upon my lips during this conversation. I want very much to know how you got this unusual power of "putting things." It must have been a matter of education. No man has it by nature alone. What has your education been?'

"'Well, as to education, the newspapers are correct—I never went to school more than six months in my life. But, as you say, this must be a product of culture in some form. I have been putting the question you ask me to myself while you have been talking. I say this, that among my earliest recollections, I remember how, when a mere child, I used to get irritated when anybody talked to me in a way I could not understand. I don't think I ever got angry at anything else in my life. But that always disturbed my temper, and has ever since. I can remember going to my little bedroom, after hearing the neighbors talk of an evening with my father, and spending no small part of the night walking up and down, and trying to make out what was the exact meaning of some of their, to me, dark sayings. I could not sleep, though I often tried to, when I got on such a hunt after an idea, until I had caught it; and when I thought I had got it, I was not satisfied, until I had repeated it over and over, until I had put it in language plain enough, as I thought, for any boy I knew to comprehend. This was a kind of passion with me, and it has stuck by me, for I am never easy now, when I am handling a thought, till I have bounded it north and bounded it south and bounded it east and bounded it west. Perhaps that accounts for the characteristic you observe in my speeches, though I never put the two things together before.'—The Rev. J. P. Gulliver in N. Y. Independent, Sept. 1, 1864."

It must be borne in mind that the report of the foregoing conversation was not written until more than four years after it took place. While the main facts and ideas are doubtless given with reasonable fidelity, anything like verbal accuracy in recording Mr. Lincoln's phraseology is not to be presumed.—The Century.

SILVER CUPS AND MEDALS RAKED IN BY THE PETERBOROUGHS.

Baseball and Lacrosse Matches at Lindsay—Peterborough Wins a Pile—A Dispute in the Baseball Game.

Teams representing the lacrosse and baseball clubs of Peterborough left town on Wednesday accompanied by about a hundred excursionists bound for Lindsay. It was Lindsay's civic holiday and a big picnic under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church, of Lindsay, was the principal feature of the day's sport.

The Riverside Lacrosse Club was represented as follows:—McCabe, goal; Rose, point; Meagher, cover point, Halpin, Eaton and J. Meagher, defense; Larone, centre; Phelan, Begley and Squires, home; Nell, outside home; Duncan, inside home. The lacrosse match Y. M. C. A's. against the Riversides, for a handsome silver cup, was played in the forenoon. The result was a foregone conclusion. The Riversides won easily, shutting out the Y. M. A. A's. Four—nothing was the record.

In the afternoon all kinds of athletic sports was carried on. Rose, Moore and Squires, won several medals of different kinds in the various contests.

The chief interest centred in the baseball match between the Lindsays and Peterboroughs. Peterborough went up with a strong nine, considering that there was a valuable piece of silver to be won.

The teams took their positions as follows:

LINDSAY.—McAdams, 1b; McCrimmon, 2b; Bates, c; Robinson, l.f; Little, p; Sisson, s.s; Needler, r.f; Hungerford, c.f.

PETERBOROUGH.—Landy, c; Metheral, 1b; Fitzgerald, p; Callaghan, 2d; Brennan, c.f; Galley, 3b; Moore, l.f; Kincaid, s.s; Squires, r.f.

At first the prospects looked decidedly in favor of Lindsay. At the end of the third innings they scored 7 to Peterborough's 2, and at the end of the fifth innings the score stood 9-3. The play was good all round. Bates and Little, as usual, did good service for their team, and McAdams was sharp on 1st base. Dr. Brennan nearly "knocked the kivver off" every time he took the bat. Landy caught well and did good batting. Both Galley and Fitzgerald took a turn in the box.

After the fifth innings Peterboroug girded themselves and boosted their score. 3-0, 2-0, 2-0, was how it went in the 6th, 7th and 8th innings. In the ninth innings Lindsay succeeded in getting a run, but a disturbance occurred owing to the claming of a "blocked" ball. It was not allowed by the umpire. The scores stood even with an innings in Peterborough's favor. The latter went to the bat but the Lindsays would no go into the field. The umpire therefore declared the game Peterborough's by a score of 9-0.

The score by innings as as follows:—

Peterborough	0	1	1	1	0	3	2	2	-	—10
Lindsay	1	0	2	0	2	0	0	0	1	—10

Mr. H. Long, Peterborough, acted as umpire.

On arriving home the lacross and baseball clubs and their numerous friends had a general jubilation. Piper Hayes, who was up to Lindsay giving the people there a lilt with the pipes, led the procesh, followed by silver cups, medals, and baseball and lacrosse sticks. After the enthusiasm had got run down a little the boys all went home.

NOTES.

The silver cups are both handsome ones. They are of a similar design, with the exception that the baseball cup is supported with golden clubs, and the other is supported with sticks with gold netting. They are on exhibition at Mr. Clarke's clothing store.

Mr. T. McNaughton, of Peterborough, gave an exhibition of fancy club swinging, which was well received.

GLADSTONE can not be more pleased over his recent victories than the persons who have bought their boots from R. J. KIDD.

Fall Fairs.

The following dates of autumn exhibitions have been announced:—

Central Exhibition, at Peterborough, Oct. 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th.

East Peterborough, at Norwood, Oct. 11th and 12th.

Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield, at Lakefield, Sept. 29th and 30th.

Provincial Exibition, at Ottawa, Sept. 19th to 24th.

East Durham and Cavan, at Millbrook, Sept. 26th and 27th.

Industrial and Dominion, at Toronto, Sept. 5th to 17th.

Bay of Quinte, at Belleville, Sept. 20th to 23rd.

South Monaghan, at Centreville, on Oct. 11th and 12th.

Port Hope's Doings.

A good many citizens to-day expressed surprise that the Port Hope Mayor and others were in town on the mission of trying to get the Lock Works to move to Port Hope. One gentleman was quite annoyed. "They're acting in a sneaking manner," said he, "and I wonder that these men who have come up here would consent to such meanness. Why don't they have some enterprise of their own and build up factories themselves?"

Horses.

Fanny B. was shipped to Ottawa to-day Mr. Daly says that she was hardly fast enough for the company in this district, but he thinks he has something now that won't let the dust be thrown in his eyes very bad. The new animal is a well made bay gelding.

TURNBULL has just received an Immense Shipment of Fall Dress Goods. The Value and Styles are right. Inspection Invited.

POLICE COURT.

SCOTT ACT.

THURSDAY, Sept. 1.—W. Clancy, W. Snowden and J. E. McIntyre pleaded guilty to charges of infractions of the Scott Act, preferred by inspector Cochrane, and fines of $50 and costs were imposed in each case.

DISORDERLY.

J. Wilson and D. Flemming were up on a charge of having been disorderly on Saturday night on Hunter street. Flemming was found guilty and fined $5 and costs.

THE HORSE DICKER.

The second act in the horse dicker drama was played in the court room this morning. "Alec." McDonald, who was absent when arraigned a few days ago, was present to take his part. Wm. Cummings preferred a charge of assault against Mrs. McDonald and Alec. The circumstances of the case were gone into, from the time of the dicker till the coup d'etat on Hunter street. The plaintiff said that he was to take the horse if the parties failed to make three weekly payments of $4 a week. They had the horse 7 weeks and had paid $16. He had previously rented the horse at $3 and $2.50 a week. Mrs. McDonald disputed the allegation that Cummings was to have the horse if they failed in making the payments. Nothing was said about that, she said, and "Alec." said so too. "Alec." is 16 years of age. When asked if he hit Cummings on Hunter street, he said, "Yes, Sir, I did." "Hit him twice?" "I hit him two or three times." "Mother assist you?" "I didn't want any assistance." (Laughter at Cumming's expense.)

Mr. O'MEARA, who conducted the case in behalf of the defendants, said he didn't think the bargain was as Cummings said. Suppose the defendants paid $35 and missed a payment he could take the horse.

CUMMINGS—That was the bargain we made.

Mr. O'MEARA—Well, I'll give you credit for making a better bargin than Dave Conroy, even though you are a Salvation Army man.

His WORSHIP said that Mrs. McDonald would only have to pay the other $5 and take the horse.

Mrs. McDONALD was not willing, when the Magistrate made a tentative assay to square up the quarrel, to pay for the horse. She would rather Cummings would give back the $16 and take his horse. She would allow nothing for the use of the horse for the seven weeks.

His WORSHIP then gave judgment on the assault case. The case of Mrs. McDonald was dismissed, as it was not proved she assaulted the defendant. "Alec." was fined $2 and costs.

The curtain has fallen, but the boys say "there's another act." Cummings has got $16 and Mrs. McDonald has the horse. The question of ownership is yet to be decided.

Canoe Cruising.

Montreal Sport, of Aug. 30th, has the following account of a cruise by Mr. D. English, brother of Mr. Wm. English, of Peterborough, and Mr. W. J. White, son of Mr. Richard White and nephew of the Hon. Thos. White:—"Canada ought to be the home of canoe cruising, and while to the man leaving business for a few weeks' vacation, we cannot recommend a long paddle, which has its own peculiar hardships and work, it is the best thing in the world for those who need open air exercise rather than a complete rest from work. Nowhere in the world is there better cruising water than on the St. Lawrence from Kingston down, and above that where can canoeing be enjoyed better than on Rice Lake and the Otonabee River, and the lakes in Peterborough county? There has been really but little attempt by eastern canoeists to navigate these waters. One of the few instances is under notice when W. J. White, of Busteed & White, advocates, Montreal, and D. English, of Sport, made the trip from Peterborough to Brockville, a distance of over 200 miles, in an open canoe 16 feet long, and carried with them a complete camp outfit and photograph apparatus weighing 300 lbs. The distance was made in eleven days, three of which were lost by delays and head winds and rain. This performance was done without map or instrument of any kind, and considering that the trip occupied only eleven days, and that only eighteen miles was got over by the use of the sail, it is an exceedingly meritorious one. The average paddling per day was 23 miles, and even in this calculation, the loss of time in paddling into the bays, which abound in the district, is not considered."

THE NAPOLEON OF FINANCE.

John S. Ives Charged with Swindling Railway Stockholders.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Wall street's latest "Napoleon of finance" must now answer a more serious charge than making away with cash books and ledgers. It is that of deliberately swindling the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton stockholders out of $9,000,000. The United States courts have been called upon to decree that this big sum, issued by Ives as "preferred stock" of the road when he and his partners had control, shall be totally wiped out of existence as fraudulent. Wall street already holds most of the stock as collateral for money loaned to Ives & Co. If the allegations in the case are true consternation will follow. Geo. J. Bland, of this city, who owns 1,000 shares of stock in the road, sues in the United States Circuit Court for an injunction restraining Messrs. Ives, Stayner and Doremus, and all who hold the preferred stock as collateral for loans to Ives & Co., as well as W. N. Cromwell, Ives' assignee, "from taking any measure or proceeding whatever to validate or confirm the pretended certificates of preferred stock," and from making the same "of any force whatever against the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railway or its stockholders." The motion is set down for hearing in this city to-morrow at 11 a. m. But, "there appearing to be danger of irreparable injury from delay," as Mr. Bland's petition sets forth, a temporary injunction was promptly obtained and served on all the parties named as defendants yesterday.

OUTRAGES BY MOONLIGHTERS.

Attacks on Farmers' Houses at Killarney and Loughrea.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—An attack was made by moonlighters last night upon the house of a landlord named Orpen at Killarney and several shots were fired through the windows. The attacking party withdrew after firing two volleys, and none of them has yet been arrested. The house of a farmer named Donahue, living near Loughrea, was also visited last night and the assailants, after firing into the building, set fire to it and burned it to the ground. It is said by Donahue that his refusal to take part in the "plan of campaign" was the cause of the action of the moonlighters, he having been repeatedly threatened with all sorts of calamities as penalties for his independent course. As in the case of Orpen no arrests were made, but Donahue says he can identify some of his visitors, and the police are after them.

A PROCLAIMED MEETING.

A Hot Protest from Mr. Dillon—Mr. Balfour's Reply.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—In the House of Commons this evening Mr. Dillon moved to adjourn, in order to direct attention to the proclamation of a meeting announced to be held at Clare. The proposed meeting, he said, was a perfectly legitimate one, and the people would insist upon holding it. Any disorder or bloodshed that followed would be on the head of the Government. The rack-renting, extermination, ruffianly landlords who feared public opinion wanted bloodshed. He would tell them that the meeting would be held whether there was bloodshed or not.

Mr. Balfour said he feared that the speech of Mr. Dillon would not fail to have the evil effect of inflaming the people. In proclaiming the Clare meeting the Government had only followed the example of Earl Spencer, who had invariably suppressed public meetings, whenever he thought they would be likely to lead to disturbance. The district in which this meeting was announced to be held was the most disturbed district in Ireland, where by far the largest proportion of agrarian crime was committed. As for the responsibility for what might happen, if the proclamation should be defied that would not rest upon the Government, which was acting through a desire to preserve the peace, but upon those who advised the people to resist the law.

Mr. Healy asked the House to consider what the proclamation meant. He said it meant the stopping of the people's utterance when their voices should be plainly heard. The people's only chance during the coming winter of getting fair play lay in their boldly assembling in public.

Mr. E. Robertson, Liberal, read Justice Stephen's definition of an unlawful assembly and contended that a League meeting did not come within that definition.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor said he considered that the proclamation simply meant the Government had proclaimed war against the Irish people.

The motion to adjourn was rejected by 97 to 61.

MELON THIEVES.—Somewhere in the neighborhood of 300 water melons have been stolen from gardens in and around the village during the past couple of weeks. Mr. Oliver Buck had 20 stolen in one night. Something should be done to prevent this wholesale robbery of gardens.

THRESHING MACHINE ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday, while Mr. John Stewart, jr., son of Mr. Robert Stewart, of Asphodel, was assisting in the removal of some obstruction from the back part of the cylinder of a threshing machine, his right hand and wrist were caught and badly mangled. The arm was amputated immediately above the wrist by Dr. Pottierew, assisted by Dr. Ford. The patient is doing well so far.

TWO MORE.—Cassie McCann and Andrew McClelland, who wrote here for third class certificates, have been awarded the same since the publication of the returns. These, with May Campbell's third added, makes the total 17. Appeals to have papers re-examined have been made in behalf of five others. These five got a larger number of marks on the total than was required, but failed to get the required minimum in one or two subjects.—Register.

Believing that the weapon was unloaded, he proceeded with his experiment, when the piece went off, the heavy charge of shot in one of the barrls dangerously wounding two of his companions. One of them, a son of Mr. Dessaint, M. P. for the county, was struck full in the breast; but it is believed that he will recover unless the lungs have been injured. STATE FINANCES.

News comes from Indianopolis that the State of Indiana is in a position of very serious financial embarrassment. There is no money in the Treasury, there is none coming in to meet the expenditure of the next few months, and the credit of the State does not seem good enough to enable it to borrow. This is not surprising, for many of the States have before now been unable or unwilling to meet their engagements, and so many of them have repudiated their promises to repay borrowed money that it is surprising that any capitalist will lend on such doubtful security.

It is right that we should feel regret for the difficulties and troubles of our neighbours, but that is no reason why we should not at the same time draw from them a lesson for ourselves. Certainly we may learn to be more thankful for our own lot, and to cease from the expressions of discontent with our country and envy of the supposed advantages of another that are too often heard in Canada. We do not hear of any of our Provinces being obliged to suspend payment because the treasury is empty, nor repudiating just debts, nor having insufficient credit to borrow money. We do not even have to pay taxes to the Provincial treasury for local expenditures, as in the United States, for we have only to pay to the Central Government and to the municipality, while our neighbours have to pay the State tax as well. If our farmers had the tax-gatherer coming round to collect for the Province so much in the dollar on the assessed value of their farms as a direct tax, they would then find that they have been comparatively lightly burdened. With such advantages it is sinful to be grumbling at our lot, and unpatriotic to pretend that we are worse off than our neighbours.

We may carry our lesson a little further for our own guidance and make up our minds that, while treating our neighbours in the United States with friendliness and cordiality, we will not be so imprudent as to link ourselves with them, with their looser morality and heavier burdens. At the same time we have no reason to give ourselves airs of superiority, for we have our own failings, our ungrateful want of appreciation of our own good fortune, groundless envy of others, and unpatriotic depreciation of our country, such as one does not hear in the the United States.

The reports that come from Washington appear to support our warning that the British and Canadian members of the Joint Fishery Commission should take care that the United States members have proper authority. There seems to be a doubt whether they have been regularly appointed. Our Commissioners should not enter upon any negotiations untill their colleagues from the United States show unmistakable credentials. We do not wish Congress to learn the terms we are ready to accept and then calmly say that the proceedings are invalid because the supposed representatives of the United States are only private friends of Mr. Cleveland with no official authority. Any bargaining should be conducted on equal terms, and if necessary should be postponed till Congress meets in a few months. We have been bit once.

The Prince Edward Islanders are told by a fomenter of discontent that they have a market to the south of them from which they are now practically excluded. On the south of Prince Edward Island are Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, neither of which exclude the Islanders from their markets. What is the difficulty? Is another tunnel wanted southward?

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. TRUST IN THE FATHER.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. R. S. M'ARTHUR, D. D.

Lesson X of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Sept. 4. Text of the Lesson, Matt. vi, 24-34. Golden Text, I Peter v, 7.

V. 24. No man, etc.—It is important to emphasize the idea, that the service is that of a slave, because this fact removes all ground of doubt as to whether a man can really serve two masters. A slave must give perfect obedience; if he had two masters his service would be divided. The aim here is to enforce the duty of singleness of affection toward God. Whatever claims our supreme love is our master; no man can really be a slave to two distinct masters or to two conflicting interests. He will hate, etc.—Hate here, as often in Scripture, signifies to love less; in this sense Jacob loved Rachel, but he hated Leah; in this sense God says, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. He cannot serve God, etc.—He who gives his heart to the world robs God; at the bottom of every man's life we see that he has but one controlling purpose, one dominating aim. Mammon.—This is an Aramaic word; it is applied to wealth or riches, but originally it referred to trust or confidence; it is properly used for wealth when it is a ground of hope or trust, Markx, 34. Some have said that it is the name of a Syrian god which was an object of worship, but this is extremely doubtful. Milton represents Mammon as one of the lost spirits, and has thus done much to give the idea that he was an object of worsh p by the Syrians, as Plutus was in the Greek mythology. Under this name riches are personified and placed in opposition to God. Christ was not opposed to earthly wealth: the beggar Lazarus is represented in paradise as being in the bosom of Abraham the rich man. But Christ did oppose giving wealth or anything else the place that belongs to God alone.

V. 25. Therefore I say unto you.—This is very emphatic. I, your authoritative teacher. Take no thought, etc.—The word thought has changed its meaning since our common version was made; both Bacon and Shakespeare use it in the sense of undue solicitude. The meaning here is, be not anxiously careful. Christ does not mean to rebuke industry and to put a premium on indolence. Is not the life, etc.—Our great teacher reasons from the greater to the less. Shall not the giver of life also give appropriate supplies? Shall not the creator of the body clothe and support it? Certainly life is more than food. The interrogation here is a strong form of affirmation.

V. 26. Behold the fowls of the air.—We now come to a passage of great literary beauty; it has received the hearty admiration of the most careful critics, and it is as spiritually forceful as it is rhetorically beautiful. Following the line of reasoning found in the previous verse, Christ draws an argument from God's care for all his creatures. This course of reasoning goes to the end of the thirtieth verse.

In the twenty-sixth verse the argument finds its confirmation in God's supply of food for fowls or birds. The word fowl we now restrict to edible birds, but in old English the word was applied to birds in general. Here it stands for a Greek word which means winged or flying creatures. In Luke xii, 24, we have the word "ravens." Doubtless it is intended here to include various kinds of birds. Shall God feed them and not you? Barns—literally, store houses; although birds neither sow nor reap, yet they build nests and seek for food. They follow their instincts. So men are to do their duty, but they must guard against undue anxiety.

V. 27. Which of you?—The question here asked implies a strong negation. The weakness and helplessness of man are here emphasized; on that account it becomes him as well as the birds to trust God. Stature.—This word in Greek primarily means age; its secondary meaning is stature. If we use the word here in that sense the course of reasoning is this: you cannot add to your height; you are entirely dependent upon God for that; why then distrust your heavenly Father about food? In John ix, 21, 23, the word is used in speaking of the age of the blind man, and in Hebrews xi, 11, it is used of the age of Sarah. Perhaps here it ought to be translated age; a cubit is the measure of the forearm from the elbow to the tip of the middle finger, and, though a variable quantity, is usually regarded as eighteen inches. No doubt one may add something to his height by obedience to laws of health, but we are disposed to think that the figure here is that of life as a journey; with that idea in mind the addition of a cubit would be insignificant, would be "that thing which is least." If then we cannot do that which is least, why have fretting care about that which is greater? It is the part alike of wisdom and piety to trust God fully.

V. 28. Our Lord here passes from the food of birds to the growth of the lilies; and the argument increases in strength as he goes from the animal to the vegetable creation. Consider—i. e., regard attentively; this is an intensive compound of the verb learn, learn thoroughly. The lily was a common flower in Palestine, found in various colors, red, orange and yellow; its beauty and fragrance are celebrated in Solomon's Song ii, 1, 16; v, 13; vi, 2, 3. Christ often saw these and other flowers when as a boy he climbed the hills in the midst of which Nazareth lay. Toiling and spinning may refer to work in general, though they specifically suggest the treatment to which flax was subjected to furnish clothing for man.

V. 29. Solomon in all his glory. There is here probably an allusion to Solomon's enforcing moral truth by figurative illustration. Christ speaks thus authoritatively because of the seeming improbability of the statement. Solomon and his reign were typical of the splendor of an Asiatic monarch. Christ loved beauty; there is no piety in ugliness as such. Christ knew history; with the glory of Solomon's reign he was familiar. But Solomon's splendor fades into insignificance when compared with the beauty of the humblest flower; at the pinnacle of his greatness his glory is surpassed by the beauty and delicacy of one of these. This is very striking. Solomon arrayed—that is, drawn about, or cast around, with clothing—does not reach in splendor, not all the flowers collectively, but even one lily; the thought of one flower as contrasted with all his glory is to be emphasized. Why, then, doubt God? This is our Lord's method of reasoning.

V. 30. Grass—herbage of all kinds. "If" here does not suggest doubt; it is equivalent to since; the argument is from the less to the greater, and the interrogative form adds to its force. The brief existence of grass is suggested by the words today—to-morrow; often a strong south wind withers the grass in Palestine in one day. Oven.—One kind of oven was made of earth and shaped like a pitcher; in its open top a fire was made, and baking was done by laying a paste of flour and water on the outside when it was sufficiently heated. Sometimes ovens were made by digging into the ground and lining the cavity with cement. Dried grass, sticks, and indeed anything that would burn, were used as fuel, owing to the scarcity of wood.

verse is unworthy of God's children. Gentiles.—All who are not Jews. The heathen live for today; they are without hope, without God; they have, therefore, nothing else for which to live than earthly things; the same thing is true of many who profess and call themselves Christians. They live for what they can eat and see; but it should not be so with God's true children, they should not seek for these things with solicitude and importunity, as the word here implies; there is something better to live for. As we see by v. 33, Christ's teachings are not wholly negative as given in the preceding verses; with this verse we come to the positive side. We now see what we ought to seek. The kingdom of God.—This is to be sought first in time and first in importance. Righteousness here is conformity to God's will. Seeking this first, we seek earthly objects aright. The thirty-fourth verse seems to be a summary of the teaching already given. The former exhortation is repeated with additional reason. Undue care for to-morrow unfits for the duties of today.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. The man who gives any creature the first place in his heart is an idolater. That place belongs to God. Every idol should be dethroned that Christ may be enthroned.

2. Having done our whole duty, we are to depend on God for food and raiment and all spiritual blessings.

3. Seek first in time and in importance the kingdom of God; then both worlds will be yours. He who seeks only this world loses it in its best meaning, and heaven also.—Sunday School World.

A Valuable Literary Suggestion.

It seems to me that I never received a more valuable suggestion than was conveyed in a remark of the journalist from whom I have once quoted. He said: "It is unpardonable nonsense to use such phrases as 'the scene that followed was indescribable,' or 'the confusion defied description;' for there is nothing in the world that cannot be described. No scene ever defied description, or ever will; for if a writer has eyes he can tell what he saw; if he cannot, he has no business with the pen."—F. R. Burton in The Writer.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

However, his attentions, if such they were, were soon interrupted. Little Sunning, who was rather a friend of mine, had clambered from his grandfather's knee on to my shoulder and had just dealt a resounding blow upon the top of my hat, by way of applause to a retiring batsman, when a vision of sky blue flitted before my eyes, and a high pitched voice (I forget whether I have mentioned that Hilda's voice had a metallic ring which no efforts on her part availed to soften) said: "You are a nice sort of a person to make appointments with, Mr. Beauchamp! May I ask whether you remember begging me to bring you here to-day! And are you aware that I kept the carriage waiting for you three-quarters of an hour!"

And then I heard Beauchamp murmuring excuses from the background. "By Jove! Lady Bracknell, I'm so awfully sorry. What an idiot I am! Can't think how I came to forget it!"

There was an indistinct rejoinder, followed by a gradual dying away of both voices, from which I concluded that her ladyship had taken the young man by the ear and led him off. Having persuaded Sunning that he would be more comfortable, and that I should be cooler, if he got up on to the box, and having thus regained the power of turning my head round, I perceived that Jim had taken Beauchamp's place and was conversing with Lady Mildred, whose eyes had grown perceptibly brighter during the last few minutes. She certainly looked very pretty in her white dress, and I could not wonder at the satisfaction which Jim obviously derived from gazing at her; but it was unlucky, to say the least of it, that he should have taken such a long time to discover her beauty. Six years before, when Alfred Beauchamp had had a father and an elder brother living, there might have been some hope for him; but his chance was now represented by a zero of a type so clear that one could only hope he might be enough of a reasonable being to see it. Reasonableness, however, was not his distinguishing characteristic.

Presently Bracknell made his way to the carriage and mounted the box beside his son. He took no notice of us, but hoisted the boy upon his knee, and the two became absorbed in contemplation of the game, the elder making occasional explanations to the younger which were listened to with interest and respect. I suppose paternal fondness must have been hereditary in the Henley family, for Bracknell was not one whit less foolishly devoted to his boy than his father had been to him in days of yore, and, to all appearance, was bent upon reproducing a system of treatment which had not been conspicuously successful in his own case. The child had Bracknell's dark hair and gray eyes. I could discern no resemblance to his mother in him, nor, in truth, did that strain of blood seem likely to infuse any fresh qualities of a valuable nature into the race.

While I was watching the representatives of three generations, Lady Bracknell and Beauchamp strolled by. The lady was talking with a good deal of animation, and the gentleman wore the air of one who is at once fascinated and puzzled. Bewilderment at the proceedings of Lady Bracknell was not, apparently, confined to him, for Lord Staines, following the pair with his eyes, muttered quite audibly:

"I do wonder what infernal mischief that woman is up to now! Is it only spite, or is it a plot? And if it's a plot, what the deuce is the object of it, you know?"

Bracknell looked down from the box and laughed. "Well, Maynard," said he, "why are you looking so solemn? Taking notes, as usual? It seems to me that you have all the elements of a sensational romance ready to your hand here. There are bound to be some strong situations before long, I should say, and you had better try to be on the spot when they come off."

"And what is the denouement to be?" I made so bold as to inquire.

"Oh, don't ask me," he returned. "I don't know; and, between you and me, I doubt very much whether anybody else does either. All I can see is that there will be a row soon."

"What's that you say?" broke in Lord Staines querulously. "Why should there be a row? nonsense about a row! I wish to Heaven, Bracknell, that you could induce your wife to let me manage my own affairs in my own way."

"I wish I could," returned Bracknell, with a shrug of his shoulders. "I wish I could induce her to let me manage my affairs in my own way. But I can't, you see."

CHAPTER IX.

If Lady Bracknell's motives for luring Beauchamp away from her sister-in-law's side were obscure to Lord Staines, they did not to a reflective person appear quite unfathomable. When only one life intervenes between your husband and a large property it must, no doubt, seem deplorable that that life should be supplemented by others, and I can well believe that to see Beauchamp married would have gone to Hilda's heart, even though he should select as his wife a member of her husband's family. It is true that she can hardly have hoped to keep him permanently single, but she may have taken into consideration that existence is precarious, and that young men addicted to field sports run frequent risks of breaking their necks. Add to this she did not love Lord Staines, while she detested Lady Mildred with the intensity of an impositor who has been found out, and you have an explanation of her conduct which is at least plausible. I don't say that it is the true explanation, because I cannot pretend to be able to follow all the tortuous workings of such a mind as Hilda's; but that the course which events subsequently took was premeditated and contrived by her in cold blood seems to me too violent an hypothesis. In any case there could be no question as to the fact that she had marked Beauchamp down as her prey, nor did she fail to capture him.

He surrendered unconditionally at the first blow, and spent the remainder of the London season upon his knees, metaphorically speaking. I used to meet him and his enchantress pretty frequently at balls and crushes, and always watched them with interest. Other people watched them too, making such spiteful, ironical, or condemnatory comments upon the proceedings of the pair as were prompted by their several dispositions and by the nature of the case; but by the persons who have been introduced into this history, it so chanced that they were little remarked. Lady Mildred, who was in constant attendance upon her father, went very seldom into society; Bracknell had of late years ceased to frequent the circles which, as a bachelor, he had so conspicuously adorned; and those of Jim's friends who had not forgotten him during his long absence belonged for the most part to his own sex, and were not in the habit of giving balls. Thus Lady Bracknell was able to carry out her designs unmolested; and as Beauchamp continued to pay visits to Portman square with unfailing regularity, any anxiety that Lord Staines may have felt on the day of the cricket match was probably soon allayed.

Sunning, to be sure, very nearly let the cat out of the bag one afternoon when Jim and I called at his grandfather's house. We found him and the old gentleman with a tea table between them, busily engaged in eating hot buttered toast. Lady Mildred was pouring out the tea, and Beauchamp, reclining in an arm chair, looked very much as if he was wondering how soon he might venture to go away.

"I do not think it is very dangerous," Lady Mildred was saying as we entered; and after she had shaken hands with us she appealed for support to Jim. "Mr. Leigh, do you think it is safe for such a mite as Sunning to ride in the Row with nobody but a groom to look after him? And he always makes the groom ride a hundred yards behind."

"From what I have seen of the equestrian performances in the Row, I don't think it is an over and above safe place for anybody to ride in," answered Jim, laughing.

"But seriously," persisted Lady Mildred, "I don't like to think of that child in the thick of such a crowd. He has one of those wicked little Shetland ponies, too, which might overpower him at any moment."

Sunning, with his mouth full of buttered toast, was understood to say that he would like to see the pony that could overpower him.

Lord Staines chuckled. "He can take care of himself—trust him! All the same, I think Bracknell might go out with the boy."

(To be Continued.)

Showed His Ignorance.

It is very difficult for the man who is not a tailor to estimate the number of stitches that go to the making of a coat. "How easily you earn your bread and butter!" said a business man to a journalist. "I am in my office nine hours a day, while you sit down at your desk, dash off a few anecdotes or fancies, and get well paid for them."

"Did it ever occur to you that my work is of the sort that is never done!" asked the newspaper man; "or that I never take one step or glance which I don't attempt to utilize!"

"Well, no; there seems to be something spontaneous about your work. You do it when you happen to feel like it; there's no grind about it."

"Oh, indeed! isn't there! My friend, I never see a stranger without wondering if his face or form will work into a story; I never hear a conversation without separating the wheat from the chaff, to use as material; I never see anything lovely in nature without longing to put it in words for other eyes to enjoy, through the medium of a printed page."

"Dear me, you do make a grin of it! but I don't believe that first class geniuses do, you know. They just sit down and write what comes to 'em; they don't grub like that."

"There's a curious resemblance on certain points between geniuses and newspaper men," said the other, musingly. "For instance, I'm perfectly certain that if a literary genius were present at this conversation he would mentally take down your remarks as a valuable illustration of the obtuseness of the human animal. And then he would print it—just as I shall!"—Youth's Companion.

Aroma of an Asafetida Desert.

Eight or ten miles of fair wheeling across the plain, through the isolated village of Mohammedabad, and the trail loses itself among the rank, dead stalks of the asafetida plant that here characterizes the vegetation of the broad, level sweep of plain. The day is cloudy, and with no trail visible, my compass has to be brought into requisition; though ofttimes finding it useful, it is the first time I have found this article to be really indispensable so far on the tour.

The atmosphere of an asafetida desert is among those things that can better be imagined than described; the aroma of the fetid gum is wafted to and fro and assails the nostrils in a manner quite the reverse of "Araby, the blest." The plant is a sturdy specimen among the annuals; its straight, upright stem is but three or four feet high, but often measuring four inches in diameter, and it not infrequently defies the blasts of the Khorassan winter and the upheaving thaws of spring, and preserves its upright position for a year after its death. The thick, dead stems and branching tops of last year's plants are seen by the thousands, sturdily holding their ground among the rank, young shoots of the new growth.—Thomas Stevens in Outing.

Wanted in "The Panhandle."

The northwest corner of Texas is called "The Panhandle," and there is a town there with the same name, and in the town a newspaper in which appears this notice: "Wanted, immediately, 100 single young women who are prepared to rough it for a time, to come to the Panhandle and marry our thrifty young men who have located on 640 acres of land and are now living in dugouts, tents and cabins. We can speak a good word for every one of the boys; they are all noble American citizens except one, and he is a little unfortunate in being the son of an English lord. Girls, this is a good chance. Besides this, married life will beat blessed singleness every time. In a few months' time the dugouts will be turned into cellars, and comfortable houses erected when the railroads bring in lumber."—New York Sun.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

"The wheat market has again been demoralized by a breakup in another wheat deal. Scarcely had the bad effects of the Chicago burst been dissipated than the California ring has broken. Large quantities of wheat both in England and on the continent have been thrown suddenly on the market, and have forced prices to a low ebb. Wheat statistics on the American continent are very favorable for higher prices. A further decrease in the visible supply is to be noted this week. For the past three weeks the decrease has been 3,117,000, a very remarkable showing for this time of year. During the corresponding three weeks of 1886 the increase was 4,546,000.

Cheese.

The dairy interests in England appear to have suffered even more than those in Canada during the past two months: a correspondent writing to the London Grocer says:—
